New York, Sept. 23.—The police of Newton, borough of Queens, last night arrested Johann Most, the anarchist, as a disorderly person. They suspected that he was going to conduct an anarchist meeting in a saloon in Corona, L. I. They also arrested Christina Fricke, who is said to run the saloon, on the charge of violating the liquor law and keeping a disorderly house.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

New York, Sept. 21.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Universal sorrow placed a calming hand on the rush and turmoil of the market place. Everything that could be conveniently postponed was put aside out of respect for the man whose life was devoted to developing the wonderful activity in all branches of trade and industry. Exchanges suspended operations for two days, and the distribution of merchandise was in many cases limited to immediate requirements. Mercantile payments continue prompt, but it was to be expected that bank exchanges would not show the customary heavy gains over previous years. At leading cities outside New York there was a gain of .8 per cent over 1900 and a loss of 7.0 from 1899. Yet prices were stronger, and there were many indications of great latent power that may be expected to appear as normal conditions return.

After two months of controversy at the steel mills, a settlement has been reached, although the terms are not entirely satisfactory to the Amalgamated association, and there is much complaint among the men regarding the conduct of the strike. Managers are confident that the outcome means no further interruption to work for a long period and there is hope of making up for much of the delay by operating overtime. In preparing for an exceptionally active year in 1902 some of the largest mills are to double their capacity. Factitious prices disappear with the prospect of full production, but it will be some time before immediate deliveries are made at last figures. Meanwhile the pig iron market revives at the assurance of heavy consumption, and southern furnaces are already asking higher quotations.

Forwarding of fall footwear to the west and south have about ceased with the advancing season, but producers are still busily engaged turning out goods for jobbers at eastern cities. Quotations for shoes are unchanged, though there is a general advance of 2½ to 5c on boots. Abundance of work in prospect has made operators more anxious to secure material, and the leather market averages about ½c higher.

Corn has met with another set back. After passing through the vicissitudes of heat and drouth, which curtailed the crop severely notwithstanding an unusually large acreage, it was subjected to the other extreme of temperature. How much injury was done by frost cannot yet be determined, but reports were sufficient to force prices to an exceptionally high point on Tuesday. It was not possible to retain all the advance and there was evidence of much manipulation during the movement. One result of inflated quotations was further reduction in exports from the Atlantic coast to 290,801 bu, against 1,518,820 a year ago, and 3,118,215 in 1899. Wheat is stronger with less speculative support and more actual cash demand. Shipments abroad continue heavy, despite much interruption during the past week, amounting to 4,033,455 bu, against 3,219,211 last year, and 3,242,764 two years ago.

Failures for the week numbered 157 in the United States, against 211 last year, and 26 in Canada against 33 last year.

ANNUAL STATEMENT.

American Board of Foreign Missions Stronger Financially.

Boston, Sept. 21.—The annual statement was made public yesterday of the fiscal year of the American board of foreign missions.

The total receipts for the year, applicable for current expenses, was $697,370; total expenditures, $717,081; the excess of expenditures over receipts, $19,710, which, added to the debt of a year ago, makes the present debt $182,341.

The receipts for the past year as compared with the previous year, show a gain in donations from church and individuals of $9,639; a shrinkage in receipts from the woman's boards of $16,118, and a shrinkage in legacies of $30,256.

A large legacy was expected during the year, but for good reasons the payment has been deferred for a few weeks. Had this been received it is stated that the board would have met its expenses and would have made a considerable reduction in the debt with which it began the year.

The board is said to be in a much stronger financial condition than a year ago, notwithstanding the increased debt.

HELD UP AND SHOT

Two Albion Women Roughly Used by Masked Robber.

ONE SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

No Trace of the Robber—In the Excitement Women Drove Across Railroad Tracks and Were Run Down by a Fast Freight.

Albion, Mich., Sept. 23.—Mrs. Chas. Davis, living six miles northeast of this city, was driving home from town Saturday night with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Charles Hancock, when a masked robber suddenly jumped from the bushes and seized the horse by the bits. He ordered Mrs. Davis to throw away her hand-bag, saying he would shoot her if she refused. Mrs. Davis did not comply with his demand, but reached for the whip instead, thinking that she could start the horse, which was a spirited animal, suddenly enough to jerk away from the man and thus escape. As she leaned forward the fellow shot her, the bullet taking effect in the neck and passing down into the body.

This all happened about a mile east of the city. Mrs. Hancock immediately took the reins, turned the horse around and drove back to town. When they reached the main street she turned the horse there to cross the Michigan Central tracks, when the buggy was struck by the west-bound fast freight. The lady driving was a stranger in the city, having just come from Iowa last Friday, and was not familiar with the exact location of the tracks. She was also very much frightened and bewildered.

The top was torn off from the buggy and the two women were thrown heavily upon the ground, Mrs. Davis, who was unconscious from the effects of the bullet wound, suffered a severe scalp wound, requiring several stitches. Mrs. Hancock received only slight injuries.

The horse ran with the remainder of the buggy five or six miles into the country, where it was caught.

Mrs. Davis's bullet wound is very serious and her recovery is doubtful.

But little trace could be found of the robber, though a man caught here trying to board a freight train is held on suspicion. As near as the frightened women could tell the fellow was a short, thick-set man, about as tall as the horse. Though it was light, they could not distinguish features because he wore a he[illegible] mask.

BROTHER ALLEN WILL WAIT.

Thinks the Supreme Court Will Decide the Question.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 23.—Brother Will Allen, the Campus evangelist arrested Saturday night on a charge of disturbing the peace, is again in the enjoyment of his liberty. He was released from custody Sunday afternoon shortly before 3 o'clock and arrived at the Rescue mission on Cadillac square just in time to preside at the organ and lead the regular Sunday afternoon service.

His experience of Saturday night formed the principal theme upon which his discourse was grounded. He made a number of attempts to give an evangelical tone to his remarks, but invariably the talk would revert back to the episode of Saturday night. His audience displayed sympathy by fervent ejaculations, frequently uttered.

When seen Brother Allen admitted he had promised to keep off the Campus. He explained, however, that his understanding of the agreement was that he should not visit the Campus before a decision of the supreme court in the Campus matter would be given out.

"I will be governed by that decision," said he. "My business is saving souls and not stirring up strife, and if it has come to such a pass that I cannot visit the Campus without causing strife I will not go."

Jury Wrangle All Night.

Owosso, Mich., Sept. 23.—After being out for 18 hours the jury in the case of Richard Phillips of Owosso vs. the United States Benevolent society of Saginaw disagreed, standing six to six. Phillips was insured in the society and was injured in an accident. The society claimed he was suffering from rheumatism and refused to settle. He got a verdict in the circuit court of $140, but the supreme court reversed it. The jurors did not sleep at all but wrangled all night.

Accidentally Shot Himself.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 23.—Chester A. Record, manager for the Hammond Standish & Co. here, was cleaning out a gun when a bullet which had been rusted into the barrel was discharged into his abdomen, passing through two of the intestines and lodging in the muscles of the back. Just before the charge was exploded, Mrs. Record told her husband to be careful or he would be shot. The bullet was not removed, but the doctors say there are fair chances for recovery.

Burned Herself to Death.

Manistee, Mich., Sept. 23.—Some time during Saturday night Mrs. Mary Bumpke, wife of William Bumpke of this city, arose and went to the barn and set fire to it. She then apparently sat down in one corner to await death. Search being made, the legless and headless trunk of a woman was found in a sitting posture. She had been in ill health for some time.

Well Poisoner Acquitted.

East Tawas, Mich., Sept. 23.—The second trial of Oscar McDonald, charged with poisoning a well, resulted in an acquittal.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT

Pere Marquette Train Killed Three Men at Wayne.

AIR BRAKES SUDDENLY SET

Which Caused the Train to Buckle in the Center, Burying the Victims in a Dongola—Two of the Men Were From Bay City.

Wayne, Mich., Sept. 21.—A southbound freight train on the Pere Marquette branch from Saginaw to Toledo was wrecked at 6:40 o'clock last evening, almost instantly killing two men and injuring another so that he died two hours later.

The victims were Charles DeLong, 400 Ninth street, Bay City; George Leonard of West Bay City, and J. W. Sweeney, 1313 Huron street, Toledo. Lemiel McVay, a companion, managed to escape injury by jumping.

The train in charge of Conductor Melvin Connell and Engineer Chambers, had crossed the Michigan Central diamond and was making for a siding to allow a special passenger train to pass by. It appears that the section men had left a car loaded with cinders on the next track, too close to clear the main line. Engineer Chambers noticed the danger and turned on the air brake with such suddenness that the train buckled in the center, throwing three heavy hay cars on top of the dongola or coal car, in which the victims of the wreck were resting.

As soon as the news of the accident spread rescuers appeared, and Leohard and DeLong were pulled out dead. Later Sweeney was taken out in a dying condition. Drs. Zimmerman and Foster worked over him, but in vain. He died about 9 o'clock. Sweeney retained consciousness for about half an hour, and bade those around him good-bye before relapsing into the sleep of death.

A post coroner's jury was summoned, whose members waited until the death of Sweeney occurred, when a verdict was rendered in accordance with the facts.

The main track was piled high with the debris. The train wrecking crew is at work.

Manned by Colored Men.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 21.—The announcement has been made by Mayor Perry that the new fire engine house in the third ward will, on completion, be manned by colored firemen. It is not at all certain that a reliable crew of entirely colored men can be secured at first, but it is thought that if some of the older men at present in the fire service are started in the new house they will be able to school a crew so that in a short time the requisite number of colored men can be drilled. It is not likely that the new engine house will be put into commission until next spring.

Unknown Man Killed.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 21.—An unknown man, weighing about 165 pounds, of light complexion, with small mustache, dressed as a laborer and apparently 45 years old, was killed last night near the crossing of the Lonya road on Michigan avenue by a Detroit, Ypsilanti & Ann Arbor car, bound east. He was picked up unconscious and placed in the car. Later he was taken to Grace hospital, where he died within five minutes.

No papers or letters were upon his person to identify him, but he is supposed to have been a laborer employed near Michigan avenue and Twenty-eighth street.

Ohio Federal Court at Petoskey.

Petoskey, Mich., Sept. 21.—The federal court for the northern district of Ohio began a session in chambers here Friday morning. Gen. C. K. Offield, the Chicago patent attorney, who successfully prosecuted a former case, is attorney for the National Biscuit Co. in its suit against the Ohio Baking Co. for alleged imitation of its inerseal trademark. Hay fever keeps Offield in Petoskey. The opposing attorneys, Col. Starr, of Cleveland and Earl D. Babst of Detroit, with experts as witnesses, have invaded Petoskey and are grinding away here at a case involving half a million dollars.

Ex-Gov. Luce Seriously Ill.

Coldwater, Mich., Sept. 21.—Ex-Gov. Cyrus G. Luce has been very ill the past week, suffering from an acute attack of kidney and bladder trouble. His strong constitution is an important item in his favor, and physicians and family expect to see him recover. His illness is due to taking cold while riding to his farm, a distance of 18 miles. The ex-governor was greatly disappointed in not being able to attend the reunion of the Nineteenth infantry, a regiment in which he was personally interested, and in not being present at the McKinley memorial services.

Pension System for Railroad Men.

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 21.—Michigan members of the different railway unions are endeavoring to form a pension system for railroad employes on somewhat similar lines to that now in operation on the Illinois Central. A meeting of the Michigan employes was held here yesterday. No action was taken and there will be another meeting in November at which the scheme will be launched, it is expected. The Michigan Central will encourage the project, it is said.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General
Charles King

Copyright, 1901, by Charles King

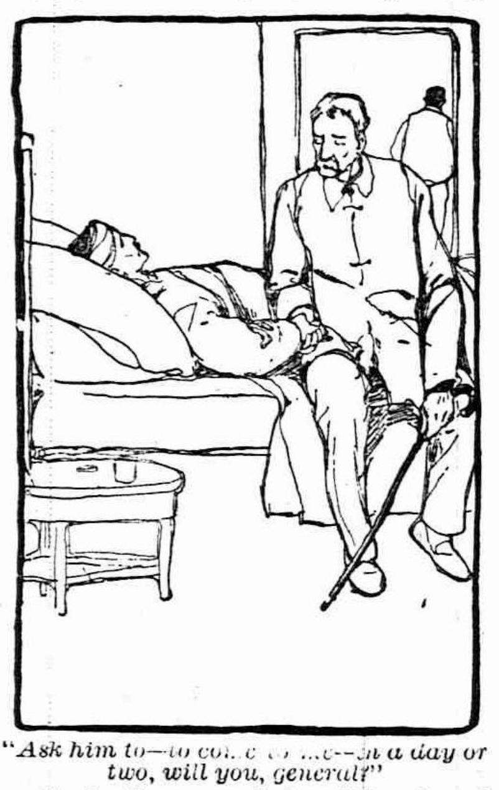
Langdon's eyes spoke negation and inquiry both.

"Dr. Armistead, Eric."

The patient half rose on his pillow, no faint flush this time on his brow, but Melville's hand at once rebuked and restrained him.

"There's a story you ought to hear, Langdon, and it is one I'll vouch for. Shut your eyes and lie quiet now, for I'm going to tell it."

And so in faraway Manila, with his medal of honor in sight, as it were, and his soldier ambition well nigh fully realized, the wounded soldier heard from the lips of his best and stanchest friend the tale of Armistead's real relations with the woman who, bearing Langdon's name, had so nearly wrecked his life. The early boyish infatuation of the young Virginian was not concealed. The lad well nigh worshiped his pretty, frivolous kinswoman and had endowed her with mental gifts and moral attributes that only with maturing years he found fictitious, and still, like a knight of old, he had stood between her and temptation, had striven manfully to lead her to the light and interpose between her and the sting of scandal. The true story of the encounter at the Shoreham Langdon heard at last and hid his face in sorrow and contrition. He had so easily believed ill of Armistead, he had so utterly misjudged him!



"Ask him to—to co[illegible]—in a day or two, will you, general?"

"Ask him to—to come to me—in a day or two, will you, general?" he said, faintly pressing Melville's hand. "I need to think over this. It is all—so different." And Melville stole away and left him with the brief oriental twilight just shrouding the skies.

CHAPTER XX.

The summer had come and gone. The state regiments were summoned home for muster out, and thrice their number in regulars and national volunteers were gone or going to Manila. Only in small bodies and rather as banditti or guerrillas were the enemy encountered. The lightning dashes of the cavalry north and south in Luzon and the tireless scouts and marches of the infantry had scattered the insurgents in every direction. The war had dwindled to a campaign of detachments, "like old Arizona days," as the troopers put it, and, full of honors and the consciousness of duty faithfully done, with thinned ranks and in many instances thin, gaunt faces, the soldiery of the wide west was sailing back across the seas and being welcomed with tumultuous acclaim at San Francisco. The Columbias mourned the loss of many a gallant lad left buried in the Philippines, but parted without perceptible emotion with their original lieutenant colonel. Nathan resigned the silver leaves long months before they fought their last fight, preferring brief garrison duty with his battery. So many colonels and majors seemed to get picked off by the rebel rifles that it became positively unsafe to take the field, said a saturnine staff officer of the commanding general, and that might have influenced Nathan's action. But promotions in the artillery arm speedily gave him under the law the grade of major, and it was better to be a live major of regulars at a comfortable station in the United States than a lieutenant colonel of volunteers in the mud and rain and discomfort of Luzon. The volunteers were coming back with every transport and being camped on the reservation pending their muster out. The Columbias arrived, and Nathan arranged a big dinner for the officers and rode about among the men, who somehow couldn't seem to see him, and many wouldn't even salute.

Only a meager dozen of the junior officers attended that feast. It flattened dolefully despite the lavish flow of wine. Every field officer "regretted," and certain of the captains possibly unschooled in the ways of society never even acknowledged the courtesy. Major Train, who had been promoted lieutenant colonel on Nathan's resignation, would not even notice him. The colonel's greeting was grave and distant. Some of the men laughed aloud when Nathan rode over to camp, and the situation was the talk of the great assemblage of returning volunteers when in came the transport with the warworn Washoes, Eric Langdon at their head, tumultuously greeted by the throng the day they disembarked. And Nathan asked for leave of absence. In civilian dress and accompanied by his wife and a single servant, he drove to the ferry unnoticed of the cheering crowds that rent the air with shouts for Langdon and his devoted men.

It took full a fortnight to complete the examinations and all the preliminary papers before the final muster out of the brave band of brothers they had become. There were returning regiments in whose membership there lived the ranklings of discord and jealousy, but the Washoes had but one creed and no recriminations. They believed in God, they loved their country, and they swore by Eric Langdon. The governor and his staff came by special train from the northeast to meet them on their return, and Cresswell, too, was there, and both their senators and many men with the bees of possible offices buzzing in their bonnets, and all of these had much to say in public and in all their many speeches to the listening warriors in praise of their heroic colonel, the one thing sure to evoke tumultuous applause, and much to say in private to that silent soldier himself. The burden of their united song was a source of keen and whimsical delight to Langdon and to Melville, who, with his household, [illegible] waiting orders of the war department at the Colonial. It would be so very much better for Langdon, said all these statesmen, to accept the high commission they proposed obtaining for him in the regular service than to think of entering political life, which they could truthfully assure him was so sadly uncertain and full of disappointments.

Langdon listened with the same quizzical smile, but said very little. He knew perfectly well that all Washoe couldn't change the laws and that nothing short of a special act of congress could place him in the army with any rank he cared to accept. He had been tendered the colonelcy of one of the new regiments, but the surgeons shook their heads. Cresswell clamored for his return to the office. The Washoe Zephyr, that was at odds with the governor, swung out its banner to the breeze with "For Governor, General Eric Langdon, the Hero of Manila," irrespective of the fact that there had been a hundred or more equally heroic and as little versed in politics. It was "done for devilment," as the governor's henchmen took pains to assure Langdon, but most people throughout the state and the regiment to a man took it seriously, and machine statesmen far and near were sorely worried. There is nothing so sure to stir things the wrong way for all parties and principally for himself as the injection of the martial hero into politics. Langdon was for announcing in so many words that he would never permit the use of his name, but Cresswell, the veteran of a dozen campaigns, bound him to silence. "Think what you please, do what you please when the time comes, but meanwhile keep your own counsel. No matter if you don't want the governorship or any civil office, let 'em think you do. It's the surest way to get what you do want." The whole state delegation in congress, the governor and his backers were clamoring by wire for Langdon's immediate promotion to the grade of brigadier general. That would insure his going back to the Philippines and being far out of the field when nominations were in order. But Washoe is too many hundreds of miles from Washington for them to importune in person, and letters and telegrams are far easier to answer than personal pleas, and "influence," said Melville, "is inversely as the square of the distance." The brevet of the silver star was wired without much objection at the war office, and the Washoes roared with joy over the news that for conspicuous bravery in half a dozen actions, including Baligabangbang, where he was severely wounded, their colonel was brevetted a general.

It was relief at night to get away from the thronging camp and the importunities of statecraft and to find refuge at Melville's quiet, cozy suit of rooms at the homelike old hostelry. Lips that smiled and eyes that shone were ever there to welcome him, and with the general he could talk unreservedly. Neither by education nor temperament was he fitted for political life. Its intrigues and devices were detestable to him, its associations galling. As a lawyer he had seen—he had had to see—much of the chicanery with which the whole edifice is surrounded. He had no ambition in that direction. His law practice had begun to be lucrative before the outbreak of the war and bade fair to become more so as soon as he could resume work. All the old debts, with interest, had long since been paid. He had bought land and was drawing plans for a pretty home when the trumpets sounded to arms. He had even begun to dream of a chatelaine for that chateau. Certain batteries of the old regiment were stationed in the harbor, and officers who were his contemporaries in the old days at Pawnee, seniors and juniors both, now came to his disciplined, well ordered camp and looked with appreciative eyes upon those stalwart, seasoned battalions and envied him his experience and opportunities. Torrance had got his double bars at last and gone on to Manila as the volunteers were coming home, but he had long since broken with Nathan, and the soldier in him sought reconciliation with the man who had won such honors in the campaign. The full realization of the wrong he had done Langdon long since dawned upon him, and yet how horribly awkward was his position! Other men in the regiment who had quarreled with their kind and wanted to end the strain of long misunderstanding could go to Melville, sure of sound advice and sympathetic aid. Melville could harmonize where others only meddled. But Torrance was barred. Melville was the only man to whom he could not go, for in his rancor he had so far forgotten himself and what was due a woman as to name one of Melville's household in his denunciation of his brother lieutenant.

Langdon had cordially greeted and received certain of the old regiment who had held aloof in his days of trouble, but who came to him frankly and told him of their contrition and regret. They had wronged only Langdon. Torrance had spoken disdainfully of a brave girl whose offense in the eyes of the small snob element at Pawnee was that she stood by the sorrowing man and thought him despitefully used, and now would Langdon be apt to forgive an affront to Ethel Grahame? Mrs. Torrance, after the new captain sailed for Manila, wished to take rooms with these pleasant army people at their favorite caravansary. She loved society, but everybody knew her husband had been knocked flat by Langdon for impertinent mention of Miss Grahame, and, though it happened ten years before, the breach had never been healed. Torrance had never sought pardon. How could she go there? The Nathans were taking the mountain air up at Tahoe, waiting for the volunteers to disperse, but the major's leave was for only two weeks. The Washoes were still in camp and the day of muster out not yet determined. The governor and his satellites were now less clamorous for speedy settlement of their papers and somewhat given to suggestion that, after all, "it wouldn't pay for the regiment to come to the capital. They wouldn't have their arms and their equipments, etc., all having to be turned in at the Presidio, so it would hardly be like a military parade. All things considered, it would be just as well for the boys to scatter at Frisco and each choose his own homeward way." So the military authorities bent their energies toward getting rid of those regiments whose statesmen were clamorous, and thus it happened that the Nathans returned while the Washoes were still in camp, and it might have been better had that leave been extended.

One glorious autumn morning the regiment formed line for final review, and in great numbers civilians, soldiers and women fair were assembled to witness the ceremony. The Columbias had been paid off to the last man and given their discharge, but several of their officers still lingered about the city. The Evergreens had been welcomed home and feted and feasted to their hearts' content. Not a company had gone on its way without stopping for a parting call and cheer at Langdon's camp. The commanding general and his staff, escorted by a troop of cavalry from the barracks and greeted by the thunder of the garrison guns, took place in front of the center of the long, statuesque line. For the last time the Washoes came out in khaki, and very fit and soldierly they looked despite the relaxation of the long homeward voyage and the days of waiting about the city. To right and left of the reviewing point were scores of carriages from town, and an aid-de-camp had ridden to Gen-

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs Martha Keller, of Cohoctah township, Livingston county who has been seriously afflicted with a complication of diseases for years, voluntarily makes the following statement. She says: I had been a great sufferer with catarrh of the stomach, heart failure and nervous debility. I would have peculiar nervous spells come over me and I would faint away; have been carried in the house more than once in that condition. My heart and stomach troubled me terribly all the time, having tried a number of doctors without receiving any permanent relief. I saw the advertisement of Dr. Walker in the papers, also hearing of the doctor's many cures. I decided to call at the hotel and see him. I at once placed myself under Dr. Walker's treatment. I improved right along and am now happy to say that all of the above symptoms have left me. To have my stomach, heart and nerves feel natural once more causes me to feel very grateful. I most cheerfully recommended the doctor to all afflicted ones. Signed MRS. MARTHA KELLER.

Mrs. Chas. Maltby, of Milan, Mich., says: I was taken with Lagrippe last winter; soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system; my sufferings at times were intense and intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I go around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health. Signed CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was."
Signed JAMES B. GILDAY.
Yargerville, Monroe County, Mich. June 28, 1901.

Sick all his Life. Read the statement of another well known citizen of Monroe county: Mr. W. W. Murphy, of Samaria, who had been almost a constant sufferer all his life from stomach and liver complications. He says: "I have found Dr. W. C. Walker's treatment a great help to me. I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment. Had tried everything I could hear of before, with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker." Signed W. W. MURPHY.
Samaria, Monroe Co., Mich., June 25, 1901.

Mr. A. C. Crittenden, a well-known business mnn of Carleton, Mich., states: I took a course of treatmenl of Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, some 2 years ago and I take pleasure in saying the doctor made a permanent cure of my case. There has been no return of former trouble.
Signed A. C. Crittenden.

HER WAY.

Eyes? Well, no, her eyes ain't much;
Guess you seen a lot of such—
Sort o' small an bluey gray.
'Tain't her eyes; it's jest her way.

Hair ain't black, nor even brown;
Got no gold upon her crown;
Sort o' ashy, I should say.
'Tain't her hair; it's jest her way.

'Tain't her mouth—her mouth is wide,
Sort o' runs from side to side.
See 'em better ev'ry day.
'Tain't her mouth; it's jest her way.

Nose I reckon's nothin great;
Couldn't even swear it's straight;
Fact, I feel I'm free to say
'Tain't her nose; it's jest her way.

Love her? Well, I guess I do!
Love her mighty fond and true;
Love her better ev'ry day.
Dunno why; it's jest her way.

EASY "SURE THINGS."

Some Propositions That It Is Safe to Bet Against.

There are many things which at first thought appear to be easy enough of accomplishment that it is pretty safe to bet a man he cannot do. Most people know that the human hands are not strong enough to break a new laid egg if the hands are clasped and the egg laid endwise between the palms. It is said that the pressure required to break an egg in this manner amounts to tons.

Among other safe bets is a wager that a man cannot rise from a chair without bending forward or putting his feet under the chair or outside of it.

Many a man will back himself to give another a start of 50 yards in a dash of 100, provided the man having the start hops all the way. But no runner, however swift, can give that amount of start to an ordinary man. For the first five yards they go at practically the same pace. Therefore the runner, to go 95 yards while the "hopper" goes 45, would have to run more than twice as fast, and it would be a weak man who could not hop 45 yards at a pace equal to 20 seconds for 100 yards, and that would mean that the runner in order to win would have to beat all previous records.

If a man boasts that his penknife is particularly sharp, ask him to cut with one stroke of the blade one of those yellow ribbons, mostly of silk, which come around bundles of cigars. In 999 cases out of 1,000 the knife is not sharp enough to do this. It will cut through all the ribbon but the last strand, and that will pull out long, and the more he tries to cut it the longer it will pull out.

It is safe to bet any one except a blind man that he cannot stand without support of any kind for five minutes at a stretch if he is thoroughly blindfolded without moving his feet. If he does not move his feet he is pretty sure to topple over in about a minute.

A Chinese plow is a light affair, made of a crooked stick, with a steel point fastened to it and is pulled by a water buffalo.

No Relief for 20 Year

"I had bronchitis for twenty years," said Mrs. Minerva Smith of Danville, Ill., "and never got relief until I used Foley's Honey and Tar which is a sure cure for throat and lung diseases. J. J. Orr.

A Shocking Calamity

"Lately befell a railroad laborer," writes Dr. A. Kellett, of Williford, Ark. "His foot was badly crushed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly cured him. It's simply wonderful for burns, boils, piles and all skin eruptions. It's the worlds champion healer. Cure guaranteed. 25c. Sold by C A. Wright.

The end and aim of all education is the development of character.

Now I'm smiling and dance with delight,
I had some Rocky Mountain Tea last night. J. J. Orr.

One of nature's remedies; cannot harm the weakest constitution; never fails to cure summer complaints of young or old. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

ANIMAL LIFE.

The army worm is essentially a grass eating insect, though it often feeds upon other plants, and is said to prefer oats to corn.

The malaptecurus, a fish only eight inches long, can develop a shock of 200 volts of electricity in the two-thousandth part of a second.

Several pairs of pigeons which a scientist has observed in Paris have raised their young in nests made entirely of hairpins collected on the paths of the Luxembourg.

The largest nest in the world is built by the mound bird, a sort of Australian fowl. It makes mounds sometimes 150 feet in circumference, in which it buries its eggs five feet deep.

The heaviest bird that flies is the great bustard. In size it exceeds the Norwegian blackcock. The old males weigh about 35 pounds, but when food is plentiful the young males may weigh 40 pounds. Great bustards were formerly as plentiful in western Europe as partridges. Now they are rarely found.

Strike Among Girls.

Buchanan, Mich., Sept. 21.—Twenty-five girls employed at the Schwabach garment factory in this place are out on a strike. They claim that the proprietor owes them for six weeks' work. Only four or five hands are working, and the girls say they will not go to work until all back wages are paid.

Tecumseh Star Course.

Will open at Sutton's opera house Thursday, Oct. 17. The list of attractions secured for the season are the best. They will consist of three lectures, three concerts and a cartoon humorist as follows:

Oct. 17—L. J. Beaucamp.
Nov. 11—Oelschlagel Concert Co.
Dec. 6—Alton Packard.
Jan. 20—Hon. J. G. Camp.
Feb. 1—G. A. Gearheart.
Feb. 24—Gill-Johnson Concert Co.
Mar. 10—Schiller Concert Co.

The season tickets are $1.00. The committee have decided to reduce the price of reserved seats for the season to 50 cents, half the price of former years. This will put the price within the reach of all.

Pitcher Harris.

To express the gratitude the people of Tecumseh felt toward Pitcher Harris for his faithful work with the Tecumseh ball team this season, a committee consisting of J. D. Blocher, B. J. Garlinghouse and Alva Spayde, took up a collection, which consisted of twenty dollars. Messrs. Blocher, Garlinghouse and Spayde drove out to the farm home of Mr. Harris and presented him with the money.

It was the intention of the committee to have Mr. Harris come to Tecumseh under pretense of pitching a game of ball and present the money to him in public, but owing to an item published in the Tecumseh News last Thursday that the money had been presented, they were obliged to drive to his home and give it to him Friday in order to have it a surprise.

This has occurred so often with the Tecumseh News that it is hardly pardonable now.

Litite Girl Shot By A Man, Supposed To Be Under The Influence Of Liquor At Fulton County, O. Fair.

While the 12 years old daughter of Will Mock, who lives about ten miles from Morenci village, was leaving the Floral Hall at the Fulton County fair last Friday, an unknown man supposed to be under the influence of liquor, was standing at the door with a revolver in his hands.

It was discharged in some way, whether intentional or otherwise is not known, and the bullet entered the stomach. She was given immediate medical attention but nothing could save her. She died in a few minutes.

FROM AUSTRALIA

An Interesting Letter From

DR. P. B. HARDY

Dated S. S. Ventina at Sea July 20 1901.

We will cross the equator about midnight. The days are very comfortable. Of course the ship is covered with canvas so that we are never in the sun. The ship being of steel becomes heated during the day, and at night our staterooms are fiery furnaces. The sea is covered with white caps and the vessel rolls considerably but we could not ask for better weather. Yesterday afternoon we had a terrific rain storm which was welcome for its cooling effects on the ship, and we slept better in consequence. We expect to reach Samoa next Wednesday, where this will be posted.

I had a very pleasant day at Honolulu. My room mate from Frisco to that place, was a gentleman returning from the Pan-American Exposition, who is superintendent of a sugar plantation on one of the islands, and who owns a coffee plantation himself. He took me about the city and entertained me at 6 o'clock dinner at his hotel. During the afternoon he met and introduced me to Superintendent of schools of the island on which Honolulu is situated. This gentleman told me that good teachers were scarce; that ordinary salary for men and women was $125 per month; hours of school were from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m., with 15 minutes recess and one hour for noon. He said there were a few positions of superintendent of 12 room, hours being the same, and salary $200 per month. Board and room costs $6 per week. Everything is frightfully high, there except native fruits. Bananas 35 to 50 cents per bunch, eggs 6 for a quarter, milk 15 cents a quart, dressed chicken $1.75 a piece. The teachers have to teach Chinese, Japanese, natives, negroes, half-breeds and thorough-breds. There is one normal school for the islands, located at Honolulu.

We went out to the beach for a surf bath and I never enjoyed a swim so much as that one. Just a short way out was a reef, outside of which the sharks were betting with each other as to which would catch the first one who dared to swim beyond the line. The first thing I did was to swim an anchored raft a short distance out, and on the way out kicked off the lower section of my suit. The waves were rolling in four or five feet high, and I had to go through the first line of breakers and saw that my wind was liable to give out so didn't stop for the things. My friend went for another pair and I was whole again. There were some native women and children in who had excuses for bathing suits and some native men in without a stitch. Two waves of the surf would carry man 50 feet up the beach and land him 20 or 30 feet dry from the receding wave. The first wave would leave him right where the surf-breaker would cover him up and the next wave land him.

We heard some very fine music in the grounds about the palace formerly occupied by Queen Lill. The residences are tropical style principally veranda, are some distance back from the street and in a complete bower of trees, such as banana, bread fruit, mango, date palm, cocoannt, and numerous varieties of palms. Flowers abound everywhere in profusion. The street transit system consist of a dingy toadstool-like car drawn by a span of mules. They have electric light and are about to substitute electric cars for the mules.

As we approached the islands from the sea, the first sight was disappointing, Instead of waving palms and tropical vegetation to greet the eye, rugged cliffs and mountainous coast line of volcanic formation presented to view. I learn that most of the plantations are productive only by irrigation, the water coming from artesian wells at a depth of 800 or 900 feet.

I will mail a paper with an account of a storm encountered by the Mariposa. We passed this steamer one day out of Honolulu on her way to Frisco. As we have that part of the sea to traverse yet we may get some rough weather before we reach Sydney. P. B. HARDY.

HOTTEST PLACE ON EARTH

It is Bahrein, on the Southwestern Coast of Persia.

The hottest region on the earth's surface is on the southwestern coast of Persia, on the border of the Persian gulf. For 40 consecutive days in the months of July and August the mercury has been known to stand above 100 degrees in the shade night and day and to run up as high as 130 degrees in the middle of the afternoon.

At Bahrein, in the center of the most torrid belt, as though it were nature's intention to make the place as unbearable as possible, water from wells is something unknown. Great shafts have been sunk to a depth of 100, 200, 300 and even 500 feet, but always with the same result—no water. This serious drawback notwithstanding a comparatively numerous population contrives to live there, thanks to copious springs which burst forth from the bottom of the gulf more than a mile from the shore.

The water from these springs is obtained in a most curious and novel manner. "Machadores" (divers), whose sole occupation is that of furnishing the people of Bahrein with the life giving fluid, repair to that portion of the gulf where the springs are situated and bring away with them hundreds of bags full of the water each day. The water of the gulf where the springs burst forth is nearly 200 feet deep, but these machadores manage to fill their goatskin sacks by diving to the bottom and holding the mouths of the bags over the fountain jets—this, too, without allowing the salt water of the gulf to mix with it.

The source of these submarine fountains is thought to be in the hills of Osmond 400 and 500 miles away. Being situated at the bottom of the gulf, it is a mystery how they were ever discovered, but the fact remains that they have been known since the dawn of history.

AFTER 20 YEARS

A Lady of Grand Rapids Strikes the Right Thing.

Many extraordinary cases of the work of the little conqueror are coming to light in Michigan. Hundreds of them have been investigated by our representative and each but gives added strength to those which have gone before. Such well deserved words of praise are daily showered on this modern wonder worker from all parts of the union. Speaking of her experience a lady of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Jas. Gardner, who resides at No. 309 Second street, says: "For over twenty years I was bothered with kidney trouble and despite treatment by physicians and using almost every remedy that came to my notice I received no permanent relief until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. No one except those who have been through the mill of kidney complaint can tell the torture that one endures. The constant pain across my back extending up the right side, totally unable to lie on my right side, the stiffness and numbness of my limbs; the excrusiating pain, is something more easy to think about than to express. Many a time my husband has had to rub my back to get up the circulation before I was able to get on my feet. My family prevailed on me to try Doan's Kidney Pills but as I had used dozens of other remedies I had very little hope of finding relief. They persisted in their advice and in the fall of 1897 I used two boxes. I felt like a different person. I I was in better health than I had been in years. The pain in my back left, I slept well at night. I could do my work as well as I ever did, and I give the entire credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. I make this statement so that other women who suffer as I suffered may be in a position to know what to use if they wish to get rid of that too prevalent disease, kidney complaint."

Clerical Sore Throat Explained.

Deacon Scrimp—Humph! Think you have got to have a vacation, eh?

Struggling Pastor—Yes, the doctor says I must go off until this cough is cured.

Deacon Scrimp—Well, I'd like to know why preachers are always getting bad coughs.

Struggling Pastor—Well, you see, we have to visit around a good deal, and we are always asked to hold a little service before leaving, and I think our throats become affected from breathing the dust that flies from the family Bibies.—New York Weekly.

Brain-Food Nonsense

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain another for muscles and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or to prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthly action, purifies the blood and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

SIMPLE REMEDIES.

Diluted ammonia is good for insect bites and stings.

A raw egg swallowed at once upon getting a fishbone in the throat beyond the reach of the finger, it is said, will dislodge it and carry it down.

A simple remedy for indigestion is the white of an egg beaten to a stiff froth and stirred into a wineglassful of cold water. This should be taken after each meal.

For burns and scalds, when no other remedy is at hand, try the effect of a piece of rag steeped in vinegar and bound round the scar. This is especially useful when cooking, for the vinegar is generally at hand.

To cure a severe case of colic take a teaspoonful of salt in a pint of water; drink and go to bed. This is one of the speediest remedies known. It will also prove efficacious in reviving a person who seems almost dead from a heavy fall.

Preparing For a Journey.

Jerome K. Jerome recalled, with reverence, a habit of his methodical uncle who, before packing for a journey, always "made a list." This was the system which he followed, gathered from his uncle's own lips:

Take a piece of paper and put down on it everything you can possibly require. Then go over it and see that it contains nothing you can possibly do without.

Imagine yourself in bed. What have you got on? Very well; put it down, together with a change. You get up. What do you do? Wash yourself. What do you wash yourself with? Soap. Put down soap. Go on till you have finished. Then take your clothes. Begin at your feet. What do you wear on your feet? Boots, shoes, socks. Put them down. Work up till you get to your head. What do you want besides clothes? Put down everything.

This is the plan the old gentleman always pursued. The list made, he would go over it carefully to see that he had forgotten nothing. Then he would go over it again and strike out everything it was possible to dispense with. Then he would lose the list.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

as mercury will destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescription from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F J. Cheney Co. Testimonials free.

All on $90 a Year.

A clergyman by the name of Mathson was minister of Patterdale, in Westmoreland, England, 60 years and died at the age of 90. During the early part of his life his benefice brought him only £12 a year. It was afterward increased to £18, which it never exceeded. On this income he married, brought up four children and lived comfortably with his neighbors, educated a son at the university and left behind him upward of a thousand pounds.

With that singular simplicity and inattention to forms which characterize a country life, he himself read the burial service over his mother, he married his father to a second wife, and afterward buried him also. He published his own banns of marriage in the church with a woman he had formerly christened, and he himself married all his four children.

Webster and the Trout.

With each increase of Webster's fame as a lawyer and an orator, writes Professor McMaster in The Century, friends and admirers grew more and more urgent that he should once more return to public life. He did indeed consent to serve as a presidential elector and for ten days sat in the Massachusetts legislature. Many years afterward in the course of a speech Webster referred to this service and told his hearers a story quite characteristic of the man. "It so happens," said he, "that all the public services which I have rendered in this world in my day and generation have been connected with the general government. I think I ought to make one exception. I was ten days a member of the Massachusetts legislature, and I turned my thoughts to the search for some good object in which I could be useful in that position, and after much reflection I introduced a bill which, with the general consent of both houses of the Massachusetts legislature, passed into a law and is now a law of the state which enacts that no man in the state shall catch trout in any other manner than in the old way, with an ordinary hook and line."

LOVE'S WAKING.

Love lies asleep. What dreams be round him thronging
Poets may guess.
But he is tired of hope and fear, of longing,
Of passion's stress—
Tired, through long years, from the world's first beginning;
Too tired to wake
At wealth's loud call, at beauty's whisper, winning
Or answer make,
Though king command and minstrel, in true meter,
Plead, praise and weep—
Than anything on earth, ah, rest is sweeter!
Love lies asleep.

Lo! Two young pilgrims come from woodland closes,
Barefoot, yet gay,
Clothed with scarce else than garland veils of roses,
Sweet beggars, they—
Full of health's bliss, of life, of joy, immortal,
Untouched by sin,
Who know not why they sing beside love's portal
Till love joins in.

MY RIVAL.

HOW HE GOT THE BETTER OF ME IN CONSEQUENCE OF AN ACCIDENT.

I cannot say that I thought much of Mackintosh. He seemed to me a great prig. Good looking? Well, yes, in a barber's block sort of way—curly, oiled hair, pink complexion, white teeth. His teeth were good, I must say, and when he smiled his appearance varied from that of a skull to that of a dog out of temper about bones. In the summer I had met Dr. and Mrs. Cherry, who were friends of mine. We had been at Delhi once together. They were going out again in December and intending to take their daughter Ellen with them. She was an exceptionally nice girl, with light hair and blue eyes and a low, musical voice (I must say I like blondes, and a harsh voice is one of my crosses), and I saw a good deal of her and should have seen more only Mackintosh was rather in the way.

However, I found out that my friends proposed to go to India by the steamer leaving Marseilles on Jan. 2. And that was just the time my leave was up. It was in the days when one steamer started from Southampton and a few days after another from Marseilles, and they met in Egypt. The journey was cheaper by the bay, and I had intended to take that route, but I met Mackintosh at the office and found he was going from Southampton to please a chum. You would scarcely believe it, but it was the case nevertheless, that the Marseilles passengers thought themselves rather more in society than the Southamptons. So I pondered, "If my agents will find the money, I will give Master Mackintosh the go by." I took a Southampton berth, but the clerk said I might change it for a Marseilles one afterward if I liked. And this I did. I started from Dover the day after Christmas day and at Paris went straight to the Hotel Byron, where I knew the Cherrys were staying.

"Friend Mac," I said to myself, "with the brand of Southampton on his brow, will never be able to cope with my continental prestige."

I traveled with my friends in a leisurely way. We gave 24 hours to Lyons and reached Marseilles on the evening of Dec. 31. Our inn, the Du Midi, was on the road to the New Quarter, and I have been told, since the building speculations were not so successful, it has been altered and let out in flats. But at that day it was a high, well like house, having a courtyard in the middle, adorned with pomegranates in green boxes, where we sat after table d'hote and drank coffee and cognac.

Mrs. Cherry had a letter that [illegible]ening by the post, and I observed that its receipt created interest, and I heard one or two observations which did not, however, in any way interpret themselves to me at the time. "Really, after all?" "But is there time?" "How has it been managed?" and so on.

And when I asked what projects were in view for seeing the place next day Mrs. Cherry only replied, "Something will suggest itself."

Jan. 1 was a general holiday, and from an early hour the streets began to fill, for the peasants came in from the neighborhood, and all the artisans turned out in their gayest costumes. The Cherrys had breakfast in their own apartments, and I on returning from the salle a manger went into my own bedroom, which was high up, and sat at the window smoking a cigarette. Hearing a noise below, I looked out and saw the Cherrys starting, without giving me notice. Ellen, however, observed me.

"Where are you off to?" I called down to her.

"We are going," she said, "to walk in the Canebiere. It will be great fun! Come along!"

Come along? Of course I would! I snatched up my hat and a dustcoat and on rushing from my room observed slight iron gates and within a lift, stationary. There was no gas in it nor any attendant, and I had not noticed it before or heard of people going up or down. But the thought struck me, "I may as well use it, time will be saved." The grating was unlocked. I entered, took a seat and pulled the rope. The lift began to descend. Darkness, but only for a moment or two, and then another grating, and on—into the darkness again. Suddenly I felt that the seat I was occupying was losing its horizontal position. It sunk on one side. There was grievous creaking, scraping, crashing and then stoppage. Half way between two landing places the machine had stuck immovably fast.

Of course it was very awkward, but there was apparently no cause for alarm. I knew I should get out in time, but still it might be a longish job. I did not hear much noise and concluded I was among thick walls and not near a grating. But there was some rumbling and shouts as I thought. In a short time, however, all was still. I had not called out, for I was anxious to show I was cool and not disturbed by a trifling accident of the sort. Indeed I had planned to come out smoking, for I had a fusee and a cigar case with me. As there was no vent, however, I put off lighting up till my release was near at hand. I did not wish the air to be closer than it was.

I had just thought vaguely, "They will get me out, and I will emerge smoking." But two things abruptly occurred to me, "How will they get you out?" and then, "Are you sure they will look for you?" By heaven! This later idea became serious. The lift must have been out of repair, unfit for use. It was careless to leave the grating unlocked. But still there was no attendant, as there would have been if the thing had been in working trim. They might perhaps think the lift passed down of its own accord and that no one was in it.

In point of fact this was so. The Cherrys, it seemed, walked slowly on and, as I did not follow, thought I was engaged and busied themselves about the drama of the streets. No one was near when I entered the machine, and it had sunk away once before, it was said, without any one touching it, and indeed it was disorganized and not employed.

The chambermaids were at the windows, the waiters at the door, the occupants of rooms were among the gay throng on the pavements enjoying the sunshine of the south, which danced in a thousand dimples on the blue expanse of the Mediterranean. I did not wish to seem frightened or frantic and so only called out for help at intervals and in an unexcited voice, and no one heard, or, hearing, failed to localize the sound.

The Cherrys were out for three hours and on returning, finding no trace of me and hearing of the fall of the lift, at last conceived the idea that I might be inside of it. Of course when this suspicion was once set on foot there was great excitement, but it was not very easy to do anything.

In the first place, on account of the fete, there was an unavoidable delay in getting workmen, and when they were procured the part of the wall where the lift had jammed ran down amid the walls of several small apartments and behind cupboards, and to find where the aperture should be begun was no light matter. With a fusee I could see my watch. I entered the lift at 11 and at 5 was still there, though the voices were close at hand, and the pickaxes seemed to be penetrating the framework of my little box. Even then it appeared long before friendly hands helped me down into the chamber, whence I reached the body of the house.

It was pleasant being an object of female kindness and solicitude, but Dr. Cherry was anxious and desirous I should keep quiet. When I went to bed, I found he had had reason for some apprehension. Sleep entirely deserted me, and an access of nervous excitement ensued. Twelve o'clock struck and then 1. It was intolerable. I should be altogether unmanned without rest. I had hydrate of chloral in my portmanteau, but there was no nig[illegible] light. However, I managed to get the bottle and the toilet tumbler and measured with my finger. The fluid seemed a good deal in drinking, but took effect at once.

When I awoke, I heard an exclamation of relief. There were two or three persons in the room. It was broad daylight. A foreign doctor, who spoke English with an accent, felt my pulse. "He will do now," he said to the others, and, turning to me, added. "You have had a squeak."

"I must get up," I said. "The steamer goes at noon."

There was a laugh.

"It is long past noon," said the landlord, who was a polyglot, and a young man, an interpreter who attended the trains, put in, with a grin, "I saw the steamer with my eyes pass Chateau d'If and a long tail of smoke following."

I soon learned that I had taken an overdose of chloral, was discovered in a profound stupor and could not be awakened. Dr. Cherry had done everything for me. The Messengeries steamer was going the next day, and the P. and O. agent had transferred my passage most kindly to the French boat.

Dr. Cherry had called in Bernardo, a local doctor, and intrusted my case to him. My pulse had been carefully watched and suitable measures taken to insure me against fatal effects.

By the way of cheering me the interpreter said: "Your friends have lost one comrade and got another. A gentleman arrived from Paris early this morning. He was aggrieved at your accident and accompanied your good doctor and madam and the young lady on board the steamer."

"What was his name?" I asked.

"I cannot say his name. It will be in the book."

"Do get it."

The book was brought. Behold the entry, "Jan. 2, from London to Bombay, M. Mackintosh, rentier!"

"Confound the fellow!" I bawled out. "He must have changed his plans at the last moment! Bandbox! Prig! Intruder! Oh, that lift!"

"You are better," observed the interpreter, "but you must not overdo."

NOT GOOD DANCERS.

American Women Ridiculous on a Waxed Floor, Says London Master.

America looms large in the coronation prospectuses issued by the dancing masters. London women and men hailing from Yankeeland are invited to come early and avoid the rush. They are told that next season the British capital will surrender itself to the delights of dancing, and that Americans can satisfactorily participate in the festivities only by learning in advance how to maneuver in a ballroom according to the accepted English fashion.

Many new movements specially created for the coronation are announced, and masters claim that Americans will be given opportunity to study them nowhere except in cockney academies.

Mr. Walter Humphrey, head of a London academy of dancing and editor of The Dancing Times, says: "Englishmen cannot admire the art of the ballroom as taught in the United States. It violates every principle of graceful motion. American ladies are especially ridiculous when they try to dance. Their vertical demonstrations are exaggerated, not to say grotesque. Their bodies sway about absurdly, and they attempt to lead rather than follow their male companions.

"American ladies never dance acceptably in smart circles in London without first getting instruction at the hands of capable teachers. Englishmen find it quite impossible to follow their vigorous and complicated gyrations. English ladies permit their gentlemen partners to lead absolutely. They understand that proficiency in the art of dancing from their point of view consists in accommodating their movements perfectly to those of their companions.

"They preserve an easy rigidity of body and glide through the figures instead of leaping and hopping excitedly. English ladies are able to dance with American gentlemen far better than English gentlemen with American ladies."

Mr. Humphrey asserts that the dancing academies of London always have a large number of Americans getting rid of terpsichorean vulgarisms picked up in the United States and taking on the graces of the art as understood and practiced in English society.

The Primary Planets.

The primary planets are those which are the centers of secondary systems, consisting of small globes revolving round them in the same manner as they revolve round the sun. These are called secondary planets, satellites or moons. The primary planets which are thus attended carry the satellites or secondary planets with them in their orbits round the sun.

Not Above His Business.

Young Brodhead, scion of a wealthy family, cherished journalistic ambitions and, like a sensible youth, had resolved to begin at the beginning.

He had applied for and obtained a position as a reporter on a daily paper at a moderate salary, where he was treated precisely like any other reporter, shirking no assignment that came in his way and putting on no airs on account of his wealth or social standing.

He had not thought it worth while, however, to acquaint the family servants with the nature of his daily occupations, and when a fellow reporter came to the house one day with a message from the city editor the flunky in attendance at the front door took him around the house and brought him up to the young man's room by a back stairway.

"Why didn't you show Mr. Craig up by way of the front hall?" demanded young Brodhead.

"He's only a reporter," whispered the butler.

Imagine the dignified flunky's horror when his master responded in an audible voice:

"I'm only a reporter myself, you donkey!"—Youth's Companion.

Snails as Window Cleaners.

"An old colored woman selling snails," says the Philadelphia Record, "occasionally makes her appearance in South street, and sometimes she may also be found along Front street or Second street, up in the district that used to be known as the Northern Liberties. She carries an old basket in which the snails repose on freshly sprinkled leaves. These are not sold as food, but for cleaning the outside of window panes—an old practice still in vogue in Kensington. The snail is dampened and placed upon the glass, where it at once moves around and devours all insects and foreign matter, leaving the pane as bright and clear as crystal. There are old established business places in Kensington where the upper windows, when cleaned at all, are always cleaned by snails. There is also a fine market for snails among the owners of aquariums, as they keep the glass clean and bright."

For Popovers.

The value of a recipe lies partly in its being accurately set down and followed. Harper's Magazine has the following directions for making a breakfast delicacy called popovers, as they were imparted by the Chinese servant to a lady visiting in the family.

"You takee him one egg," said the master of the kitchen, "one lit' cup milk. You fixee him one cup flou' on sieve, take pinch salt—you not put him in lump. You move him egg lit' bit slow; you put him milk in, all time move. You makee him flou' go in, not move fast, so have no spots. Makee but'led pan all same wa'm, not too hot. Putlee him in oven. Now you mind you business. No likee woman run look at him all time. Him done all same time biscuit."

Don't Get Thin

Get fat; get nice and plump; there is safety in plumpness.

Summer has tried your food-works; winter is coming to try your breath mill. Fall is the time to brace yourself.

But weather is tricky; look out! Look out for colds especially.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the subtlest of helps. It is food, the easiest food in the world; it is more than food, it helps you digest your food, and get more nutriment from it.

Don't get thin, there is safety in plumpness. Man woman and child.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample. Its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Pickled Railroad Ties.

Pickled railroad ties are now being used to a great extent all over the country. A number of railroads, including the Burlington, the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific, have plants of their own in which the ties are pickled. How to preserve the ties and add to their life and durability has been a serious problem for railroad operatives ever since the early days of transportation by rail. The constant wear and tear of ties has necessitated their replacement as soon as they were perceptibly worn. A solution of chloride of zinc is applied by a specially arranged process. The ties are put in large airtight cylinders, the air is pumped out and the ties are heated by steam. The chemicals are then pumped in and the ties kept in the solution under high pressure until they are saturated.—Philadelphia Record.

Women Hermits In Russia.

Among the villagers on the Volga in the province of Samara a curious sect of women has made its appearance. It was originated by an elderly peasant woman in Soznova, called the Blessed Mother. These women have fled from the villages around into a remote district, where they live singly in holes dug out of the face of the hill. They lead a life of fasting and prayer and believe themselves called from the world, which they think is shortly about to perish in a general conflagration. The Blessed Mother has "ten wise virgins" as a sort of bodyguard, and the sect believes that these 11 women are possessed of miraculous powers.—London Globe.

You can generally tell when a man is talking to a woman over the telephone by the tone of voice he assumes.—Nashville Banner.

A Sad Inheritance.

A little girl out in Oregon when seven years old was stricken down with rheumatism, and the local doctor said it was hereditary, as the other members of the family had it. She suffered from it for five years, until a friend who had been cured of the disease by Ath-lo-pho-ros recommended this remedy to her. The doctors had tried five years to cure her, but Ath-lo-pho-ros did it with only two bottles. These inherited cases are the hardest to cure, but Ath-lo-pho-ros will do it, no matter what the cause or the conditions.

CONSTIPATION
"I have gone 14 days at a time without a movement of the bowels, not being able to move them except by using hot water injections. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in this terrible condition; during that time I did everything I heard of but never found any relief; such was my case until I began using CASCARETS. I now have from one to three passages a day, and if I was rich I would give $100.00 for each movement; it is such a relief." AYLMER L. HUNT,

SHE LEFT A NOTE

Brooklyn Woman Bade Her Husband Good-bye and

DISSAPEARED FROM VIEW

Is Well Connected and Relatives Are Heartbroken—Has Two Sisters Living in Grand Rapids—Police Are Searching.

New York, Sept. 26.—Mrs. Eleanor O'Keefe, wife of Thomas O'Keefe, a prominent Brooklyn citizen, kissed her husband good-bye on Sept. 11 and said she was going shopping. A note was found later saying she would never return. The police were notified and are now searching for her.

She has a brother in Buffalo and two sisters in Grand Rapids, Mich., all of whom have been communicated with, but they know nothing of her whereabouts.

Save the Timber Lands.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The general land office has received no reports of forest fires in Colorado. The office is handicapped by the small amount of expenditure it is authorized to make to aid fire fighting. Commissioner Hermann, in his annual report, now about completed, recommends that the legislative safeguards as provided for fires within forestry reservations be extended to all unreserved public timber domain in the United States, thus enabling the government to draw on the general appropriations for fighting fires on unreserved lands. Commissioner Hermann's annual report also renews a recommendation that hereafter the government reserve all timber lands, the matured timber on them only to be sold.

A Terrific Wind Storm.

Lexington, Neb., Sept. 26.—A terrific wind storm visited this vicinity last night, accompanied by rain and lightning. Trees were uprooted, houses were lifted from their foundations and outbuildings of all kinds were destroyed.

A barn belonging to Mr. Nelson was struck by lightning and then torn to pieces by the wind. The flying embers demolished a number of wind mills. Many chimneys were leveled to the roofs. So far as known, nobody was injured, but many horses and cattle were killed. The storm lasted 30 minutes.

Ohio State Campaign Postponed.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 26.—At the conclusion of a conference here, attended by Senator Hanna, Gen. Charles Dick and other well-known republican leaders, it was announced that the opening again been postponed in order that the 30 days of mourning for President McKinley might be properly observed. The opening meeting of the campaign will be held at Delaware Oct. 19. Senators Hanna and Foraker, Gov. Nash and other prominent leaders will speak.

Young Men's National Union.

Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—The second day's session of the 27th annual convention of the Catholic Young Men's National Union was devoted principally to a discussion of the public press. Thomas J. Cummins of the International News bureau read a paper on "American journalism." He said he deplored the tendency toward sensationalism of the newspapers and declared that the assassination of President McKinley was due in a measure to the inflammatory utterances of the press.

Strikers and the Steel Company.

Milwaukee, Sept. 26.—The Illinois Steel Co. was unable to run its 9-inch rolling mill yesterday and the 8-inch mill only worked one shift. Many striking operatives have refused to return to work on the flat rate of 72 cents for all sizes, where it formerly was from 68 cents to $1.24. There are still many idle men at Bay View and many who wish to return are being held back by their fellows who will not be allowed to come back by the company.

Gompers is Mad at Shaffer.

New York, Sept. 26.—In an open letter, issued at the Ashland house, Samuel Gompers, president of the A. F. of L. and vice-president of the Cigarmakers' International union, and John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers and second vice-president of the A. F. of L., challenged Theodore J. Shaffer, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, to prove his statements recently made against them.

Englishmen Used to It.

London, Sept. 26.—The Yachting World says: "British yachtsmen are confident regarding the chances of the challenger. Should she win they will, it goes without saying, rejoice greatly; but they have been so used to defeat in the past that they will not be particularly disheartened should the Columbia prove to be better than Shamrock."

Buford is Afloat Again.

Washington, Sept. 24.—Acting Adjt.-Gen. Ward received a cable message from Gen. Chaffee, at Manila, saying that the transport Buford, which ran aground at the mouth of the Rio Grande river, Mindanao, a few days ago, has been floated uninjured, and is now loading the Twenty-third regiment of infantry, which she will bring to New York by way of the Suez canal.

Automobile Mail Service.

Minneapolis, Sept. 26.—The department at Washington has definitely decided to transport mail between the Minneapolis main office and sub-stations by automobile. Bids will be advertised for, and the new service will go into effect as soon as the vehicles can be secured.

Seth Low Will Accept.

New York, Sept. 26.—Seth Low announced last night that he would accept the nomination for mayor by the anti-Tammany forces, and added that he would resign the presidency of Columbia university. This will be when he is formally notified of his nomination.

Soldiers and Sailors' Reunion.

Mason, Mich., Sept. 26.—Yesterday was the big day of the soldiers' and sailors' reunion. Rations of roast ox, with boiled potatoes, hardtack, beans and coffee were served at noon. Short speeches by Department Commander Van Kleek and others were followed by an old-time dress parade.

INSTANT DEATH

Ecorse Woman Was Killed by M. C. Train.

TWO COMPANIONS ESCAPED

Eight-Months-Old Baby Was in the Rig—Found Lying Near the Track Unhurt—Woman Was Not Used to Driving and Did Not See the Train.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 25.—Mrs. Luella Barron of Ecorse was instantly killed on Salliotte road shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon by a Michigan Central mail train northward bound. She was the wife of Philip Barron, an Ecorse saloonkeeper, and was 26 years of age. Mrs. Barron, her 8-months-old child and Belle Beaubien, aged 14 years, had been to visit Mrs. Felix Cicotte, Mrs. Barron's mother, who lives on Salliotte road. Mrs. Barron did not notice the approach of the train until it was almost on her. She had never driven a horse before, and it is thought that she became frightened, and, jerking at the reins, confused the horse. The engine of the mail train hit squarely between the horse and buggy. The horse was thrown fully 150 feet on the right hand of the track, while the pieces of buggy were scattered alongside the left side of the track for 100 feet. Mrs. Barron was thrown in a ditch and the buggy box was found on top of her. Dr. Durocher of Ecorse says that her skull was fractured and her hip broken.

Belle Beaubien had one leg fractured but managed to get away from the accident and was found yelling hysterically in a house nearby. The baby was picked up alongside the track about 10 feet from the place of accident, unhurt but greatly frightened.

Mrs. Barron was one of the handsomest women in the township and had a very large circle of relatives. Justice Somers will hold an inquest.

SHOCKED THE COURT.

Death of Jeremiah Wilson, a Leading Lawyer.

Washington, Sept. 25.—Jeremiah Morrow Wilson, principal counsel for Rear Admiral Schley, and one of the leading lawyers of Washington, died suddenly in his apartments in the Shoreham hotel shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday. Heart failure, superinduced by an attack of acute indigestion, coupled with Bright's disease, caused his death. Although somewhat indisposed Sunday night and Monday morning, the end came unexpectedly, as he was in conference with his associate counsel in the Schley case scarcely an hour before he died. He leaves a son, Charles S. Wilson, who has been associated with him in the law, and a daughter, Mrs. Wm. Haywood, of this city.

Fifteen Claimants for Big Estate.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Fifteen claimants have been found in Ogdensburg and the surrounding country to an estate said to be worth a million and a half dollars, left by John Baptiste Maxwell of Lower Canada, comprised of real estate holdings in the province of New Brunswick and in Chicago. The claimants affirm they are the grandchildren and the only heirs. Proceedings are being instituted to establish their right to this property. The Ogdensburg heirs represent poor French families.

President's Family Enroute.

New York, Sept. 25.—This morning marked the departure of Roosevelt family from Oyster Bay, not to return until next summer probably, although the president may elect to spend Christmas at his own home for the sake of the children. The house on Sagamore Hill will be closed, but a couple of servants will remain in it constantly, so that it will be ready for use at any time. Mrs. Roosevelt left Oyster Bay shortly after 8 o'clock.

IS FOUND GUILTY

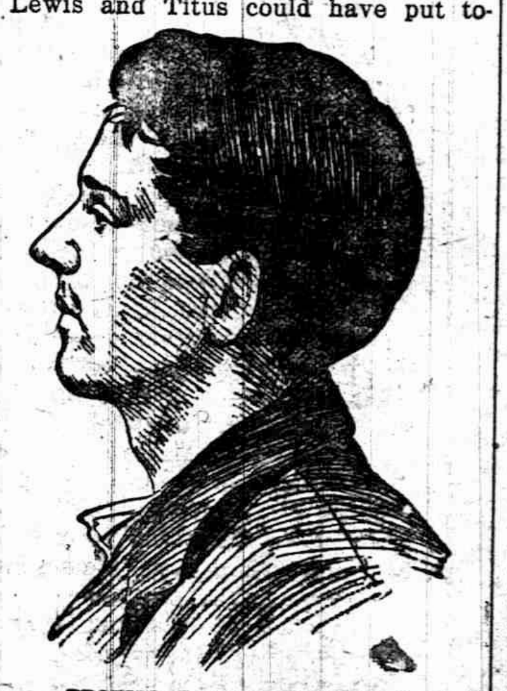
Czolgosz Convicted of Murder in the First Degree.

TO BE SENTENCED THURSDAY

Trial Lasted Eight Hours and 26 Minutes—Large Crowd in the Court Room—Prisoner Still Seems Unconcerned.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Leon F. Czolgosz, alias Nieman, was found guilty yesterday of murder in the first degree by a jury in part III. of the supreme court, in having on the sixth day of September shot President McKinley, the wounds inflicted afterwards resulting in the death of the president.

The wheels of justice moved swiftly. The trial of the assassin consumed eight hours and 26 minutes and covered a period of only two days. Practically all of this time was occupied by the prosecution in presenting a case so clear, so conclusive that even had the prisoner entered the plea of insanity it is doubtful if the jury would have returned a verdict different from the one rendered yesterday. The announcement made in the afternoon by the attorneys for Czolgosz that the eminent alienists summoned by the Erie County Bar association and by the district attorney to examine Czolgosz and to determine his exact mental condition had declared him to be perfectly sane, destroyed the only stage of a defense that Judge Lewis and Titus could have put together. Before adjournment Justice White announced he would pronounce sentence upon the defendant on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The prisoner was taken through the tunnel under Delaware avenue, back to the jail. To all appearances, he was in no way affected [illegible]



PROFILE VIEW OF CZOLGOSZ.

Large Crowd Gathered.

The crowd gathered at city hall was the largest which has seen him since his arraignment. People were lined up on both sides of the big rotunda on the second floor where court convened, and fringed the stairs leading from the floor above. There was no demonstration except that of curiosity. A large number of women witnessed the proceedings.

At 2:44 in the afternoon District Attorney Penney abruptly announced that the case of the prosecution was ended. Judge Lewis arose slowly and addressing the court said that the sudden close of the case against Czolgosz was a surprise to him and his colleagues. They had no witness to call for the defense. He asked the court that he be allowed to address the jury at once. The court consented and the jurist began an address that will long be remembered by those who heard it.

At 3:10 District Attorney Penney began summing up. He spoke in a clear, well-modulated voice and every word could be heard in any part of the room. He said:

"It is hardly possible for any man to stand up and talk about this case without the deepest emotion. It was the most awful tragedy that ever came upon the world.

"We have shown you how this defendant stood in the Temple of Music that afternoon and shot down our beloved president. We have shown you how he deliberated on and planned this awful crime. We have shown you how he attended anarchistic and socialistic meetings at which were sown in his heart the seeds of his terrible act.

"The counsel for the defense says if the defendant was sane he was responsible, and that if he was insane he must be presumed to be innocent. He tells you that is a presumption of law.

"It is also a presumption of law that every man is sane until proven insane. Evidence tending to show that the prisoner was insane has not been forthcoming; it has been proven that he was the agent of the crime and there should be no question in your minds as to the responsibility of the defendant.

"This is no time for oratorical display. Counsel for the prisoner and myself have endeavored to eliminate all sensationalism from this case. It is not my intention to indulge in extended remarks. You understand the responsibility resting upon you. The counsel has said there should be no lynch law in this state. He has told you that the people of Buffalo are to be commended for the spirit displayed by them since the murder of the president, but the law must be vindicated. This terrible thing has happened because there are people in this country who, unless they feel the force of prompt and proper action in this case, will cause something awful to happen to our beloved country.

"Think, gentlemen, of that grand man who stood but a few days ago in the Temple of Music and how he came from the lowly walks of life, where he was a school teacher, then a lawyer, then a judge, a governor, a congressman and then a president of the United States, and, above all, a loving husband, and that on the last day when he said, 'It is God's way, good-bye all, good-bye,' a man so great that he could raise his hand and save his own assassin, a man who could shake the hand of even the very worst man you could imagine.

"That national heart was broken, and it will take God's way and time to heal it.

"It was broken by a class of people who are coming to our country in increasing numbers, and while harbored by our laws are propagating their malicious views; a class of people that must be taught that we have no place for them on our shores, a class of people that must be taught that they can't take the life of any one irrespective of consequences."

Justice White Charges Jury.

Justice White began his charge to the jury at 3:29. He arose from his seat and stepped to the side of the bench nearest the jury box. He said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, in this case the defendant has acknowledged his guilt. Such an acknowledgment in such circumstances cannot go to the jury or the court. The law requires that the defendant charged with such a crime must be tried. The law says that all the facts must be observed and reviewed by you. The law guarantees defendant shall have fair trial by 12 men, impartial and fair, capable of taking the testimony of the trial, and give it thorough consideration. If, when all the circumstances of the case are considered by you, there still exists in your minds a reasonable doubt that defendant is guilty, you cannot find this man guilty. The people have submitted evidence tending to show that this defendant committed this crime; they have given evidence tending to show that it was premeditated. If you are satisfied that there was design and premeditation, and, if in accordance with that premeditation and design, these shots were fired, then the defendant is guilty of the crime of murder in the first degree.

"You must consider all and the evidence of the people submitted to you. You must consider it fairly and without prejudice. You are the sole judges of facts in this case."

Continuing, Judge White said: "The jurors must find him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. You may ask what is a reasonable doubt. While a great deal has been written and said on the definition of 'reasonable doubt,' in this case it means that the jurors are bound to sift, compare and examine all the evidence, and if in their minds there is any doubt as to the defendant's guilt they are bound to acquit the defendant. If there is no doubt in your minds, then you are bound to bring in a verdict of conviction. I am very glad that up to the present stage of this lamentable affair, so far as the jurors and the people of this city are concerned, there has been shown that respect for the law that is bound to teach a valuable object lesson. The defendant has been given every advantage of experienced counsel. I deplore incitement to violence, as the man who is ready to go out and commit a crime because some other man had committed a crime is as guilty as the latter, and his act is just as reprehensible. It is proper, that I should define the crime of murder in the first and second degrees and manslaughter in the first and second degrees. If the defendant on Sept. 6 did wrongfully assault, shoot or wound William McKinley by means alleged in the indictment, and if the act was committed with premeditated design and if the act was the sole and approximate cause of death, and if the defendant knew he was doing wrong at the time, the defendant was guilty of murder in the first degree.

"If the act was not premeditated, he was guilty in the second degree. If the shot was fired accidentally and without premeditation he is guilty of manslaughter in the first degree. It is not necessary for me to discuss the question of manslaughter in the second degree in this case."

Jury Ordered to Retire.

Justice White then [illegible] the trial and ordered them to retire and bring in a verdict. Just before they did so, however, District Attorney Penney requested the judge to charge the jury that the law presumes every individual sane unless prove otherwise, and the court said to them: "The law presumes the defendant in this case sane."

Lawyer Titus also asked the court to charge the jury.

The jury, "that if they were satisfied from evidence that at the time of the committal of the assault the defendant was laboring under such a defect of reason as not to know the quality of the act or that it was wrong, he was not responsible, and the just must acquit."

"I so charge," said the judge.

After the jury had retired to consider the evidence the scene in the court room became dramatic in the extreme. Decorum was somewhat forgotten, and the spectators stood up, and many walked about the room and engaged in conversation.

Every time the door was opened all eyes were turned in that direction, the evident thought in every mind being that the jury would take only a few minutes to agree on a verdict. It was 4:25 when the crier rapped for order, and the jury filed into the room. The clerk read their names, each juror responding "present" as his name was called.

No time was wasted. The jurors did not sit down. Addressing them, Justice White said:

"Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," responded Foreman Wendt.

"What is your verdict?"

"That the defendant is guilty of murder in the first degree."

There was a moment of silence and then a murmur arose from the lips of the crowd. It ended there. There was no handclapping; no cheers. Justice White's voice could be clearly heard in every part of the room when he thanked the jurors for their work and allowed them to go until 11 o'clock today.

Court was at once adjourned.

Czolgosz was immediately handcuffed to his guards and hurried from the court room down stairs to the basement and through the tunnel under Delaware avenue to the jail. He appeared to be in no way affected by the result of the trial.

No Stamps in Commemoration.

Washington, Sept. 25.—The postmaster general has decided that the proposition to issue stamps for general use in commemoration of the late President McKinley is impracticable in view of the length of time required for preparing the issue, and other difficulties. No such stamps, therefore, will be issued.

German Loss in China.

Berlin, Sept. 25.—The total losses of the German force during the campaign in China were as follows: Army—Killed in action, 16; died from wounds, 132; died from accidents, 49; died from disease, 184. Navy—Killed in action, 49; died from wounds, 138; died from accidents, 21; died from disease. 89. Total, 678.

Big Iron Company Cease Operations.

Michigamme, Mich., Sept. 26.—The Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co. will cease operations at Michigamme mine this month. About 50,000 tons of ore have been produced, but five times the value of the total product was expended in preparing the property for operation. About 150 men will be let out by the suspension.

Died at Supper.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 26.—Michael Dunn, an inmate of the soldiers' home, aged 84 years, went to supper apparently well last night, but suddenly fell forward at the table and died before the surgeon arrived. Chronic alcoholism caused paralysis of the heart.

SHY ON THE GRUB

The Restaurant People at State Fair Cleaned Out.

THEN THEY SENT TO DETROIT

Large Crowd Took the Fair People by Surprise—They Will Be Prepared Today, However—Gov. Bliss Will Speak.

Pontiac, Mich., Sept. 26.—Last night found Pontiac, in the heart of a dairy district, sending to Detroit for butter, milk and eggs. The crowd at the races Wednesday cleaned up everything in sight, and even the frankfort man went broke before it was all over. The lunch stands at the state fair grounds had run out of provender shortly after the noon bells, the big dining-room under the grandstand was lucky to have any salt and pepper left, and down town restaurants were forced to try and sell a few bananas or other fruit, as the hot goods had disappeared at the first onslaught.

On Monday the grounds were not really prepared for a big fair and yesterday the culinary department had the same trouble. The sudden change in the weather made it look at daybreak as though the crowd would not run high into the thousands, but one of the fair officials said at 3 o'clock that 30,000 had paid their way in, and anybody can judge what happened. The larder is being replenished, and if governor's day brings a mass of people there will be enough for everybody, so they say.

Manufacturers' day caused the closing of all the Pontiac factories and everybody from here paid tribute to the enterprise of the citizens who made the fair possible. An additional feature was the visit of the municipal gods from Detroit, who came out in a special car on the Northwestern railway and luckily escaped mishaps. Mayor Maybury was at his best. After everything in the line of display had been seen they all went to the grandstand and enjoyed the races, the trapeze act, the diving ponies and other attractions.

The racing was very good and the finishes in many instances caused everybody in the big stand to get up and shout. The race between a Bay City hose cart and a Pontiac fire supply wagon, both drawn by teams of greys, was thrilling, the Bay City team leading until 30 yards from the wire, when the Pontiac pair came by and nosed them out. The judges gave it to Bay City on account of the difference in vehicles, but the Pontiac firemen claim they could win anyhow, although there's a question.

The balloon ascension was again [illegible] people have about given up hopes of seeing it.

This morning Gov. Bliss will make a speech at the Howland building. It is expected that the crowd will be large. The election of state fair officials will also be held.

M. A. C. is Prospering.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 26.—The state board of agriculture was in session at the Hotel Ste. Claire for three hours last night and another session will be held this morning.

President J. L. Snyder of the Agricultural college reported that the enrollment this year was 553, an increase of 35 over last year, and said that the attendance for this term would probably exceed 600, and for the year 700. Of this number about 575 are men and 125 women.

Miss Maud Gilchrist of Illinois, a graduate of Wellesley college and a teacher of 15 years' experience, was elected by the board as dean of the women's department.

The board authorized the continuance of the beet sugar experiments for another year. Every graduate last year in this department at once secured a position in a Michigan beet sugar factory.

Tax Assessments Boosted.

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 26.—State Tax Commissioners Freeman and Sayres are in the city hearing appeals made to the board for a reduction in assessments. W. W. Hannan, the Detroit real estate dealer, was before the board. He is interested in the north half of Harson's island, which was assessed at $10,000 by Supervisor Robertson. The board thinks the assessment should be $30,000, and has placed it at that figure.

Thaddeus Bacon of St. Clair, who was assessed for $75,000 personal property, claimed all he had in personal property was $2,400, and the balance was in government bonds. The board, after hearing his claim, reduced his assessment by $73,000.

Spoils a Graft.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 26.—In the case of the board of supervisors of Kent county against ex-County Treasurer John A. Verkeke, the supreme court has reversed the decision of the lower court, and held that interest on county funds deposited by the treasurer could be recovered.

Smoke Nuisance at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 26.—At a meeting of city officials it was decided to make complaints against 12 factory owners to compel them to comply with the smoke ordinance. Kodak shots of stacks will be introduced as proof against them.

Valuable Horses Killed.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 26.—Two valuable horses, owned by William Harrison, fell 60 feet and were instantly killed yesterday at his gravel pit. The animals were worth $200 each. They backed off the platform.

A New Pastor.

Richmond, Ind., Sept. 26.—Rev. R. N. McNemer has been made pastor of the Parr Memorial Baptist church at Petoskey.

Stood Death Off.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malerial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." AN INDIAN CEREMONY

THE "MEDICINE SWEAT" THAT MAKES THE RED MAN CLEAN.

It Is His Turkish Bath, So to Speak, and It Is to Him a Rite, Both Physical and Spiritual—Making Medicine to the Great Spirit.

Few, if any, of the writers on the habits, folklore and history of the American Indian have devoted any space to the red man's Turkish bath, an institution homemade, to be sure, but a recognized necessity in every camp and a feature of the daily life of the Indian. On the contrary, commentators have conveyed the impression that habits of cleanliness are foreign to the Indian and that he has an inborn aversion to water except for culinary purposes.

By the avidity and frequency with which the Indian indulges in his homemade Turkish bath he proves the fallacy of this belief and shows that he, as well as his white brother, can live up to the precept "Cleanliness is next to godliness," only in the practice the Indian puts cleanliness first.

The term Turkish bath is unknown to the Indian. He calls that method of ablution a "medicine sweat." It is to him a rite both physical and spiritual, for he cleanses his person and then "makes medicine" to his Great Spirit. That the rite is religiously observed was shown by a band of Brule Sioux Indians, who made a journey across the continent to the east and went into encampment in, to them, a strange land.

On their arrival, even before they raised their tepee poles, they erected a "medicine sweat" tent. The framework of this tent is of hoop poles so trained that it is about nine feet in diameter, four feet high, flat topped and almost circular in form.

Just within the framework there is a bedding of straw about two feet wide, and in the center of the tent there is a whole in the ground about three feet in diameter and three feet deep. There are no steam vents or pipes, no marble slabs, no rubbers and no sheets. When the Indian is ready for his "medicine sweat" a number of stones or rocks are heated to almost white heat and dumped into the hole in the ground. Then the red men, 20 or 25 of them, in a costume even scantier than Adam's after the fall, range themselves upon the straw. They sit mummy fashion, their chins on their knees and their arms around their shins, packed so close together that even if they would they could not move.

When they are all ready, blankets, [illegible] the tent is almost airtight, two or three buckets of water are passed in and thrown upon the hot stones and the "medicine sweat" begins. The moment the steam begins to rise the Indians begin a chant, which is kept up without interruption until the sweat is over. Packed together, enveloped in steam so thick that none can see his neighbor, the Indians sit, singing and perspiring for an hour or more. Not an Indian moves. He neither can nor wants to.

At a signal from the chief or the medicine man a section of the tent is torn away, and with a heave and a whoop all the bucks make pellmell for the water. A run and a jump, and in they go. It is just as much sport for the oldest warrior as for the boy who has not yet won his war bonnet. Once more on land, the Indian, having performed a duty he owes to himself and his neighbor, is ready to "make medicine." This is always done after the "medicine sweat"—in fact it is part and parcel of the ceremony, for it is regarded as a ceremony.

The Indian, clean in person and at this moment, before his communion with the God of his fathers, supposed to be equally clean of mind and guileless of soul, now proceeds to the highest point of land in the vicinity of the camp, thus getting as near to the Great Spirit as it is possible to do while on earth. On the way he gathers up a little soil, a stray leaf, some old tobacco quids, a dead fly or bug or two—in fact anything which may be deemed refuse, for he is about to convey to the Great Spirit that he has cleansed his person and that all things unclean have gone from him.

These things that he has gathered he places in a piece of white cloth, which in turn is fastened to the end of a long stick. The other end of the stick is thrust into the ground at the top of the hill or knoll, and the good Indian has made medicine. Two days seldom pass without the repetition of this ceremony. It never varies. The scene may change, the Indian may wander to new lands or be driven to them, but where he is there also is his "medicine sweat" tent and there he "makes medicine."—New York Times.

Ten Years' Trial

The Story of a Soldier's Struggle

By Brigadier General Charles King

eral Melville's with the compliments of the department commander and an invitation to draw up close to the staff, where a far better view could be had, and so it happened that Mrs. Melville and Ethel Grahame sat smiling within the charmed circle, the space parceled off by sentries for the immediate party of the reviewing officials. The general left his station and rode up beside them and doffed his plumed chapeau. "I had hoped to have you ride with us today, Melville," said he, "but I suppose the doctors must have their way. Miss Grahame, I saw you in saddle in the park yesterday, and I envied your escort." The general was nothing if not gallant. "Wonderful how some men recuperate from wounds received in battle," continued the double starred veteran and gazed impressively at Miss Grahame and glanced at Langdon, sitting erect half way across the field. It seemed to the commander that he had put it very neatly, though the lady failed to appear profoundly impressed.

She wished to know the cause of the delay, for the Washoes were now standing at ease. "Oh, the governor and some of his people!" explained the chief, with slight annoyance in his tone. "It seems they have been entertained over at the post, but they're coming now," he added as two carriages, escorted by three or four horsemen, came sweeping over the brow of the northward height. Impatient eyes glanced thitherward, and presently half the waiting line in khaki and dozens among the carriage loads of lookers on were aware that there was a hitch of some kind up toward that end of the field.

"Hello!" said the general. "What's amiss yonder?" for all on a sudden the carriages of the approaching dignitaries had stopped at the sentry line, and there were running and commotion. Then Langdon was seen to spur rapidly to the spot, and in one minute after his appearance on the scene of violent scuffle matters were straightened out. The carriages, with some flustered looking civilians, were driving down to the reviewing point, and the colonel galloped back to his post. Three horsemen presently rode slowly back toward the garrison, and a curious crowd surrounded a little knot of angered and excited men. All in that brief space of time an odd thing had happened.

It seems that Nathan had tendered certain hospitalities to the governor and his attendant officials, that there had been a champagne breakfast prolonged beyond the limits, that Nathan, his adjutant and orderly essayed to escort the carriages of their guests to the reviewing point and that when they reached the sentry lines a brown cheeked, stalwart young fellow had presented arms to the governor, but lowered his bayonet and said "Halt!" to the major.

"I'm escorting the governor of Wash-" "So I see, sir," said the Washoe private, a university lad who knew whereof he spoke, "but my orders are imperative. The governor and the state officials can pass in their carriages. All others must keep off the field."

"This is insolence!" shouted Nathan, flushed with wine and furious at the detention, with the consequent humiliation. "Go on, driver! Out of the way, you!"

The coachman whipped up, knowing no better. The major spurred. His powerful horse sprang forward, but in in a second the lithe westerner had seized him by the bit and, bearing him back, yelled lustily for the corporal of the guard. Mad with rage, Nathan lashed with his hunting crop at the young soldier's head, but in another instant two men, one in the uniform of a lieutenant of infantry, the other in civilian dress, sprang to the aid of the sentry. One of them seized Nathan's left foot in both hands and by an old and well known trick, suddenly heaving, tumbled the raging, red faced officer headforemost out of his saddle. He landed heavily, but labored presently to his feet, choking with fury and well nigh bereft of his senses. The corporal had come with a rush.

"Arrest these men!" roared Nathan. "They've attacked me—an officer on duty—escorting a governor! Put that sentry in the guard tent!"

"The sentry was only doing his duty, sir," began the corporal. "Those were his orders"—

"Orders from that safe robbing scoundrel of a militia colonel out yonder"—

Whack! That was Nathan's last hit for many a day. The young man in civilian dress darted in and landed a scientific swing on the jaw that dropped the luckless officer like a log. Nathan lay for a moment stunned, then looked up, dazed and helpless, into the grave face of Eric Langdon.

"Get your major home at once," the colonel replied to the adjutant's hurried, embarrassed explanation. "The matter shall be fully investigated. Who—who struck you?"

"I did, General Langdon," spoke up the assailant, with blood in his eye and wrath on his tongue. "Captain Martin, late Second Columbias, sir, and I'm ready to answer for it to him or to anybody—here or anywhere. He lashed a sentry in the discharge of his duty, and if that isn't enough, by heaven— Well, you heard what he said?" And the young captain appealed to the crowd.

That evening there was a never to be forgotten scene in front of the colonel's tent in the camp of the Washoes. Six hundred strong, officers and men, massed in solid phalanx, silent, bareheaded, there stood the two battalions, while their spokesman, his voice trembling with emotion, strove to say to the loved and honored commander that the heart of the whole regiment went with the beautiful sword they gave him in parting tribute. Close to the colonel on one side were grouped the governor, his staff and state officers and on the other a large party of officers and ladies, Melville and his household in their midst. Rodney May, with one arm in a sling, had tendered the other, hardly knowing what he did, to Ethel Grahame, who unaccountably had taken it. Hovering about the skirts of the crowd an old darky, bowed and decrepit, was whimpering with joy. On the flanks of the battalions, as though by some spontaneous impulse, were gathered hundreds of other soldiery, regulars from the batteries, volunteers still serving in the neighboring camps, and all were hushed and all were hanging on the words of the soldier spokesman as he told of the scenes of battle across the wide surges of the ocean, of the never failing care of the colonel for his men, of his daring leadership, of his almost fatherly devotion to their wounded and stricken. Vehemently the statesmen applauded every telling point, and the soldiers followed suit, but presently the major came to speak of the future, of the severance of the soldier ties that bound them, of the love and trust and faith with which their hearts would follow their soldier leader, of the pride and confidence with which they hailed the honors still in store for him, and here the Washoes broke loose and roared applause and acclamation, and then came the time to say farewell, but here their orator broke down. "Speak for yourselves, boys," he choked. "I can't say another word."

And "the boys," breaking ranks, bore down on their commander in a tumultuously cheering torrent, officers and men grasping his extended hands, unashamed of the dew that dimmed their eyes, unafraid of rebuke or regulation, and when at last they were dispersed and gone and had cheered to the echo his few brief, heartfelt words of thanks and farewell and May and Melville and the comrades of the old, old days had pressed his hands and he could turn again to see what had become of that beautiful sword it had found its way somehow to Ethel Grahame, who stood gazing after the departing soldiery, her soft eyes swimming in tears.

The sound of cheering borne on the evening breeze swept through the bowered row of officers' quarters in the garrison close at hand, but there was strange hush at Nathan's, whose piazza rustled as a rule with the silks and satins of society. Investigation of the morning episode had been prompt and had seen the fracas from afar. His own staff officer made report, his own orders had been defied, for, thanks to an overeager crowd at a previous ceremony, the chief of staff had written that, except such persons as should be personally bidden, only the general, his staff and escort, with the state officials, should be allowed within the line of sentries. Nathan's self appointment as escort to the governor failed of confirmation. The sentinel had acted strictly in accordance with his orders. The major had committed one of the gravest crimes known to military law, first in refusing to obey and second in daring to strike the sentry. Captain Martin and his associates, late of the Columbias, were interrogated by the judge advocate of the department and bidden to hold themselves in readiness to testify before the court that would be convened forthwith, for Major Nathan had been placed in close arrest.

But that wasn't all. Cresswell was a hard hater and as hard a hitter. Nathan's vile insult had been audible to a dozen bystanders, and, though Langdon had not been allowed to hear of it, Cresswell followed up the rumor and got the exact words. In formulating the charges against the officer it was considered both unnecessary and unwise to refer to them. There was quite enough to dismiss him from the service without allusion to his insane outbreak, but Cresswell wasn't satisfied. He had never abandoned his theory that young Betts was the culprit, and long years after the occurrence and soon after the senior's transfer to another road there leaked a story from the yards that had been suppressed only so long as Betts was influential, and the young man fled from Brentwood between two days, no one knew whither. The matter caused no little talk at the time, for the road made no effort to run him down. It was learned later that a shortage of upward of $1,000 was "squared" by relatives of the fugitive, and that, it was supposed, would end the matter.

Perhaps it might have done so but for Nathan's reiteration of the old slander, and there was a scene in the lobby of the Palace hotel one evening just within the week of the episode, when the president of the Seattle, who had hastened from Chicago in response to "wires" from the Nathans and who had had a long interview with the accused officer that morning and a short one—a very short one—with the chief of staff that afternoon, came sauntering down in evening dress to dinner, a brace of magnates with him. The trio were suddenly accosted by Judge Cresswell, who presented his card and delivered himself substantially as follows:

"Mr. Barclay, you were general manager of the Seattle at the time of a certain safe robbery in the Big Horn office at Brentwood. You were satisfied of the innocence of Mr. Langdon, because immediately after his discharge by the Big Horn you tendered him as good a position on your road. Is not this true?"

Barclay flushed. He was a man accustomed to dictate and to be approached only with much show of deference. Triple doors and keepers guarded his office against intrusion, and a most icy reserve of manner discouraged all attempts at conversation except among his chosen intimates. But here was this confounded Kentuckian—he knew him well by sight and repute—accosting him with scant ceremony in a public place. He promptly froze, but Cresswell warmed to his work.

"I see it is and that you distinctly

Marvelous Cures:::

BY

DR. W. C WALKER

The Eminent Specialist of Detroit, Mich., late from the Polyclinic of the Augusta Hospital, Berlin, will make the following regular monthly visits.

Tecumseh at Lilley House,
Wednesday, Oct. 9.
Office hours 9 a m to 7:30 p m
Adrian at Emery House,
Saturday, Oct. 21.
One day each month

Consultation Free.

The most Successful Methods in the Treatment of all Chronic Diseases Known to Medical Science

Dr. Walker will take only such cases that in his judgement can be benefitted or cured. A candid opinion given in each case.

☞THE PUBLIC PRESS SAYS:
Dr Walker is one of the most skillful Specialists now before the public

REMEMBER DATE OF VISIT

By the latest scientific researches both by improved instruments and methods, the Doctor is enabled to discover the true nature of the disease and locate the organ or parts affected and many diseases and complications which have heretofore proved most obstinate to the Medical profession yield like magic under his skill and systematic treatment.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It costs nothing to see him, for consultation is free and his prices for treatment are within the reach of all. He is a friend to the afflicted and will turn none away unaided. The merchant mingles with the artisan while seeking relief at his hands and hundreds are cured every year.

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs Martha Keller, of Cohoctah township, Livingston county who has been seriously afflicted with a complication of diseases for years, voluntarily makes the following statement. She says: I had been a great sufferer with catarrh of the stomach, heart failure and nervous debility. I would have peculiar nervous spells come over me and I would faint away; have been carried in the house more than once in that condition. My heart and stomach troubled me terribly all the time, having tried a number of doctors without receiving any permanent relief. I saw the advertisement of Dr. Walker in the papers, also hearing of the doctor's many cures. I decided to call at the hotel and see him. I at once placed myself under Dr. Walker's treatment. I improved right along and am now happy to say that all of the above symptoms have left me. To have my stomach, heart and nerves feel natural once more causes me to feel very grateful. I most cheerfully recommended the doctor to all afflicted ones. Signed MRS. MARTHA KELLER.

I was taken with Lagrippe last winter, soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system; my sufferings at times were intense and intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I go around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health.
Signed CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was."
Signed JAMES B. GILDAY.
Yargerville. Monroe County, Mich. June 28. 1901.

Sick all his Life. Read the statement of another well known citizen of Monroe county: Mr. W. W. Murphy, of Samaria, who had been almost a constant sufferer all his life from stomach and liver complications. He says: "I have found Dr. W. C. Walker's treatment a great help to me. I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment. Had tried everything I could hear of before, with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker." Signed W. W. MURPHY.
Samaria, Monroe Co., Mich., June 25, 1901

Mr. A. C. Crittenden, a well-known business man of Carleton, Mich., states: I took a course of treatment of Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, some 2 years ago and I take pleasure in saying the doctor made a permanent cure of my case. There has been no return of former trouble.
Signed A. C. Crittenden.
Carleton, Monroe co., Mich., Sept. 10, 1901.

One on the Moon.

The vargaries of the moon have been so often described in verse and love story that it seems a shame to make that poor, overworked "bright regent of the heavens" stand for an ordinary prosaic tale. But the Detroiter who went hunting in the north woods thought it a pretty fair joke, even though it was at the expense of the long-suffering moon.

The party was in the hands of one of those rare old guides who make a living finding and losing people and steering hunters out of the way of game. They had got mixed up in the tall timber one night and were vainly trying to find their way out to the clearing. The guide was as much at sea as anybody.

"Where is the moon?" said one of the party. "Where does it rise in this locality?"

"Well, ye can't tell anythin' 'bout it," drawled the guide; "half the time it doesn't come up at all."

Town Is Scared.

Recent mysterious attempts at assassination have thrown the towns of Nijne-Faguilsk and Kombra, in the Perm government of Russia, into a state of panic. Several of the inhabitants of these towns, among them a policemen and a priest, have received packets by post from an unknown sender. The policeman came into possession of a very elegant cigar case but as he pressed the spring a violent detonation occurred, and he fell dead. To the priest a small case was sent, apparently containing a watch. As he was on the point of opening it he remembered the policeman and stopped in time. Several other persons who received similar presents handed them over to the police. They were opened with great caution and found to be filled with nitro-glycerine.

AVERY & CO.

Mrs. Jerome Cleveland, who was attending the Adrian fair Thursday, was riding from the fair grounds to the depot in a bus when a wheel ran off and the occupants were thrown to the ground. Mrs. Cleveland escaped with a broken arm, while a gentleman in the bus received a broken leg and several of the party received internal injuries. It is a miracle they were not all killed.

We the undersigned agree to close our respective places of business, each evening at 7:30 o'clock, from Oct., 14, 1901 to March 31, 1902, excepting Saturday nights, the night before Thanksgiving and two weeks before Christmas from the 11th to the 25th.

BASE BALL.

The manager of the Tecumseh Ball Team received a telegram from the manager of the American League, of Detroit, desiring to come here for a game next Monday. Our boys have certainly gained a reputation as this is the third time that Leagues have wanted to come here.

The following table gives the batting and fielding record and percentages of the Tecumseh ball players this season.

	G	AB	R	H	PO	A	E	Bat	Field
Harris	26	119	29	41	49	62	11	.344	.909

EXPOSITION COMFORT.

Time and Trouble Saved and Avoided at Statler's—the Great Pan-American Hostelry.

The time lost and trouble entailed by trying to attend an Exposition that is remote from the large centers of a big city, and therefore from the good hotels, is entirely obviated at the Pan-American at Buffalo.

The Exposition management are to be congratulated on the fact that right against their grounds, and indeed, forming of itself a distinct attraction, they have what is conceded to be the most wonderful hostelry ever built—namely Statler's Hotel.

Although only three stories high, the enormous building has 2100 rooms and can easily accommodate over 5000 people. The dining room will seat 1200 people to a single meal with out crowding, and so perfect is the organization and equipment that it is no uncommon thing for a whole trainload of visitors, numbering well into the hundreds to be taken in charge and comfortably accommodated without causing so much as a ripple of excitement. A good, clean, comfortable room, together with breakfast and evening dinner can be readily secured for $2.00 or $2.50 a day, while those who prefer to board outside good room may be had on the European plan for $1.00 and $1.50.

Intending visitors to Buffalo, therefore, can well afford to turn a deaf ear to all the stories told by runners and touts on the trains and elsewhere about the impossibility of getting accommodations and extortionate charges for same, Statler's can and will take care of all who come at most moderate figures, while in addition to the convenience of being right on the grounds all the time and of being able to view the glorious illumination at night from Statler's towers and terraces without the fatigue of a return journey from more remote quarters is well worth a traveler's consideration.

Mrs. Caroline Smalledge.

At the age of 82, Mrs. Caroline Smallidge died Tuesday night at the home of her son Frank, on Jefferson Ave. A stroke of paralysis caused her death, although she has been in feeble health for over three years.

She was born in New York, and resided in Tecumseh for a number of years, but for the past thirty years has made her home with her son in Detroit.

The funeral was held in Detroit at three o'clock Thursday afternoon, from the residence. The remains arrived here last night, and the burial occured at Brookside Cemetery to-day.

Five children survive her, Frank, of Detroit, William, of this place, Mrs. G. E. Burnham and Mrs. C. W. Renyolds, of Detroit, and Mrs. James Berringer, of Los Angeles, Cal.

AUTUMN WEDDING

Solemnized at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moore at Palmyra Yesterday

MILDRED B. MOORE DR. WILLIAM ANDERSON

Two Popular Young People. The Bride, at one Time, a Teacher in Tecumseh Public Schools.

The marriage of Miss Mildred B. Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moore, of Palmyra, to Dr. William Anderson was celebrated at five o'clock last night at the handsome country home of the bride's father. The rooms were beautifully decorated down stairs with autumn leaves and asters and occasional clusters of dahlies.

Foliage and white asters in one corner of the spacious parlor formed a bower, where the vows were exchanged and the ring blessed. Misses Floy Freeman and Madge Hialey announced the approach of the bride with the beautiful song, "O Promise Me," accompanied by Miss Florence Eccles at the piano, who played during the ceremony.

At the close of the second verse of the song, down the handsomely decorated stair-case came Miss Lena Arnold in yellow organdie with blue trimmings and Miss Edith Cotton in pink, and as they entered the parlor drew a ribbon aisle through which passed the groom and his best man, Mr. Marks, followed by the bride and bridesmaid, Miss Jennie Gilkey, of Adrian. They were met beneath the bower by Rev. Humphrey, who pronounced them man and wife.

The bride wore ivory white silk. The full skirt swept the floor in rich folds, and had no trimmings save ruchings of chiffon. The bodice was adorned with a deep bertha of rich lace and shirred chifion yoke and sleeves. She carried a great bunch of American beauty roses.

Miss Moore has been a teacher in our public schools for the past two years and has gained many friends here.

Dr. Anderson is a graduate of the schools at Pittsburg, Pa., and has gained a good practice.

They have the best wishes of a host of friends. After congratulations the guests were invited to the dining room, where a three course dinner was served by Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Jolly. The guests were obliged to leave before finding out the destination of the newly married pair. Presents were many and beautiful and among them was a check for $500 from the bride's father.

Dr. and Mrs. Frost, Mrs. Arnold, Misses Thomas, Hartbeck, Cotton and Gilkey, Welchi, C. A Slayton and wife, Mrs. Pulver and daughter Bessie, L. M. Kellogg, and wife Fred Frost, Lester Heesen, of Tecumseh, Mr. and Mrs. Bingham, of Pittsburg, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Spars, of Aurora, Ill., Mrs. Gilkey, of Adrian, were the guests from away.

A Health Talk to Ladies.

Mrs. Martha Abbott Baughman will give a free lecture to the ladies of Tecumseh at the Friends church Wednesday, Oct. 2 at 2:30 p. m. All are cordially invited.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Anderson desire to thank their kind friends and neighbors for their assistance in their time of bereavement.

Another Railroad Accident.

The Detroit Southern killed a team of horses and smashed a wagon last Monday at the crossing just north of the village on River road. They were being driven south by a farmer from Huron township, who was accompanied by his little girl. His name we could not learn. The horses became frightened at an approaching street car, and one of them being a colt, the farmer got out of his wagon, taking the little girl out with him, and started to lead them down the road. Just as he got on the track he saw an engine backing up going north, and letting go of the horses he jumped off the track. It is said the engine carried no light in front of it. The horses were killed outright.—Trenton Times.

The Best Business College.

In selecting a business training school the best is not only the cheapest, but it is the only one to be considered. Business colleges are a feature of modern life, as business is now a science which is studied as it never was before. The best business college in America, in every point of age efficiency, enterprise and proved results, is the Detroit University, Detroit, Mich. It points to fifty years of success, and has educated more students and found more positions for them than all business colleges in Michigan combined. All interested should write for illustrated reading matter which is mailed free.

In an early issue of The Saturday Evening Post Dr. Nansen, the eminent Artic Explorer, will describe the various pole-seeking expedition of the year. The importance of this paper lies in the author's comments, and his predictions as to the success of the different parties.

A Warning.

I took a trolley ride over east yesterday afternoon just by way of observing the holiday. Coming back a stranger to me got on at a small station and sat down beside me. He was long, lean and lanky. First he looked out of the car window and then at me. Settling deeper in his seat he suddenly remarked

"Do you drink young man?"

I said I didn't mind if I did.

He said he would mind, though. "Furthermore," he continued, "I am surprised that a man of your modest appearance, with eyes donoting Christian breeding, a forehead denoting good moral character and a mouth too pure to withstand the taint of intemperance, should be willing to indulge in the flowing bowl."

He was about the meanest man I ever struck. I went to the smoking compartment and pulled at my pipe.

Richard Mansfield's Rebuke.

Richard Mansfield is known to have very decided notions upon deportment and matters of etiquette. With a friend, who is authority for the story, Mr. Mansfield rode uptown on a Broadway car the other afternoon. Both men had seats for a time until, at the intersection of a shopping street, the car became crowded with women. Both offered their seats to the nearest women. The one who accepted Mr. Mansfield's courtesy slid into his seat without a word. The actor raised his silk hat.

"I beg your pardon," he said slowly.

The woman looked up apparently in surprise.

"I didn't say anything," she volunteered.

"Pardon me for my mistake," returned Mansfield in a kindly tone. "Pardon me. I thought you said, 'Thank you!'"

Lord Kelvin's Long Service.

Lord Kelvin, who is 77 years of age, has the distinction of having occupied a university chair for a longer consecutive period than any other university professor now living. In his varsity days, though the fact is forgotten, Lord Kelvin was an athlete of much more than ordinary prowess, and at Cambridge, in spite of the work which won for him the proud position of second wrangler, he found time to win the "silver sculls." A native of Belfast, Sir William Thomson, as the eminent inventor and electrician was known until 1892, when he was created a baron, held the chair of natural philosophy in Glasgow university from 1846 till 1899, and with the exception of Sir G. G. Stokes he is the oldest Fellow of the Royal Society.

Place for a Cheap Man.

A Memphis man was contemplating a visit to Washington, and, never having been in the capital, asked a friend about the best hotel for him to stop at. The friend, who was an old Washingtonian, said:

"How much do you want to pay a day?"

The other thought a moment and replied:

"Oh, I suppose about a dollar and a half."

"Well, then, my friend, I think that the best think you can do is to report to the police station for lodging."

AFTER 20 YEARS

A Lady of Grand Rapids Strikes the Right Thing.

Many extraordinary cases of the work of the little conqueror are coming to light in Michigan. Hundreds of them have been investigated by our representative and each but gives added strength to those which have gone before. Such well deserved words of praise are daily showered on this modern wonder worker from all parts of the union. Speaking of her experience a lady of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Jas. Gardner, who resides at No. 309 Second street, says: "For over twenty years I was bothered with kidney trouble and despite treatment by physicians and using almost every remedy that came to my notice I received no permanent relief until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. No one except those who have been through the mill of kidney complaint can tell the torture that one endures. The constant pain across my back extending up the right side, totally unable to lie on my right side, the stiffness and numbness of my limbs; the excruciating pain, is something more easy to think about than to express. Many a time my husband has had to rub my back to get up the circulation before I was able to get on my feet. My family prevailed on me to try Doan's Kidney Pills but as I had used dozens of other remedies I had very little hope of finding relief. They persisted in their advice and in the fall of 1897 I used two boxes. I felt like a different person. I I was in better health than I had been in years. The pain in my back left, I slept well at night. I could do my work as well as I ever did, and I give the entire credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. I make this statement so that other women who suffer as I suffered may be in a position to know what to use if they wish to get rid of that too prevalent disease, kidney complaint."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.. Remember the name Doan and take no substitute.

Preaching by Proxy.

The newest plan for attracting people to church is to deliver the sermon by means of a phonograph. The credit for the idea belongs to Rev. T. Selby Henrey, incumbent of St. George's, Old Brentford, who has introduced it with considerable success. Men from the gas works, women from a laundry in the neighborhood and many others attended the first service in their working clothes—which is precisely what was desired.

And the best shall come back to you.

Give love, and love to your heart will flow,
A strength in your utmost need;
Have faith, and a score of hearts will show
Their faith in your word and deed.

For life is the mirror of king and slave;
'Tis just what you are and do;
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

A MIXED MENU.

A Story Illustrating an Ingenious Plan For Keeping a Servant.

By Charlotte W. Eastmans.

It was a charming little sitting room in which Mrs. Mason sat sewing dainty stitches. Before her stood the servant girl, who, with a stolid stare, announced that she had found a place down town.

"But, Mary, you surely would not leave me without help," Mrs. Mason answered.

"I got a place where I get t'ree dollar."

"I would give you $3, but you agreed to work for me for $2.50 if I would teach you to talk and do the work."

"I got anoder place down town. I say I go next week."

Entreaty and persuasion were alike in vain. It all ended with, "I go next week."

One year from this time Mrs. Mason was a wiser if not a better woman, and when Lena announced, "I got another place down town," she merely answered, "Very well," for this was the third girl that she had trained for the woman down town.

When Mr. Mason came home to dinner that night, he saw at once that some shadow had clouded the domestic heaven, but when his wife had poured out her tale of woe she proceeded to lay before him plans for her future campaign. When he had fully caught her idea, he laughed long and loud.

"You're a mighty smart little woman, Maria, but if you try that game you'll fall down," he announced when she asked for his opinion of her plans.

"I'll not fall down any harder than I have in my other plans, and I believe I can do it."

"All right, I'll back you," he promised encouragingly.

Assured of her husband's co-operation, Mrs. Mason very willingly agreed to take Lena's cousin, Christina, who had just arrived from the fatherland. In the week which intervened before the advent of the new domestic one might have supposed Mrs. Mason to be a blue stocking of the deepest dye, for she carried a pencil stuck in her hair and stopped to jot down burning thoughts on whatever was most convenient to rest her notebook upon. The baby's back or the bottom of the dishpan were alike available. When the new Christina appeared, fresh and rosy and clean, she started at her task with vigor. Her former experience taught her the best method of instruction, and, taking up one article after another, she told the names distinctly and encouraged Christina to repeat it until she was sure of it.

The first performance in the domestic act was to fry potatoes for luncheon.

"This, Christina," said Mrs. Mason as she held up the spider, "is a kettle, and these are eggs," pointing to the potatoes.

After this the bread and the meat, the crackers and the raisins, the coffee and the lemons, changed places, and 50 of the commonest utensils in the kitchen and the dining room were in a confusion that had no order except in the fertile brain of Mrs. Mason. But she had her list well memorized, and her mistakes were few. Mr. Mason gave her enthusiastic support, and, though he feared to give an order to Christina without first consulting his wife and his appealing look at the table when he held up the cracker jar to Christina and asked for more raisins was very amusing, he gave his wife unstinted admiration for the glib manner in which she could order a six pound bread, fried rare, or a small piece of roast beef for the water pitcher.

Unsuspecting Christina worked hard at her part of the game, evidently desirous of fitting herself as soon as possible for the "t'ree dollar place" down town. She jabbered in her native tongue gladly with her friends, and her English, that chance might call into use, never intruded on the ground with which Mrs. Mason had tampered. The excitement of her experiment added quite a little interest to the usually monotonous work of training a green girl, and Mrs. Mason taught her many mysteries in salads and soups that she had heretofore kept as strictly private knowledge. Christina had reached that stage in her development when Mrs. Mason could give an order for dinner and go out for an afternoon with some assurance that a palatable, well served dinner would await her return. She knew that the time was near at hand for the inevitable announcement, and so when Christina said, a little more shyly than some of the former girls, "My cousin, she got me place where I see her every day; the woman, she say she glad to get girl what you make; she have your girl anoder time," Mrs. Mason answered cheerily:

"All right, Christina, you can go right along. I'll get along without a girl for awhile, but Mr. Mason is going to bring company home tonight, and I want a very nice dinner."

Christina smiled at so willing an

Facial Adornment.

For some inexcusable act of impudence and rebellion Bridget had received two week's pay and a notice to quit Mrs. Highmore's service immediately.

"Ye've accused me o' wearin' flashy joolry, too, mem," snapped Bridget, as she hastily gathered her belongings together, "but I'd rather wear that th'n th' ugly old rings ye're always displayin' yesilf wheniver ye go out!"

"What ugly old rings?" asked Mrs. Highmore, indignantly.

"Undher yere eyes, mem!" replied Bridget, slamming the kitchen door behind her as she went out.

No Ground For Hesitancy.

Frette—Do you know, it's got so with me now that when I start out in the morning to go down to business I have to stop at the corner to study which route will be the least apt to confront me with a creditor.

Callous—Thank goodness, I am no longer a victim of any such sensation as that.

Frette—What! You surely don't mean to say by that you don't owe anyone.

Callous—Far from it. I simply mean that there is no direction I can take that will insure any such exemption, and as a consequence it dosen't pay to hesitate.

THREE RIVERS SCHOOLS CLOSED.

A Case of Smallpox Stirs Up the Town.

Three Rivers, Mich., Sept. 26.—This city is greatly wrought up over a case of smallpox which appeared in the high school. The schools have been closed for a time, and lessons will be given out through the papers to prevent loss of work. A few days ago, and on Monday night, it was diagnosed as smallpox. He was a student in the tenth grade of the first ward school. Other children of the same family are in the first, third and ninth grades. A general vaccination followed, and the authorities are confident of confining the disease to the one case.

FACTORY PLANT ABANDONED.

Colby-Hinkley Buildings Slipping Into Benton Harbor Canal.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 26.—The large plant of the Colby-Hinkley fruit package factory is slipping into Benton Harbor ship canal, and all the buildings have been vacated. The caving away of the property is due to the dredging operations being conducted by the government. All of the dockage the entire length of the canal has caved in, and much valuable property has been lost.

Woman Found Destitute.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 26.—Mrs. Mary Carey was found here in a pitiful state of destitution in her home on Elm street. She was lying on the floor in the kitchen in the midst of filthy surroundings, weak for lack of food and care, yet when the officers wanted to take her to the county house she resisted desperately, and force was necessary to remove her.

Brakeman Lost His Leg.

Niles, Mich., Sept. 26.—Frank Shaughnessy, a switchman in the local Michigan Central yards, in attempting to board a moving car, slipped and fell in such a manner that his left leg was cut off above the knee. It is thought he will die. Shaughnessy same here from Jackson a short time ago, where his parents reside.

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that i the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insiduous consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

Why He Kept Silence.

At an evening party a gentleman related an adventure in which he had been the principal actor, and, seeing unmistakable shadows of doubt on the faces of his hearers, he appealed to a friend who was present and who had witnessed the circumstances to corroborate his statement.

To his utter confusion his friend denied all knowledge of the affair.

Meeting some time afterward the suspected Ananias said:

"Is it possible that you can have forgotten the circumstance to which I referred at Mrs. A.'s party the other night?"

"Certainly not, my dear fellow," replied his friend, "but I could see that everyone present looked upon you as an incorrigible liar, and I had too much regard for my character to risk being taken for another, hence my decreet silence."

In Doubt.

"I judge from your conversation," said the carping person, "that you assume to be an optimist."

"Oh, yes. It's just as well to look on the bright side."

"You undertake to demonstrate that 'whatever is is right,' and all that sort of thing."

"That would be the tendency of my arguments."

"Yes."

Pretty Children

"We have three children. Before the birth of the last one my wife used four bottles of MOTHER'S FRIEND. If you had the pictures of our children, you could see at a glance that the last one is healthiest, prettiest and finest-looking of them all. My wife thinks Mother's Friend is the greatest and grandest remedy in the world for expectant mothers."—Written by a Kentucky Attorney-at-Law.

MOTHER'S FRIEND prevents nine-tenths of the suffering incident to childbirth. The coming mother's disposition and temper remain unruffled throughout the ordeal, because this relaxing, penetrating liniment relieves the usual distress. A good-natured mother is pretty sure to have a good-natured child. The patient is kept in a strong, healthy condition, which the child also inherits. Mother's Friend takes a wife through the crisis quickly and almost painlessly. It assists in her rapid recovery, and wards off the dangers that so often follow delivery.

Money in Marsh Reeds.

A new industry is promised for North Carolina in the discovery of the matting reed in its river marshes. It has long been said that matting could be made only in China, because the reed suitable for its manufacture was found only in that country. Recently reed has been found growing in the greatest profusion in the waters of the Trent and Neuse rivers above Newburn, N. C., which experts state is identical with that used in China.

SIXTEEN INJURED

Wabash Passenger Train Rolled Down an Embankment.

CARRIED ONE HUNDRED PEOPLE

Train Left the Track and Coaches Turned Bottom Side Up—Many People Badly Bruised—Three Are Fatally Injured.

Omaha, Sept. 28.—A through passenger train on the Wabash from St Louis to Omaha was wrecked yesterday 11 miles southeast of Council Bluffs. The entire train, consisting of mail and baggage cars, two day coaches, a chair car and a Pullman sleeper, rolled down an 18-foot embankment and turned bottom side up the engine alone remaining on the track. The engine stopped with the forward trucks on the edge of the bridge over Indian creek. The train carried nearly a hundred passengers. Three persons were perhaps fatally injured, 16 seriously hurt and a score of other persons received minor bruises.

The badly hurt are: Conductor Arthur W. Wilson, Council Bluffs, side and hand badly crushed, internal injuries, may not recover; Mrs. George Rue, Silver City, Ia., several ribs broken, hip crushed and internal injuries, left at farm house; infant daughter of A. M. Wilson, Tekamah, Neb., head crushed, will probably die.

Among those less seriously hut are Mrs. Geo. Kammerer, Dodge, Neb.; Mrs. F. S. Mattox, Cincinnati; Mrs. W. A. Dalston, Fullerton, Neb.; Frank Smith, Council Bluffs; Mrs. A. M. Wilson, F. M. Secrest, Eldorado, Kan.; C. W. Salter, Eldorado, Kan.; Mrs. Hand, Shenandoah, Ia.

R. A. Addick, Imogene, Ia., received a scalp wound and had a narrow escape from death. A score of others were more or less injured, some having gashes caused by glass and broken seats. Some were taken to hospitals and others to the hotels at Council Bluffs and a number were brought to this city.

A wrecking and relief train, with physicians, was sent to the scene of wreck at noon. Most of the injured were taken to a farm house till relief could arrive. Passengers say the train was running about 30 miles an hour when the accident occurred. The engineer says that just after the train left Moneola and as it was nearing what is known as Madman's Crossing, the engine left the track but again gained the rails, although the tender went down the bank with the remainder of the train. The cause of the wreck is thought to be the spreading of rails on the curve where it occurred. The track is badly blocked and it will be necessary to run trains over the Burlington between Malvern, Ia., and Omaha. It is not expected the track will be cleared before noon today.

English Soldiers Like Us.

London, Sept. 28.—Gen. Gaselee, who was commander of British forces in China, was interviewed regarding the troops in China. He said the Americans were especially well-equipped with hospitals and commissariat and spared no expense in making their troops comfortable. He added: "We always got on splendidly with our American comrades. It is most important that we should keep in with these fine soldiers. Both the officers and men seemed to me to be full of soldierly spirit and capable of great things. All ranks of our army got on splendidly with them, and I feel sure that such intercourse helped to cement the friendship which, I trust, will always exist between us."

Communicated in Mid Ocean.

Queenstown, Sept. 28.—The Cunard line steamer Lucania, which sailed from New York Sept. 21, for Liverpool, and arrived here at 2:57 p. m. Friday, reports having communicated for two hours with the steamer Campania (of the same line, which left Liverpool Sept. 21, by way of Queenstown Sept. 22 for New York) in mid ocean by means of the wireless telegraphy. The shortest distance in which communication was effected was 33 miles, and the longest 65 miles. Many messages were exchanged.

Embezzler Captured.

New York, Sept. 28.—William Hoeppner, a former confidential bookkeeper for the A. W. Faber Co. of this city, who dhisappeared June 18 last after having, .. is alleged, embezzled between $30,000 and $40,000 from the firm, has been arrested at Buenos Ayres, Argentine. This fact was announced at police headquarters today, where it was also said that extradition papers would be secured at once for his return. His whereabouts were discovered through his family sailing Aug. 19 ostensibly for Rio Janeiro.

Venezuela is Hard Up.

Willemstad, Island of Curacoa, Sept. 28 (via Haitian cable).—It is again asserted in well-informed circles at Caracas that President Castro will declare war on Colombia at the end of the month. The Venezuelan government is without financial resources and will, it is said, shortly use the methods of South American dictatorships and proceed to raise funds by force. Lack of confidence in the government is manisted everywhere in Venezuela.

Tried to Blame Bulgaria.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 28.—The Bulgarian government denies the statement of the Turkish government that the abductors of Miss Helen Stone, the American missionary, sought refuge in Bulgaria. A search for the missing missionary, which was instituted in this country, has proved fruitless. The frontier guard has been reinforced to prevent any possible passage of brigands.

Wife Would Not Relent.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 30.—Geo. Neagles in August skipped out and went to Detroit, where he obtained employment. His wife swore out a warrant for his arrest for non-support and he was brought back a week ago. He tried to make up with her, but she refused to relent. He was given 30 days in jail because he could not give a bond to support his wife.

Farmer's Big Loss.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 30.—The barn of Marvin Cummings in Richfield was burned to the ground with its contents, consisting of 25 tons of hay, six acres of beans, two carriages, a binder and some cloverseed and grain. Thre horses and two cows which were the barn perished.

HE LOST HIS WIFE

Wisconsin Man Put His Wife on the Boat.

THEN STEPPED ON THE DOCK

And Entered a Buffet to Get a Drink—Steamer Moved Out and Left Him— He is Searching Now Everywhere.

St. Joseph, Mich., Sept. 30.—What will probably be the concluding incident of the Gretna Green season is being enacted now. Abel A. Sternberg of Milwaukee has lost his wife and is using every known device to locate her.

Mr. Sternberg and Erine M. Strubel were married here Friday. At 9 o'clock in the evening they went to the boat dock to take the steamer. Mrs. Sternberg took a seat in a cabin while her husband went down stairs to the clerk's office to engage a stateroom. While down stairs the husband went upon the dock and stepped into the Riverside buffet.

When he left the saloon the boat had departed and as he stood on the dock he could see her lights moving down the harbor. He was frantic. He telegraphed to Milwaukee yesterday, but could not find his wife. He has gone there now to look for her. Sternberg fears she has an idea that he gave her the slip purposely.

A CLOSE CALL.

Judge H. D. Smith Shot at While on a Train.

Cassopolis, Mich., Sept. 30.—While Judge Harsen D. Smith, formerly of the state board of pardons, was coming home from Chicago on a Grand Trunk passenger train some one shot through the car window the bullet grazing the judge's neck, just deep enough to draw blood. The train stopped but no sign of the perpetrator was found. The accident occurred just south of Olivers, Ind.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Michigan pensions were granted Saturday as follows: Original—Samuel G. Tripp, Grand Haven, $12. Increase—Ebenezer Lockwood, Dundee, $8; Charles W. Barton, Fremont, $12; Alexander Brown, Nashville, $8; Charles E. Luscomb, Sumner, $12; Albert W. Veness, Shadyside, $10; Nelson Barcume, St. Louis, $10; Michael W. Gaynor, Central Lake, $8; John McNeil, Tyre, $10; David D. Shannon, Big Rapids, $17; Norman Sylvester, Kingsley, Grand Rapids, $8. Widows—Minor of John Butler, Big Rapids, $10; Wm. Young, father, Jones, $12.

A Flimsy Excuse.

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 30.—Elmer J. McCormick, principal stockholder of the McCormick Saddlery Co., was on the stand in the bankruptcy proceedings and admitted having taken a quantity of leather from the store in the night time, but stated that he did not want his men to know of his hard-up condition, and if there was no leather there they could not work. The leather was afterward sold. He said his brother, Byron McCormick, had sold the car of harness to Robert Beamer of Lapeer, but he did not know the details of the transaction.

Not Used to It Yet.

Petoskey, Mich., Sept. 30.—Herbert Brown of Prairieville, Mich., came to Petoskey last week to claim his bride, Miss Genevieve Brainard. After the ceremony the happy couple saw "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and the next morning decided to take a trip to the "Soo" and boarded an excursion train. After the train had passed Bay View the conductor called for tickets. The groom handed him one. "Another ticket, please," said the conductor. "Jerusalem, I forgot to get one for her!" gasped the groom—and he had to pay full fare.

M. M. A. Policy Unchanged.

Orchard Lake, Mich., Sept. 30.—About 100 cadets are attending the fall term of Michigan Military academy. Seventy-five per cent of the old students have returned. It is announced that the death of Col. Rogers will not affect the policy or future of the institution. Maj. H. C. Rogers, U. S. A., on a leave of absence, has taken charge of the school. Several minor cadet captains are rendering valuable assistance to Maj. Rogers.

Drug War Is Ended.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 30.—The cut rate drug war has been settled. Druggist Salisbury discontinues his conspiracy suit against the other druggists of the city and the Michigan Drug Co. and raises his prices. His opponents remove Salisbury from their black lists and allow him to buy his drugs as before the fight. The settlement is a compromise.

Three Michigan People Drowned.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Sept. 30.—A sail boat containing seven persons capsized on West lake, eight miles south of the city, late Sunday afternoon and Mrs. Peter Krondyke, P. Van Halst and Miss Edith Maud were drowned. The body of Mrs. Krondyke, whose clothing caught on the boat, was recovered. The others are still in the lake.

Could Not Prove It.

Calumet, Mich., Sept. 30.—William Hicks, arrested last Monday charged with attempting to dynamite the saloon of Joseph Stukel, has been released on motion of the prosecutor, because of inadequate evidence. The lives of fully 50 people were endangered. The proprietor swore he heard Hicks's voice at the front door just before the explosion.

U. of M. Lecture Course.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 30.—Speakers for this season's lecture course before the Uuniversity of Michigan Good Government club will be: Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, Hon. Luther Lafin Mills, Col. A. K. McClure, Bishop John L. Spaulding and Hon. John P. Altgeld. Gov. Odell of New York and Minister Wu are possibilities.

State Recovers $3,287.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 30.—The state of Michigan recently recovered from the general receiver of the Granite State Provident association $3,287, which had been paid out by the board of auditors for the local receiver as expenses of litigation. The money was credited to the general fund of the state.

A BLOODY BATTLE

Only Twenty-Four Men Left of a Company.

SURPRISED BY INSURGENTS

A Fierce Conflict Took Place on the Island of Samar—Company of Ninth Infantry Was Attacked at Breakfast and More Than Fifty Killed.

Manila, Sept. 30.—A disastrous fight between United States troops and insurgents occurred Saturday in the island of Samar, near Balangiga. A large body of insurgents attacked Company C, Ninth infantry, only 24 members of the company escaping. All the others are reported to have been killed.

The company were at breakfast when attacked and made a determined resistance, but the overwhelming numbers of the insurgents compelled them to retreat. Of the survivors, who have arrived at Basey, 11 are wounded.

According to the latest returns, the strength of the company was 72. The survivors include Capt. Thomas W. Connell, First Lieut. Edward A. Bumpus and Dr. R. S. Griswold, surgeon.

Capt. Edwin V. Bookmiller of the Ninth infantry reports that Gen. Hughes is assembling a force to attack the insurgents. The insurgents captured all the stores and ammunition of the company and all rifles except 26.

A well-known official of the government, in speaking of this outbreak against the American forces in Samar, said he regarded it as a consequence of the assassination of President McKinley. In all probability the insurgents had received, he said, only meager reports of the tragedy and possibly believed the shooting to be the result of some popular outbreak against the president. The natives had seized the opportunity in the flickering hope of retrieving some of their lost ground.

The news created a sensation in official circles. It is the first severe reverse that has occurred for a long time.

What the Scotchmen Say.

Glasgow, Sept. 30.—Clyde yachtsmen frankly admit that the Columbia is a marvelously good boat. They consider the fact that a two-year-old yacht should have hung so close to the counter of the Shamrock II. when running free makes the contest more difficult even for the British. Yachtsmen and designers alike declare that if the Shamrock II. is to win the cup she ought to have beaten the Columbia by nearer than three minutes on the turn to the windward. Surprise is expressed that the challenger should not have saved the time allowance in the run before the wind, but it is hoped that in the triangular course her reaching powers will gain for her the victory.

Dr. Wm. C. Gray Dead.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Rev. Dr. William C. Gray, the venerable editor of the interior, a publication of the Presbyterian church, is dead at his home at Oak Park. Dr. Gray, who was in his 70th year, underwent a surgical operation just before he left Chicago for his summer vacation in the Wisconsin woods. When he returned a few weeks ago, he was in a weakened condition, due not only to the operation, but to the growing infirmities of age. He grew generally weaker and for several days his friends had realized that there was no hope for his recovery.

No Fear of Uprising.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Mr. J. N. Leger, the minister from Hayti to the United States, expressed surprise at the report coming by way of Kingston, Jamaica, of the arrest of prominent Haytians in Jeremie on the charge of conspiracy and of a serious condition of affairs in the interior of the island. He said that, according to news just received by him, the country was perfectly quiet. He added that there was no fear of an uprising.

Costa Rica Won't Interfere.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Referring to news in regard to the Colombian revolution, in which it is said that the liberal party has organized in San Jose, Costa Rica, for the purpose of carrying on the revolution now in progress in Colombia, the Costa Rican minister states that his government has observed, and will strictly observe, the laws of neutrality no matter what influences may be brought to bear upon Cocta Rica.

MINOR TELEGRAMS.

The 30th annual meeting of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland will be held at Louisville, Ky., Oct. 8 and 9.

Empress Augusta Victoria, whose return from Rominten was earlier than she had intended, is ill and confined to her bed in Berlin.

Count von Waldersee, who has been ailing, is wirse. He is still near Neckarsulm, Wurtemberg, on the estate of his sister-in-law.

A dispatch from Constantinople reports that a sanguinary conflict has taken place between Mussulmans and Christians at Beirut, Syria.

A special from Dubuque says Clayton, Ia., is burning. The wires are in bad shape and particulars have not yet been received.

Prince Chun has left Berlin for China in obedience to a special command from his brother, Emperor Kwang Su. He will not be allowed to visit other European countries or the United States officially.

The reports from Cloquet, Wis., of the sinking of the steamers Saturn and Satellite evidently originated from the sinking of the steamer Pathfinder, acting as bow boat of the Saturn, two or three days ago. The crew escaped. The boat went broadside on a smooth rock, careened and sank.

Prayermaker Sentenced.

Owosso, Mich., Sept. 30.—George Hicky has been sentenced to 30 days in the county jail for drunkenness. He is the chap who gave an early morning prayer in Grand Trunk Agent A. B. Covey's house. It transpired that he mistook it for a Catholic church which stands near the Covey house.

A Long Way Off.

An interesting calculation has been made by a French geologist to the effect that, taking into consideration the wear and tear on the solid land by ocean washing, rivers, wind and weather and leaving out of the calculation volcanic action, the world will in 4,500,000 years be completely under water and no dry land exist at all.

A DESPERATE DEED AT CANTON, OHIO

Soldier on Guard at Woodlawn Cemetery Had a Fierce Fight With a Desperado.

WAS ATTACKED AND STABBED

Saw Two Men Prowling Around and Challenged Them—Fired His Gun as an Alarm, Was Pounced Upon and Had a Hard Tussel.

Canton, O., Sept. 30.—A strange story comes from West Lawn cemetery, where a company of regulars from Fort Wayne, Mich., are guarding the vault in which the body of the late President McKinley lies. It is to the effect that the guard on duty on top of the vault fired a shot at one man who refused to heed his challenge, that the shot was diverted by another man who appeared from another direction and that an effort was made to stab the guard. Military regulations prevent either officers or the man of the post from being quoted on any matter connected with their services, and for this reason Capt. Biddle, in command, is obliged to decline to be quoted at the camp. He will make a full report to his superiors at once. Reliable authorities made the following statement:

Private Deprend was on guard duty on top of the vault at a point commanding the entrance below and the approach from the rear. Shortly before 7:30 he saw what he took to be the face of a man peering from behind a tree about 40 feet from his post. He watched it for 20 minutes and saw a man hurry to a tree 10 feet nearer. He challenged the man to halt, but this was not heeded and the fellow approached nearer. Deprend levelled his gun and aimed to shoot for effect, but just at that instant another man, who came toward him from the opposite side, caught the gun, threw it up and the bullet was spent in the air. This same man struck Defrend on the right side of the abdomen with a knife or other sharp weapon, cutting an "L" gash in his overcoat an inch and a half long each way and a smaller one in his blouse. The flesh was not broken, but was bruised under the cuts in the clothing. Deprend in the struggle fell and rolled down the side of the vault. Lieut. Ashbridge, officer of the day, was in front of the vault and rushed to the top on hearing the shot, but the men made good their escape. All members from the company, on hearing the shot, hurried to the vault and besides searching the cemetery the guard was increased. Deprend is a recruit enlisted in New York four months ago. He is said to be an excellent soldier and to have a fine record with his officers. He says the man who attacked him was masked, but the first one he saw was not masked. He says the latter carried a white package in his right hand and something that glittered in his left.

Since the incident, stories have been told in camp of some incendiary conversation overheard in crowds that have visited the cemetery, including one Sunday, alleging that some stranger said:

"Lots of people would like to see this whole thing blown up."

There are 70 soldiers at the cemetery, 20 of whom are constantly on guard duty about the vault and camp.

Lieut. Ashbridge was on duty less than a hundred feet away in front of the vault and is said to have reached the top within five seconds after he heard the shot, but when he arrived the guard was at the foot of the slope in which the valut is built, where he rolled after the assault, and the supposed prowlers were making their escape with a good lead. Others of the company were attracted by the report of the rifle, but reached the scene too late to be of any assistance except to participate in the pursuit and in the search made of the cemetery and in increasing the guard for the night.

Stories regarding the incident when they reached the city were connected with a jail delivery that occurred last night.

While there seems to be no doubt that at least two prowlers attempted to reach the vault, there is much difference of opinion as to the object of the intruders, who evidently made good their escape, as the cemetery has been searched over in vain.

COMMITTED SUICIDE.

A Cleveland Man Once Prominent In Business.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 30.—Believing himself to be the victim of malicious and unrelenting persecution, and thinking that he was ruined through the efforts of his enemies, Jacob A. Blodt, in a fit of desperation, killed himself by axphyxiation in a little boarding house on Perry street early Sunday morning. For 20 years Mr. Blodt had been identified with prominent business interests in Cleveland. Until a month ago he was universally respected and held in confidence by the most conservative business men. Mr. Blodt was secretary of the Guarantee Savings & Loan Co., which failed a few weeks ago. His arrest on the charge of embezzlement followed close after the state authorities had instituted proceedings against the company, and he was still on bail when he ended his life.

Mr. Blodt lived in a handsome residence on Euclid avenue, and is survived by a widow and three daughters. He committed the rash act on his 46th birthday.

A Record Breaker.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Sept. 30.—The attendance at the state normal has reached 200 and when all classes begin work tomorrow it is expected that last year's record will be broken. Several old players will be on the football team.

Robber Sentenced.

East Tawas, Mich., Sept. 30.—Judge Main J. Connine sentenced Henry Woods for arson to 12 years at Jackson; John McCallum for robbery to four years at Jackson and J. Londo, third offense for drunkenness, one and a half years at Ionia.

An optimist is a man who believes that all women are angels, and a pessimist is a man who believes they are the kind of angels that have asbestos wings.

A SUNDAY RIOT

Policemen and Strikers Exchange Blows--Fifty Shots Fired.

SEVEN MEN WERE WOUNDED

Number of Bystanders Were Injured, One Man Fatally—Striking Teamsters Followed a Number of Special Policemen to Get Even.

San Francisco, Sept. 30.—A pitched battle between strikers and policemen occurred shortly after 1 o'clock Sunday morning in Kearney street. Seven men are known to have been wounded, one probably fatally, and it is thought that several others who escaped are also injured. Not less than 50 shots were fired. Several of the injured were innocent passersby. Four special policemen and a recently discharged naval man were made targets for an assault by a mob of strikers and sympathizers numbering, according to the policemen, at least 100. The following are known to have been wounded: William Miller, striking teamster, shot in the breast, will probably die; H. F. Beehler, special officer; G. Wissel, druggist; Eddie Fuller, messenger; J. Doyne, —— Macdonald, Peter Johnson.

The party of special policemen was on the way home from a variety theater. When they turned into Market street from Turk, they noticed a large crowd following and they asked Policeman Tillman to accompany them. Just as the party reached Kearney street a shot was fired. It was followed in quick succession by several others. A regular fusilade ensued. The mob scattered in all directions, but not before the police had arrested about 30 of them. Four were identified as striking teamsters. They were heavily armed. While Officer Tillman was attemptink to protect the specials, when the first shots were fired, one of the mob fired at him at short range. The bullet just grazed Tillman's ear. J. Boyne, who was injured, was a non-union man. Application was made to a number of hackmen to carry him away, but they refused to do so.

Beehler was formerly a member of Company F, of the Fourth United States volunteers. His home is in Elkhart, Ind.

TO HURRY THE FIRE.

Pittsburg Family Had a Disastrous Experience Sunday.

Pittsburg, Sept. 30.—As a result of an attempt to use oil to hurry along the kitchen fire Sunday, Mrs. Barbara Sturgent is dead, her husband, Andrew, and their son George are dying. Two other children of the family, Barbara and Andrew, are very badly burned. The family occupied two rooms of a tenement house at 1102 Washington avenue, Braddock. Mrs. Sturgent, while getting the breakfast, started to pour oil on the kindling wood in the stove, and immediately an explosion followed. The room was filled with clothing hung on a line to dry. In an instant the two rooms were a blazing furnace. Mrs. Sturgent was burned to death, while her husband and son are literally cooked and can hardly live. The other families in the building were rescued by the prompt work by the firemen.

THE CANTEEN MAINTAINED.

National Soldiers Home Will Keep Up the Practice.

Milwaukee, Sept. 30.—Gen. McMahon of the board of managers of the National soldiers' homes, speaking for the board, said:

"The board has decided to maintain canteens at all the homes for the good and sufficient reason that experience has taught us that it is better for the veteran and for the people in the communities in which the homes are located. The canteens are properly conducted at these soldiers' homes, and the result is that the veterans do not squander their money in cheap saloons, nor do they drink too much. What is more, I do not believe any further pressure will be brought to bear on us in favor of the abolishment of the canteen."

Some of the inmates of the Milwaukee home will be transferred to Danville, Ill.

KILLED ONE PASSENGER.

Street Car and Train Collide With Fatal Results.

Burlington, Ia., Sept. 30.—A runaway street car crashed into a Burlington freight train Sunday morning. Mrs. Charles Kupfer was killed and several persons were injured seriously, as follows: George Stone, shoulder dislocated; A. C. Hutchinson, had hand ..crushed; Miss Lutz, head bruised; Mrs. Smithers, injured about the head. All were prominent people.

Every Effort for Miss Stone.

Constantinople, Sept. 30.—C. M. Dickinson, United States consul-general in Constantinople, has made representations to the Bulgarian government with a view of securing the release of Miss Helen M. Stone and her companion, who were captured by brigands Sept. 3 near Djumbala. It is reported that a number of members of the Bulgaria-Macedonian revolutionary committee have been arrested on evidence implicating them in the abduction.

Printing House Burned.

Loganspirt, Ind., Sept. 30.—The large printing establishment of Wilson, Humphreys & Co., at this city, was destroyed by fire yesterday, the loss reaching $50,000, with insurance probably covering half the loss. Clint Whitsell and Charles McCluskey, firemen, were badly injured during the run to the fire, but it is thought they will recover.

A hopeless man is deserted by himself, and he who deserts himself is soon deserted by his friends.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at C. A. Wright's.

ATTEMPTED P. O. ROBBERY.

Burglars Blew Open a Safe in an Armada Store.

Armada, Mich., Sept. 30.—The bold attempt to rob the general store of D. H. Barrows, in which the postoffice is located, caused intense excitement in this village. E. F. Phillips, the druggist, and B. G. Arnold, furniture dealer, were the first to begin firing at the cracksmen, who could be plainly seen in the store. At the first shot, however, they rushed out into the street and ran for the railroad track, where a hand car was concealed. Mr. Phillips is credited with firing the charge from a shotgun that wounded one of the burglars, who was carried off by his companions.

As soon as it was demonstrated that the cracksmen had escaped a telegram was sent to the operator at Lennox stating that they were headed in that direction. The operator notified Deputy Sheriff Batty and started for the house of Marshal Fenton, half a mile away. While en route the hand car hove in sight and passed Batty, who opened fire. One of the robbers threw his revolver at Batty. Before the car had gone half a mile, the men abandoned it and their companions. They took to the woods and proceeded south. Officers for miles around were notified and have been scouring the country, but no trace of the burglars can be found. The description of the [illegible] is meager.

A RACE RIOT.

Longview, Tex., Sept. 30.—News has reached here of a race riot at Hallville, in Harrison county. A party of white men Saturday night whipped a negro so severely that he died. They then attempted to break into the house of another negro, who shot and killed Julian Atwood. Armed citizens have been searching for Tom Walker, who did the shooting, and late reports say he has been hanged. The trouble was over crop mortgages. It is said the negroes secured advances on their crops and then refused to fulfill the contract.

Boston in Strikers' Hands.

Boston, Sept. 30.—The strike of express drivers of two transportation firms bids fair to cause serious complications unless a speedy settlement is reached. An attempt to reach an adjustment of the trouble will be made today, and in case of failure the officers of the transportation trades council, composed of freight clerks, truckmen and general merchandise handlers, have been empowered to call out every member of their various organizations.

Fierce Forest Fire.

Redcliffe, Col., Sept. 30.—The biggest fire ever known in this locality is raging on Battle mountain and threatening the town. The fire is traveling in the direction of the mining camp of Gilman, and that place is in even more danger at present than Redcliffe.

Caught Again.

Durand, Mich., Sept. 30.—Michael McEnrue who, it is alleged, has been running a blind tiger at Lennon, has been arrested for the second time by Deputy Sheriff Hovey. McEnrue waived examination and will appear in the circuit court today.

Burglars Confess.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 30.—Frank Lavin and John Chandler are under arrest charged with being responsible for the many petty burglaries that have taken place here of late. They made a confession to being responsible for six jobs, all committed in one night.

Washington's Death.

Mr. George Ticknor, who wrote "The History of Spanish Literature" and "The Life of Prescott," remembered distinctly the death of Washington. He says in his diary:

There never was a more striking or spontaneous tribute paid to a man than was paid in Boston when the news came of Washington's death.

It was on Dec. 14, 1799, a little before noon. I often heard persons say at the time that one could know how far the news had spread by the closing of the shops. Each man, when he heard that Washington was dead, shut his store, as a matter of course, without consultation, and in two hours all business was stopped.

My father came home and could not speak, he was so overcome. My mother was alarmed to see him in such a state until he recovered enough to tell her the sad news. For some time every one, even the children, wore crape on the arm. No boy could go into the street without it. I wore it, though only 8 years old.

remember it. Moreover, you know that young Betts has been a fugitive from justice for months and that his shortages, including the $600, were paid by his father, now in your employ. I know this, because Mr. Burleigh of the [illegible] has frankly told me that he has since told you, and yet your precious kinsman, whom you have hastened here to save if possible, dared last week to publicly speak of my partner, General Langdon, as the safe robber."

"Your partner subjected Major Nathan to a gross indignity," interjected Barclay icily.

"My partner did not, sir, and it is my belief that you know he did not; that the order Major Nathan refused to obey was that of the commanding general." And now Colonel Cresswell's voice resounded through the echoing lobby. "A gentleman, sir, from my section of the Union can't soil his hands by chastising a coward, as Major Nathan is held to be, and the protection of his wife's petticoats prevents my getting him where I can brand him as a liar, but as you are his next of kin, by marriage at least, I have taken this opportunity of making known my sentiments to you. You have my address, sir. Good evening to you, sir."

And the colonel majestically lifted his hat and strolled magnificently away. Of course that rencontre was in the morning papers, and so at last Langdon heard of Nathan's language.

The formal muster out of the Washoes was to occur that afternoon. Some few of the officers, commissioned in new regiments, were to return to Manila, certain others were to remain awhile in San Francisco, but the bulk of the men would scatter for home soon after the final ceremony, the governor and his advisers having decided against the parade. Melville at breakfast time read the sensational account in The Investigator and the more conservative story of The Carbuncle. Within an hour he was at Langdon's tent and found the colonel supervising the packing of his soldier goods and chattels. Each knew what was uppermost in the acquiescence to her plans and asked, "What I get for dinner?"

"We'll have some of that nice oatmeal cream, a cabbage fried cake, some souped eggs, a chicken omelet, and you may get some of the best oyster cookies from the pickle. Make some coffee soup, Christina, and make the freezer full. I think we'll have soda pie with it."

"All right. I do it," answered Christina willingly. And Mrs. Mason smiled as she thought of the lady down town. "Now, madam, you're welcome to the fruit of my labor."

If she felt the least bit guilty, the memory of the many hours of care and thought that she had given to the training of green girls came to appease her conscience.

"I only wish I could see the other acts," she said to Mr. Mason. "I expect to be in the fifth myself, but I feel I shall miss the third and fourth."

Christina reported bright and early at Mrs. Bender's, eager to prove herself worthy of her advance. Circumstances compelled Mrs. Bender to leave her entirely to her own devices the first day, but on the morning of the second she came in haste into the kitchen.

"Christina," she said, "get breakfast as quickly as possible. Mr. Bender wants to make that early train. We generally want toast, but we will get along without it this morning, and we like it rare," she said, pointing to the beefsteak.

"Rare!" Christina exclaimed.

"Yes, rare. You understand what that is, don't you?"

"Y-e-s."

"Well, we always take it rare and our coffee strong."

"You take coffee for breakfast?"

"Always. And we would like it as soon as possible, Christina."

Mrs. Bender sailed out of the kitchen and confidentially told Mr. Bender that the new girl seemed exceedingly stupid or else she had a very peculiar manner.

"She is in a constant state of surprise," she added, "and, I declare, I smell bread toasting. I told her not to toast it this morning."

In an incredibly short time the breakfast bell rang, and when the Bender family sat down to the table the look of surprise was transferred from Christina's face to theirs, for on the platter lay a fine steak, fresh from the refrigerator, and in place of the pot of steaming coffee sat a pitcher of ice cold lemonade. Mrs. Bender rang the bell with exceeding energy, and when astonished Christina appeared they each made a frantic effort to convince the other that she was responsible for the mistake. Mrs. Bender grew angry, and Christina resorted to tears, and while Mr. Bender listened to their confusing explanations he made his breakfast on toast and lemonade.

Matters grew worse rapidly, and in spite of repeated and patient explanations Christina's ideas were in a state of hopeless confusion, but neither she nor Mrs. Bender ever thought of the little woman on the hill as the author of all their troubles. At the end of two weeks Mrs. Bender took a street car for Walnut hill and, seeking out Mrs. Mason, asked her if she would not be willing to take Christina back. Mrs. Mason artfully hesitated a moment and then consented.

"I am so relieved," Mrs. Bender said, "for I keep her in tears half of the time, and she seems so anxious to please me. I can't understand how any one can be as stupid as she is."

So Christina came back, and for four years she did faithful service in Mrs. Mason's kitchen, and for the first time in her life that ingenious little woman did not live in constant fear of "anoder place down town."—What to Eat.

mind of the other, and Langdon bade his orderly excuse him to visitors a few moments, sent Hurricane to the camp postoffice and let down the flaps of the tent.

"That fellow is still in close arrest," said he, "and I cannot reach him until he is released."

"And then?" asked Melville thoughtfully.

"Then—I shall cowhide him."

"Langdon," said the general after a moment's reflection, "that's what brought me out here so early. Read this first."

It was a letter in Nathan's handwriting. Langdon took it slowly and with obvious repugnance, his eyes the while resting with inquiry and eagerness upon another missive, a little note that the general still retained. Opening the first, however, he read as follows:

> My Dear General Melville—A man never knows how friendless he is, in the army, unless luck has gone back on him and he is down. I am down. I see that I have made a bad mess of it and know there will be no sympathy for me in that court. I suppose you've seen the detail. It's packed to convict, and in the present exaggerated feeling as to the relative merit of the volunteers and regulars my break seems much more serious than it really was. I merely lost my temper and said and did things that were indefensible, I suppose. But put yourself in my place. I have reason to believe that I was being discriminated against and that Colonel Langdon had purposely placed sentries there to publicly humiliate me. What would you think to have your horse backed almost from under you by a private soldier? I'll warrant that Colonel Langdon would have used the lash quicker than I did. In fact, I hardly struck the sentry at all. But, of course, it's useless to talk of it. They've about convinced Mr. Barclay that the least I can look for is dismissal unless I can get those charges withdrawn. I am willing to admit I was hasty, or I suppose I ought to say violent, and I'm willing to do anything you say to make amends, both to the soldier in the case and to the colonel. A written apology, I suppose, is what they'll want—

But Langdon's indignation rose with every line.

"Why do you show me this?" he asked. "It's a contemptible letter. It's unworthy the faintest consideration."

"Well, would you cowhide a man whose words were unworthy of consideration, Eric? Think over that. Keep away from him tomorrow and come to us. Here's another note."

And the general sauntered out into the sunshine to chat with the gathering officers and to smile kindly and genially at the men, who never seemed to tire of rendering honors to their colonel's friend. He thought to give Langdon time to read his own letter, but little was needed. The dainty note when opened contained but the single word:

"Don't."

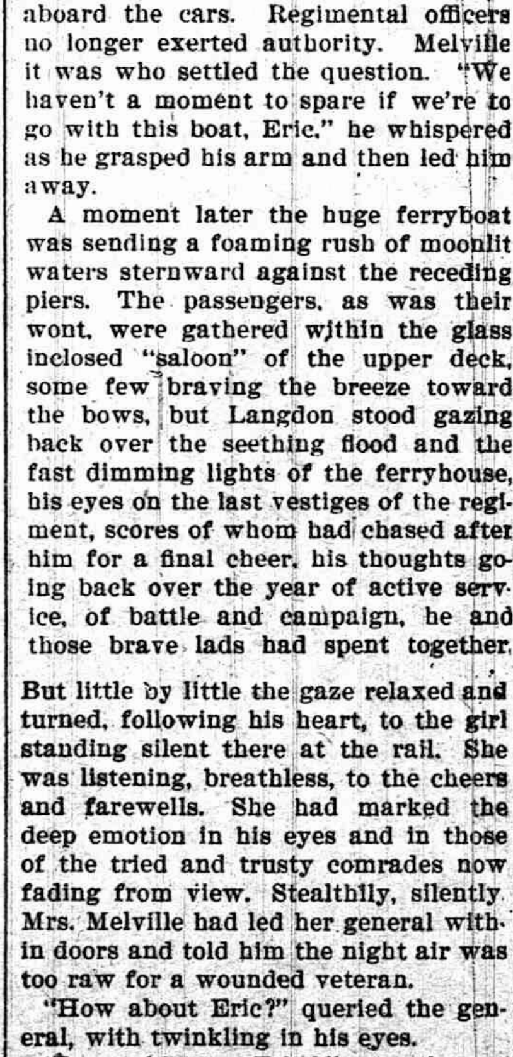
That night in the crowded station at Oakland pier the home going Washoes seemed bent on raising the roof. Two special trains were there to whirl them away to the mountains. Their few belongings were stored aboard, but the word had passed that Langdon was there to see them off, and the rascals wouldn't go. Out they piled on the platform, shouting like mad, and surrounded him in tumultuous acclaim. They had hoisted him on a baggage truck, and there was only one way to silence their clamor. That was to speak. On the gallery and staircase stood a throng of people—men, women and children—sympathetic witnesses of the stirring scene. Melville and his wife in their midst. Ethel Grahame, with flushed cheeks and shining eyes and with hands that trembled as they clasped the rail, bending forward as though she would not lose a word. Instinctively and as of old the Washoes hushed at his uplifted hand.

"I could not speak to you today," he said. "I cannot do you justice now. Your faith, your loyalty, your—yes, I dare say it—your affection, I prize beyond all power of words to tell you, and the sorrow of parting would choke my utterance did I not know that we who have served so closely together as soldiers in the year gone by are to live together as friends and comrades and fellow citizens of a beloved state, please God, for many a year to come."

Another uproarious cheer broke in upon and drowned his words. Railway officials were striving with all their power to herd the enthusiastic crowd aboard the cars. Regimental officers no longer exerted authority. Melville it was who settled the question. "We haven't a moment to spare if we're to go with this boat, Eric," he whispered as he grasped his arm and then led him away.



There was only one way to silence their clamor.

A moment later the huge ferryboat was sending a foaming rush of moonlit waters sternward against the receding piers. The passengers, as was their wont, were gathered within the glass inclosed "saloon" of the upper deck, some few braving the breeze toward the bows, but Langdon stood gazing back over the seething flood and the fast dimming lights of the ferryhouse, his eyes on the last vestiges of the regiment, scores of whom had chased after him for a final cheer, his thoughts going back over the year of active service, of battle and campaign, he and those brave lads had spent together.

But little by little the gaze relaxed and turned, following his heart, to the girl standing silent there at the rail. She was listening, breathless, to the cheers and farewells. She had marked the deep emotion in his eyes and in those of the tried and trusty comrades now fading from view. Stealthily, silently Mrs. Melville had led her general within doors and told him the night air was too raw for a wounded veteran.

"How about Eric?" queried the general, with twinkling in his eyes.

"Leave him to—Ethel," was the answer of superior wisdom.

And so, ten years after the sad events that sent him adrift upon the world, Langdon turned as the last faint cheer followed them across the racing waters, marked her as she stood like one absorbed, entranced, threw one quick glance about him, then as quickly stepped to her side and seized within his own firm grasp the slender hands that were trembling at the rail. Then she, too, gave one startled look, saw that they were alone, and even under the pallor of the moonlight her brow flushed crimson. Lids and lashes drooped and veiled her swimming eyes, for the woman in her told her that, without a word, she stood confessed in the presence of her master, even though that master were looking inquiringly into her downcast face, and the voice that stilled or swayed at will those hosts of stalwart men was trembling in its plea, adoring and passionate, for the love he craved in answer to that he so long had given. What was there left for her to say? Her lips moved, but he heard not. Eagerly he bent, lower, lower still, and then shyly at last they were upraised and—told him.

THE END.

REMEMBER DATE OF VISIT

By the latest scientific researches both by improved instruments and methods, the Doctor is enabled to discover the true nature of the disease and locate the organ or parts affected and many diseases and complications which have heretofore proved most obstinate to the Medical profession yield like magic under his skill and systematic treatment.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It costs nothing to see him, for consultation is free and his prices for treatment are within the reach of all. He is a friend to the afflicted and will turn none away unaided. The merchant mingles with the artisan while seeking relief at his hands and hundreds are cured every year.

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs Martha Keller, of Cohoctah township, Livingston county who has been seriously afflicted with a complication of diseases for years, voluntarily makes the following statement. She says: I had been a great sufferer with catarrh of the stomach, heart failure and nervous debility. I would have peculiar nervous spells come over me and I would faint away; have been carried in the house more than once in that condition. My heart and stomach troubled me terribly all the time, having tried a number of doctors without receiving any permanent relief. I saw the advertisement of Dr. Walker in the papers, also hearing of the doctor's many cures. I decided to call at the hotel and see him. I at once placed myself under Dr. Walker's treatment. I improved right along and am now happy to say that all of the above symptoms have left me. To have my stomach, heart and nerves feel natural once more causes me to feel very grateful. I most cheerfully recommended the doctor to all afflicted ones. Signed MRS. MARTHA KELLER.

Mrs. Chas. Maltby, of Milan, Mich., says: I was taken with Lagrippe last winter; soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system; my sufferings at times were intense and intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I go around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health. Signed CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was."
Signed JAMES B. GILDAY.
Yargerville, Monroe County, Mich. June 28, 1901.

Sick all his Life. Read the statement of another well known citizen of Monroe county: Mr. W. W. Murphy, of Samaria, who had been almost a constant sufferer all his life from stomach and liver complications. He says: "I have found Dr. W. C. Walker's treatment a great help to me. I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment. Had tried everything I could hear of before with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker." Signed W. W. MURPHY.
Samaria, Monroe Co., Mich., June 25, 1901.

Mr. A. C. Crittenden, a well-known business man of Carleton, Mich., states: I took a course of treatment of Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, some 2 years ago and I take pleasure in saying the doctor made a permanent cure of my case. There has been no return of former trouble.
Signed A. C. Crittenden.

FREAKS OF WILL MAKERS.

A Case In Which Authenticity Was Curiously Proved.

It is probable that a whole volume, and a very interesting one at that, might be composed of the freaks of legal evidence in will cases. The evidence is often purely documentary; hence the paradoxes which arise from time to time in its interpretation. If ever such a volume comes to be published, it will surely be incomplete if the following case, told by John Corwin of the firm of Harris, Corwin & Gunnison, is left out:

"The testatrix," said Mr. Corwin, "died in Brooklyn some years ago, and it devolved upon me, as her lawyer, to find and probate her will. In a trunk I found an envelope containing a number of very small pieces of paper, on both sides of which was writing. Inside the flap of that envelope was written, 'This will is all here,' in the handwriting and with the signature of the testatrix.

"You must remember that these scraps of paper were very small indeed. The paradox is this—that the extreme smallness of the scraps was the evidence that this torn paper was the last will and testament of the deceased. The law recognizes tearing as one method by which a testator may revoke a will, and the intention to revoke is presumed in a testator who so tears one. But if a contrary intention can be proved by another act done at the same time then the tearing of the will does not revoke it. Now, in this case the words 'This will is all here' clearly showed that the testatrix meant those scraps of paper to be regarded as her will. It remained to prove that she so meant at the time when she tore the paper. If she had torn the paper at one moment, intending by that act to revoke the will, and had subsequently written those words without witnesses or other legal formality, meaning to revive the force of the revoked will, then the latter act was legally invalid and the will could not be probated. Surrogate Abbott took this view.

"My contention was that the writing on the flap of the envelope was in technical language a part of the same res gesta as the tearing of the will. I argued that if the testatrix had torn that paper at one time and put it in that envelope at another some of the pieces, small as they were, must surely have become lost in the interval. The extreme minuteness of the pieces, coupled with the fact that not one piece was missing, was my evidence that the tearing and the putting into that envelope were one res gesta.

"I had quite clearly demonstrated the presence of every piece by taking a sheet of glass covered with white of egg and carefully reconstructing the whole sheet of paper upon it, leaving each piece with the same side to the glass as its fellows. In this way I was able to present the will in legible shape. Its physical completeness established my point to the surrogate's satisfaction, for the presumption that the placing of the pieces in the envelope and the writing on the flap were one res gesta was in my favor. And so I succeeded in probating that will."

To the lay mind the mystery of the tearing of the will remains no less interesting than the curious legal evidence of its validity. People who make wills notoriously indulge in strange fancies at times, and it may be that this woman resorted to the expedient of tearing up her will precisely because that was one of the last things which any one who wished to preserve a will would be likely to do with it, and consequently no one who wished to steal the will would be likely to look for it in an envelope containing only minute scraps of paper.—Exchange.

SUDDEN DEATH.

On Saturday Afternoon the Community was Shocked to Hear the of Death of MRS. FRANK D. AVERY.

Mrs. Avery had been Ill for About Two Weeks but there was no Thought of her Death.

On Saturday afternoon it was rumored that Mrs Frank Avery was dead. People could scarcely believe that the story was true, but when about 3:30 Avery & Co.'s store was closed and inquiries were made, it was found the story was too true, and jolly, jovial, genial Mrs. Avery was gone.

About 14 years ago Mr. and Mrs. Avery moved from Onsted to Tecumseh and from the first day of Mrs. Avery's stay in Tecumseh, her friendships grew. She was of the most genial and loving disposition, in fact a dear friend to everyone she knew. She had that cheerful, sunny disposition that endeared her to everyone. The whole community mourns the loss of this good woman. The whole businesss community sorrows with Mr. Avery in his terrible loss.

For several weeks Mrs. Avery has been ill, but no one had an idea she was in a dangerous condition at all. To say that everyone in Tecumseh deeply regrets her loss would not be saying too much, for there was not a better known, better liked lady here.

Mrs. Avery was a prominent member of the Research Circle and her papers were of the brightest. She was also a charter member of the "Dignified Dozen," a ladies social organization, of which she was one of the leading ones.

While still a girl she joined the Baptist church at Cambridge and has always been an active member there or at Tecumseh since. Her society and social friends mourn alike, no one can take her place.

Her funeral was largely attended at the Baptist church this afternoon.

A GOOD LETTER

From Mrs. Lucy Haight Colp, of Parimaribo, S. A.

SOUTH AMERICAN LIFE

As She sees it. Interestingly Described in this Letter.

Sept. 3rd, 1901.

Very early in the morning all life is astir; smoke arises from the laborers' cabins ere the day has dawned for each workman must cook his own meals, rations being given on Saturday for one week. At six o'clock one hears the gong sound "sick call."

It is a law of the colony that at each placer must be kept a supply of various medicines and at the six o'clock call every laborer who intends to be sick that day, must appear at the office, state his symptoms to the head overseer and take whatever dose the overseer thinks he needs. Swallowing the same in his presence is considered proof of sickman's honesty and the condition necessary to his being given sick leave and should it be found that he is playing sick he is charged with the rations he draws until he resumes work. They usually take their medicine even though trying to shirk. Amongst other medicinal remedies is kept a supply of high wine, but this can be given only with an order from the manager. One day the teamster came and asked for an order for a half pint of wine, saying he wanted it to rub on a mule's leg that had been hurt. Without a smile the order was given, the manager thinking perhaps the teamster would divide with the mule.

All the laborers are contracted in town for one hundred working days and are paid nearly one month's wages before they come to the placer, so a man who has been paid for his work before he does it, even though found to be worthless must be kept at least until he has worked out his advance. Before leaving Paramanbo, each man's name is registered at the police station, hence it is possible at any time to find out where any one is.

At a quarter of seven the gong again sounds; this time it tells the men that it is time to start to their work. As they come forth, it reminds one of bees swarming from a hive. They come out singing and go to work with their rags of clothes flapping at every movement, but when the days work is done, the rags are thrown aside, a bath taken and a respectable suit of white donned. The Servinam negro is clean, peaceable and respectful to his superiors, but utterly heartless to his fellow man, never offering to do anything for a companion in distress; the call of humanity makes no appeal to him. I suppose they look upon each other as one of the products of the country, easily grown, hence of little value.

August 31st was the anniversary of the queen's birthday, and the Dutchmen adore Wilhemina, as the English did Queen Victoria. About half past eight that evening, we saw a torch light procession coming. Our house is a good quarter of a mile from the laborers' quarters. Some forty of her majesty's dusky subjects were loyal enough to come through the rain to serenade us and remind us that it was their queen's birthday. We invited them up on the porch and listened to not unpleasing music of the guitar, mandolin, etc. The manager passing cigars, when good-night was interchanged and our guests marched away in the rain and darkness with merry hearts.

On Sunday work on the placer ceases, and the men do their laundry work in the morning, in a little stream of water near, after which they fish and sing, or perhaps exchange visits with friends at neighboring placers.

Yesterday I received my first caller. I heard a rustle of stiffly starched skirts coming and looking up saw the gaily turbaned head of a very black woman, whose husband is watchman at the magazine at the "water front" seven miles away. As she does not speak much English and I do not understand her language, our conversation consisted mostly of smiles and gesticulations, however, when people are so isolated as we are, there is something in a smile and the grasp of a hand, which leaves an impression on the heart, and that woman and I are sworn friends.

Not a gun is allowed to be fired near our house, and the animals are getting over their fear and come close. It is not unusual to see the tracks of the bush cow—or buffalo—as the natives call it, near the house. We are surrounded on three sides by a jungle, and to the astonishment of everyone, we have succeeded in taming two little wild animals, "con-conies," so that they come out of the jungle morning and night to receive their daily bread. For several months we have seen them twice a day waiting at one side of the porch to be fed. We have named them Romeo and Juliet.

It is not uncommon to see the little white-faced monkeys in the trees around and we hear the doleful howl of the boboons, but they do not come in sight.

Sincerely Yours,
LUCY HAIGHT COLP.

Has Trained Them for Fifty Years.

Over half a century's experience in educating young men and women for a practical business career is the record of the Detroit Business University, Detroit, Mich., the leading business school of America. During that busy and useful period it has had over 34,000 students, who now fill most responsible and honorable positions. No institution and city in the country offers such facilities for the student as the Detroit Business University and the city of Detroit. The necessity and great advantage of a practical business education in this era of wondrous commercial prosperity and advancement are obvious. The best business school in the country is the Detroit Business University. All interested should write at once for its handsome illustrated catalogue, mailed free.

AN AGED VETERAN.

A Detroit Veteran Talks of War and The Legacy it left Him.

When the annual reunion of the G. A. R. is held, Michigan is always well represented. Around the camp fires of the encampment our boys tell of the hardships they have gone through and the listener who knows nothing of war will wonder how they lived to tell the tale. Few men who followed old glory and escaped the shot and shell returned home without some legacy as a constant reminder of their war days. Our representative found Veteran O. P. Newcomb, of Detroit, at his place of residence, No. 237 Second street. Mr. Newcomb told him how the little conqueror had rendered him invaluable service. We give his account here and some words ofadvice tersely told He said:

"A lake coveing about two acres in extent, containing the dead bodies of 20 mules, is not termpting water to drink, but I was one of many who drank it, and all of us would have done so if we had known there was death in every swallow. This illustrates but one of the many hardships and privations passed through during the civil war and it is no wonder G. A. R. men suffer from aches and pains, the most prevalent of these being due to kidney disorders. I am pleased to note that a great many others who passed through as trying ordeals as I, have now learned how these trouble can be mitigated. When I say Doan's Kidney Pills will cure them I not only speak from experience but from observation. To all old soldiers or anyone suffering from kidney complaint my advice is to try that remedy."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-MilburnCo., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan and take no substitute.

The road to ruin is the road to rue in.

"It was almost a miracle. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me of a terrible breaking out all over the body. I am very greatful." Miss Julia Filbridge, West Cornwell, Conn, Finsen the Scientist.

A recent visitor to London is Professor Finsen, the Copenhagen doctor who discovered the light cure for that terrible disease lupus. Many there are in Britain who would like to thank him for the service he has rendered suffering humanity. But he is a man of excessive modesty; he dislikes publicity, and would walk miles to be out of the way of a vote of thanks. Although a doctor, he does not practice medicine, but confines himself to pathological research. He is himself an invalid, suffering from heart disease He began to observe the effects of light on smallpox. This led him to the action of strong light as an irritant on the skin and the work of sunshine as a disinfectant. Then he thought of applying his discoveries to lupus, one of the most painful diseases, and till then practically incurable. The results seemed miraculous, and an institution was founded to carry out the cure on a larger scale. The marvelous results are now well known.

Weak on Its Foot.

Jimson in a rash moment undertook to plant a new clothes post in the garden, and after much labor he delved out a hole into which he managed at length to coax the post to a perpendicular position, and he went indoors a proud and happy man.

Ten minutes afterward, however, he went out to feast his eyes again upon the spectacle of the family clothes post pointing skyward like a miniature telegraph pole, when to his consternation he found the late erection lying prone across the onion bed.

"You pushed it down, did you?" said Jimson, wrathfully seizing his youthful son and heir, who was playing about near.

"That I never, dad," replied the boy, earnestly. "A sparrow perched on the top an' overbalanced it. I seed him do it."

Shocked the Minister.

Over on the North Side there is a dog fancier whose vocabulary embraces a choice of words prohibited by society and the established rules. He has one dog in particular that has been taught a number of smart tricks Not many days ago the minister came to call at his home and his mother thought the good parson might be interested in seeing the dog perform his little stunts, so she induced the man to show off his star. The dog jumped through hoops and over obstacles, rolled over, played ball and did a whole lot of fantastic things, when the owner ordered him up into a chair and, figuring to make a hit with the preacher, told him to pray. The dog hesitated and the master excitedly repeated his command to pray. Still he refused, whereupon the North Sider hit him a cuff on the head and said:

"Pray, you —— —— ——!"

The poor mother fainted and the minister gasped for breath.

On the Top Round.

The butter of Denmark is considered superior to that of all other countries It brings the highest price in fancy markets, and can be found all over the world in shops where luxuries are sold In South Africa, South America, in the East Indies, in India, Egypt, and in tropical countries generally it is used by epicures, who pay $1 a pound for it in tins of one, two, and three-pounds' weight. No other country has been able to produce butter that will stand changes of climate so well. In Holland and Sweden attempts are made to compete with the Danish dairymen, but the butter from those countries are worth only half as much and does not keep half as well, while the efforts of dairymen in the United States have practically failed, with a few isolated exceptions.

Honesty pays twice as well as half honesty. Don't forget it.—Atchison Globe.

What Changed Ibsen's Career.

Henrik Ibsen was intended at first for a doctor, and at the age of 16 he had to don a druggist's apron. His ambitions carried him a little beyond that, and he decided to become a doctor and read up for examination at Christiania. In the course of his study he was reading Sallust, and the character of Cataline so took his fancy that he wrote a little play introducing him. This was Ibsen's first dramatic effort.

The "Alexandrian Era" is by some authorities begun with the death and by others with the birth of Alexander the Great. For a long time after the death of Alexander this era was in common use in Egypt and many of the countries which had been under his rule. It began Nov. 12, 324 B. C.

Glacier Put to Use.

The French give the name "white coal" to Switzerland's Alpine snows because the torrents of water that flow down the mountains are now being utilized everywhere to generate electricity for lighting and manufacturing purposes. In the south of France, also, the streams are much used for this purpose, making large areas independent of the coal miner. The glacier does the work instead of black coal. The substitution has an esthetic value since it removes the unsightly chimney and its soot from the cities and tends to bring workmen back from huge factories into small industries at their homes.

With a Relish.

An actor in the vaudeville tells the following story on a certain actor of prominence who happened to be dining in a restaurant where those of his position and pretentions were seldom seen—one of those places where people of small means and no style take their modest meals.

The vaudevillian sat at the next table and overhead the order given by his professional brother, who he knew by sight only.

The colored waiter listened attentively and was observed to blink his eyes somewhat doubtfully when the guest ordered "fish with tartar sauce," but without questioning, went on absorbing the rest of the order.

In due course of time he served the fish, but brought no sauce.

"Where's that tartar sauce?" demanded the actor.

"I don't know nothin' 'bout dat sauce, suh—I 'spects I'll haf to go ask de boss, suh," and the mystified darky swung off toward the desk, where, after a few words with the proprietor, he came back with a bottle of Worcestershire sauce and put it on the table, saying:

"De boss sez as how we ain't puttin' on no Delmonico dog in dis yer part o' town—an' dat's de tattest sauce we's got, suh."

THE SPENDTHRIFT.

Lustrous and silken haired he swept
The blackthorn silver loose and lept
Into the leafless lane;
His pleasant minstrelsy began;
Torrents of music riot ran
Across the hedge girt plain;
He flung the fields new liveries
And green slashed doublets to the trees.

Then, stooping, from a lily bowl
Drank of the sweetness of her soul
And madly sprang away.
In marshes and moist meadows he
Sundered the stately fleurs-de-lis;
Kingcups in gilt array
He tossed amid the tasseled reeds
Quiv'ring and bent with crystal beads.

And ever in his thoughtless flight
About him danced in vestures bright
His minion butterflies.
His plunder was the rose hid dew,
Rose leaves the largesse that he threw
At random to the skies,
Nor ceased he till he havoc made
Amid the jasmine's starry braid.

So was his rich inheritance
Ruined and lost. With swift advance
And stern in russet gown
Came autumn, of the spendthrift youth
By bitter bonds devoid of ruth,
Demanding summer's crown.
Here from the corralled yews alone
The robins mourn his broken throne.

—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE TWO FATHERS

The mother was a widow, an industrious woman, who worked late and early in order to support her child, a little girl between 4 and 5 years old, pretty as a fairy, full of fun, affectionate and coaxing as any happy child could be.

On the opposite side of the landing of the fifth floor on which Mme. Etienne and her daughter Lillie lived was the door of the apartments inhabited by two brothers, cabinet makers by trade and bachelors either by choice or by chance, no one knew.

One of those days when the intense heat necessitates the door being left open in order to get a current of air, the prettiness of Lillie attracted the attention of the two brothers, who were already past their first youth and adored children in their quality of approaching old bachelorhood. From that a sort of intimacy sprung up between the widow and her neighbors. Little reciprocal services passed between them. They sometimes made a party of pleasure on the Sunday. So well did they get on indeed that one day the eldest of the two brothers said to the other:

"That child would want a father badly."

"That is my opinion also."

"Would you have any objection to my asking the mother to marry me?"

"Why should I? In fact, I was thinking of doing the same myself. But since you have spoken first follow the notion up, but on the condition that you will let me see Lillie as often as I like. I love that child as much as if she were my own."

"Forsooth! You will live with us."

The question agreed upon, the two brothers, dressed in their best, went to call on Mme. Etienne, whom, however, they found confined to bed. The evening before she had run in order to take some work back to the shop in time; on returning she had caught a chill, passed a feverish night and was not able to rise in the morning. She begged her neighbors to go for a doctor. It was no time to speak of marriage.

Inflammation of the lungs carried away the poor woman in ten days.

Thanks to the two brothers, she had not to go to the hospital, and until the last she was able to see her little Lillie, whom she earnestly recommended to them. They swore never to abandon the child.

The funeral over they took charge of the little one, kissing her. They said to one another at the same time:

"If you wish, we will never get married now."

They went to live at Vincennes so that Lillie might have plenty of good air and take walks in the wood. They were very proud of their adopted daughter. When people stopped to look at them and asked in a casual way which was her father, they replied, "Both of us."

Lillie seemed to like one as well as the other and called them Uncle John and Uncle James.

When she grew a little older they put her to school—to a young ladies' school be it understood—taking her there every morning and calling for her in the evening. So Lillie grew up between these two affections without ever feeling the want of father or mother.

She cost the brothers a great deal of money, did the little one, but bah, they went no longer to the cafe and worked a little more than formerly. These supplementary hours were devoted to the pleasure and toilet of mademoiselle.

When she was 15 years of age, she was the first to suggest that she should stay at home for the future, at which, of course, the brothers were enchanted. What a charming little housekeeper they had then and with what joyful tenderness she greeted their return every evening! To say the spoiled child never abused their goodness would be saying too much, but at least she seized every available opportunity of pleasing them.

Two years passed over so quickly for all of them that on the day the two men brought a cake and bouquet to celebrate Lillie's birthday they exclaimed:

"Seventeen years old! Is it possible?"

But, yes, it was possible. And James and John thought so much about it that it made them anxious and unhappy.

It was the younger who said one evening to the other:

"Do you know that Lillie is getting more beautiful every day?"

"Eh! Yes, I know it well. And others know it too. There must be a good many admirers prowling around here after her."

"And it is certain one of them will take her away from us before very long."

"Poor little thing!"

"Yes, if she were to get a bad husband!"

"Oh, I should kill any man who would treat her badly!"

"There is only one way of escaping that."

"Ah!" said the elder brother, without making any addition to the exclamation.

"And then," continued the other, "think how sad it would be for us to part from Lillie—never again to see her trotting about the house, never to hear her merry voice singing after we return from work of an evening."

"I have been thinking of all that for a long time, my dear John."

"It must be put an end to."

"And your plan?"

"It is very simple if it pleases you. I shall marry her before she gets fond of any one else."

"Zounds!"

The elder brother stood up, almost threatening.

"I also have thought of that plan. I was often going to speak about it, but always held back."

"Why?"

"Because I wanted to marry Lillie myself."

The two brothers looked at one another far from amiably. Then the younger said:

"This is the same as with the mother formerly. Do you remember, James? I gave her up to you. It is your turn now to give Lillie up to me. You are three years older than I."

"Which nevertheless does not make you very young."

A song was heard ascending from below stairs. Lillie was coming back from her daily shopping.

"Listen," said John rapidly. "The child who has made our happiness up to this must not be a cause of disunion between us. Let her choose which one she likes best."

"All right," said the other. "That is quite fair."

Lillie entered, took the two men by the neck, kissed them and, drawing a chair between them, said:

"I wish to speak to you seriously."

The face of the young girl looked quite joyous.

"I wish to get married."

"John and I were just speaking about it."

"But you have not found me a husband."

"As a matter of fact we have. You love us very much, say?"

"Like father and mother at once."

"That is why we wish to propose to you to choose between us."

"Why choose?"

"Which of us you will marry."

The young girl burst into a fit of laughter so joyous, so prolonged, that the two brothers remained quite dumfounded. Then, brushing the tears from her eyelashes:

"No nonsense, my uncles. I said I wanted to speak to you seriously. You mustn't joke. I have a sweetheart."

Neither replied.

"Now, you must not be angry. I am so fond of him, and he is coming tomorrow to see you."

"Like that! All at once! And us, Lillie?"

"You will always be my two fathers."—Translated From the French For Detroit News.

Athens and the Goat.

Your genuine Athenian believes the goat to be the proper milk producing animal, and he regards the cow in this connection about as we Americans do the mare. The milkman takes his animals with him, jangling their bells and sneezing. "Gala!" he shouts, a quick, startling cry, with a "g" whose guttural quality is unattainable by adult learners and usually unperceived by them. When a customer comes to the door, he strips the desired quantity into the proffered receptacle before her vigilant eyes, selecting one of the goats and paying no attention to the others, who understand the business as well as he does. Patiently they stand about, chewing the cud or resting on contiguous doorsteps. When their master moves on, they arise and follow, more faithful than dogs.

The obvious and well nigh overpowering temptation to which the milkman is subjected affects him in Greece as in America. In Greece it is taken for granted that he cannot resist, and he is therefore obliged to take his animals with him. But even thus he is not above suspicion, for they tell of a rubber water bag carried inside the coat and provided with a tube reaching to the palm of the hand. Each time the milkman closes his hand over the udder he presses the bag between his arm and his body.—Scribner's.

Agreeable Parting.

"Well, major, goodby. Glad to have met you."

"Indeed, suh? Wherefore glad? It must take little to make you glad, suh."

"It does."

"Hah! Well put. But every one says 'glad to have met you' on leaving a new made acquaintance, and none means it."

"Mere figure of speech. To tell you the exact truth would hurt your feelings, major. Only hypocrites can be real nice to people. As a matter of fact, sir, I am sorry I met you, and I don't care if we never meet again."

"Why, hang it, suh, you are getting to be an honest gentleman! I should like to meet you again, suh."

"Never, if I happen to see you first, major. Ta-ta."

So the raspy old soldier had something to think about.—New York Press.

A Genuine Poet Laureate.

Baron Takasaki, chief of the poets' bureau in the imperial palace of Tokio, says that the emperor of Japan's love of peotry increases with years. Scarcely an evening passes that his majesty does not compose from twenty-seven to thirty of the thirty-one syllabled couplets called "wa-ka." These are handed to Baron Takasaki for examination. Baron Takasaki has held his present position since 1892.

The best wine years in Germany during the past decade were 1893, 1895, and 1897. From all reports, 1900 will also prove a good year. The vintage of 1893 was the best during the whole of the nineteenth century, and exorbitant prices are demanded for the Rheingau wines of that year.

There are at least three varieties of dogs that never bark—the Australian dog, the Egyptian shepherd dog and the "lion-headed dog" of Thibet.

Knew Her Well.

"I did not know that you knew my wife."

"Oh, yes; very well."

"Where did you meet?"

"Never before; but one of my servants lived at your home two months."

Brain-Food Nonsense

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain another for muscles and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or to prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthly action, purifies the blood and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's, Get Green's Special Almanac.

An Estimate of Success.

"And how is my old school friend Bimson getting on?" said the man who had returned to his native city after a long absence.

"Oh, he's doing first rate."

"But he was such a bright boy we always expected he would display especial ability."

"Well, I don't know that he hasn't displayed especial ability."

"I never hear him mentioned in connection with any of your city elections."

"No; that's just the point. He has shown ability to go ahead and build up a business. He dosen't have to run for office."

Rifle Clubs in Japan.

Great efforts are being made in Japan to develop a taste for rifle shooting among the people. Rifle clubs have been formed after the European model, most of them closely resembling those existing in Switzerland. A marked improvement in the general shooting is already shown. The emperor takes the greatest interest in the movement and subscribes large sums for prizes. Japan has introduced the bicycle into its army. Last year a number of machines were purchased in Belgium, and on these Japanese soldiers have been exercised in orderly and reconnoitering duties.

Four Captain Lawtons.

It is an odd fact that there are now four Capatin Lawtons in the United States regular army—not one of whom is related to the late General Henry W. Lawton, who made the name illustrious in Cuba and the Philippines. One of these, Captain Louis B. Lawton, is to be retired for desperate wounds received in battle in China, where he distinguished himself not only for extraordinary heroism, but for sagacious action in a dangerous situation. He must now give up his chosen career, because of those honorable wounds. In any other country extraordinary honors would await such a man.

Judicial Oaths in Maryland.

The Maryland constitution contains a peculiar provision as to oaths taken in court proceedings in that state. It is as follows: "That the manner of administering the oath or affirmation to any person ought to be such as those of the religious persuasion, profession, or denomination of which he is a member generally esteem the most effectual confirmation by the attestation of the divine being."

Stetson's "Dog Watch."

When Mr. Stetson was proprietor of the Howard Athenaeum at Boston he would, with his one good eye, peep through the scene to watch the effect of the Monday night turns on his audience.

One night, while a man with some poorly trained dogs was doing his turn, he saw in a few moments that it was not going to be popular. Storming around at the back of the stage, he called the manager, and, with a few choice epithets in the direction of the performer who was doing his best to earn his salary, he demanded how much time it took for the turn.

"Twenty-three minutes."

"Twenty-three hexes!" exclaimed Stetson. "You take that blankety fool up the alley tomorrow night, and every night of his week, and let him perform his fool dogs there for just twenty-three minutes. He's engaged for a week, and by gee, he's got to earn his salary—but not in the presence of my audiences."

To Study the Sea.

Representatives of eight nations met at Christiania early this summer to consider methods of systematic international oceanic research. Sweden Germany, Great Britain, Denmark Belgium, Norway, Russia, and Holland were the nations represented The scheme provisionally adopted divides the eastern north Atlantic and its estuaries into spheres, each of which is looked after by one of the nations. It is expected that each country will equip a special ship for its work. There is to be a central international laboratory, possibly at Christiania, where the work of the various ships will be collated and combined and the general results of the work made ready for the public. The work of the association will be of a practical as well as scientific character. The study of the distribution of fish, fish food deposits, etc., will be one of the first items in the present plan.

Bulls in Parliament.

If it were not for the Irish members of parliament half of the fun of parliamentary proceedings would be lost. "Sir," said an Irish M. P., "if I have any partiality for the honorable member, it is against him!" "Sir," said another, "I answer boldly in the affirmative, No!" "The silence of the Irish members of the house," said another, "shall be heard no longer!" Sir John Parnell declared that "Every man ought to be ready to give his last penny to save the remainder of his fortune!" while another spoke of "Redeeming a character irretrievably lost!"

Another member declared he was not going to reiterate what he was going to say, but that "the time has come—indeed is rapidly arriving—when the poplation of Ireland will be decimated by two-thirds!"

UNDER A WALL

Three Firemen at Corunna Fatally Injured by Explosion.

BRICKS FLEW ALL AROUND

The Men Were On a Ladder Against the Wall of the Varnish Room—They Were Buried Under Tons of Brick.

Corunna, Mich., Oct. 3.—Fox & Mason's big furniture factory of this city was totally destroyed by fire at 9 o'clock last night. The blaze was discovered in the varnish room, and may have been caused by spontaneous combustion. The loss is $40,000; $19,000 insurance.

The slowness of the fire department gave the fire 20 minutes start. The Owosso department, four miles away, got ready to start at a moment's notice, but was not sent for. An explosion while the firemen were fighting the flames resulted in the injury of Chief Charles Wilcox. He will probably die. George Brands and William S. Eveleth were seriously injured. The men were on a ladder throwing a stream into the second story, when the wall suddenly flew into a thousand pieces from an explosion within. Wilcox was buried beneath tons of brick, and was taken out bleeding and unconscious. Doctors give but little hope for his recovery. Brands was badly cut on the head by flying brick, and Eveleth was cut and bruised.

The senior member of the firm, S. C. Fox, is in England, where the firm conducts a wholesale business. Geo. D. Mason, the junior member, says the factory will probably not be rebuilt until spring, which is a hard blow to Corunna, as 125 men will be out of employment. The factory burned four years ago and was rebuilt by the aid of a bonus. Corunna has no water works and a poorly equipped department.

Appeal From Assessed Valuation.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 3.—Four members of the state tax commission are here to hear the appeal of the Grand Rapids Gas Co. from the assessed valuation as raised by the commission. It was heretofore thought that the appeal was taken by the local board in behalf of the company, but the presence of Bob Oakman develops that Oakman made the appeal personally, in behalf of the company, and that he is their representative. The commission will spend the day hearing the case, and go tonight to the northern peninsula.

Fatal Bicycle Accident.

Detroit, Oct. 3.—The season's list of bicycle accident victims has been hours.

Miss Elizabeth L. Scates, a professional nurse living at 1157 Third avenue, was crossing Hancock avenue at Fourth avenue last night when she was ridden down by Howard C. Gilchrist, who was riding a wheel. She was picked up unconscious and removed to Harper hospital, where it was found her skull had been fractured. Her recovery is doubtful.

Pleaded Guilty, Ten Years.

Gaylord, Mich., Oct. 3.—Oscar Morey, after his trial for the murder of William Potter had progressed for a day and a half, Wednesday afternoon pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree and was sentenced to 10 years in Jackson state prison. Morey's home is in Lapeer. Nathan Brown and Potter's wife are jointly charged with Morey as accessory to the shooting of Potter, but have not yet had their trial.

He is a Candidate.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 3.—Judge Mills of Kalamazoo, while in the city yesterday, openly declared himself a candidate for the republican nomination for governor next year. He says his candidacy is without reference to anyone else's chances, as he is in the field to stay.

The Stearns men think this will bring the Ludington man also in the race against Bliss, while the friends of Bliss say Mills's action is only an excuse for Stearns.

Both in Bad Company.

Sault Ste. Marie, Oct. 3.—Deputy C. E. Fairchild arrested George Webster, charged with trying to kill Farmer Warren Cloudman on Drummond's island with a revolver. Webster, it is alleged, runs a "blind pig" and accused Cloudman of stealing money from him. He shot Cloudman in the right breast. The victim will probably die.

FRESH NORTHWEST WIND.

Weather Bureau Says the Wind Will Blow Today.

New York, Oct. 3.—Yachting enthusiasts and the general public are expecting a most exciting race today between the cup defender Columbia and the challenger Shamrock II. They base their high hopes on the strong wind blowing Wednesday and which the local weather prophets assert will keep up for 24 hours or more. The Washington weather bureau adds to the expectations, which it is hoped will be realized by holding out a promise of a strong breeze off Sandy Hook. The bureau says: "Fresh northwest wind and fair weather for Thursday. The winds ought to hold good throughout the day."

The contest between the two yachts today will be over a 30-mile triangular course, the same as that attempted on Tuesday. Under the conditions of this, the second race, the yachts will be sailed ten miles on each of the three legs of the course. It is the intention o the committee to sail the first leg to windward, which will make the other two a broad reach and a close reach, provided the wind does not shift.

At Sandy Hook everything is ready for the race and if the weather predictions prove true the yachts will have plenty of wind—perhaps more than they want.

THE CHARTER SAYS $125

Chicago Telephone Co. is Collecting More—Injunction to Restrain.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—A fight against the rates charged by the Chicago Telephone Co. was commenced in the courts yesterday under the auspices of the Illinois Manufacturers' association. It was the original intention to apply for a writ of mandamus compelling the company to lease its telephones in the business district for $125 per annum, the present prince being $175. The attorneys for the plaintiffs claim that in a charter granted in 1889 the telephone company agreed to charge but $125 per annum, and declared that it would not thereafter raise its rates. The action, therefore, took the form of an application for an injunction to restrain the company from interfering with the telephones of patrons who have tendered to the company the rate of $125.

WHAT WILL HE DO?

Gov. Durbin is Deluged With Letters and Telegrams.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 3.—Gov. Durbin's mail is burdened with letters bearing on the Taylor and Finley requisitions. The governor also has received numerous telegrams from all parts of the state, and even from other states, asking him not to honor the requisitions. It is probable, Secretary Wilson said, that a decision would be reached this week.

At the governor's office talk of the possibility of kidnaping Taylor or Finley is scouted. It is believed at been under surveillance of detectives hired by the Goebel prosecution, but this is said to have been only with a view to keeping the men from skipping away, if they had thought of doing so.

WON'T ALLOW IT.

New Controller Holds Up a Lawyer's Claim.

Washington, Oct. 3.—The controller of the treasury has sustained the auditor for the interior department in disallowing a claim for $441,173 and interest, presented by John A. Rollins and James Gilfillan, as their share of attorneys fees under contract made Feb. 13, 1855, with a representative of the Choctaw nation. The auditor and controller hold that the attorneys did not comply with the laws of the interior department as to the manner of making contract with Indians.

Democratic Candidate for Mayor.

New York, Oct. 3.—The city committee of Tammany hall, at a meeting held last night, decided on Edward M. Shepard of Brooklyn as the democratic candidate for mayor of Greater New York. William W. Ladd, Jr., was selected as democratic candidate for comptroller, and George Vanhoesen was selected as the candidate for president of the board of aldermen.

Mrs. Roosevelt has appointed Miss Belle Hagner, daughter of Justice Hagner of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, her social secretary. Miss Hagner acted in the same capacity for Mrs. McKinley.

There is a typhoid epidemic in Gelsenkirchen, Westphalia, and the surrounding country. The number of cases has swiftly increased from 68 to 722. An official examination of the water works is being made.

The secretary's report took up the entire time of Wednesday's session of the International Journeymen Barbers union, in session at Saginaw. The organization is in a flourishing condition. There are now 15,000 members and 350 locals.

Missing Since June 15.

Tekonsha, Mich., Oct. 3.—Orley Hall, a member of the village council, disappeared on the night of June 15 last, leaving a note to his wife, saying that she would never see him again.

A reward of $150 was offered for information that would disclose his whereabouts, but nothing has been heard of him. He carried a policy for $1,000 in Burlington K. O. T. M., which cannot ze recovered without proof of his death.

At the time of his disappearance Hall was just able to walk, as a result of an operation for appendicitis, and he could not possibly have traveled without assistance. His family is distracted over the mystery of his disappearance.

TRADE RELATIONS

National Manufacturers' Association Will Meet Soon.

THEY DEMAND RECIPROCITY

Want to Put Commercial Dealing in a Practical Form—It is to Be Strictly a Reciprocity Convention—Michigan Men Prominent.

Philadelphia, Oct. 3.—The first meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers, which has charge of arrangements for the national conference on reciprocity, will be held here on Oct. 18. The committee on arrangements, of which Hamilton Carhartt and G. H. Barbour of Detroit are members, will decide upon the general plan and scope of the reciprocity conference, will determine upon what basis different branches of industry shall be represented in the convention, and will fix the time and place of meeting. Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Detroit are each after the convention.

In speaking about the coming conference President Search said: "The interest in the movement shown by the manufacturers is significant of the very widespread desire among the manufacturers of the United States for the application of the principles of commercial reciprocity in some eminently practical form. It has been made clear to every member of the committee, and we wish to make it clear to the public, that this is to be strictly a reciprocity convention.

"Its efforts will be directed toward the formulation of practical plans for the further application of reciprocity, either under existing laws or legislation yet to be enacted.

"No consideration will be given to any suggestions looking to general revision of the present tariff laws of the United States or to the abandonment or modification of the essential principles embodied in that law.'

Goldman's "Free Society."

Chicago, Oct. 3.—The "president of money kings and trust magnates" is the way Emma Goldman speaks of President McKinley in the leading article of the anarchist paper "Free Society," issued yesterday for the first time since the assassination. Adulation and reverence is Czolgosz's portion in the same journal.

Mayor Harrison has forbidden the anarchists from holding the meeting called for tonight to hear the Goldman woman's speech which Czolgosg claimed fired him to commit murder.

Port Townsend, Wash., Oct. 3.—The steamer Queen has arrived from Cape Nome, bringing 471 passengers and half a million dollars in gold dust. The passengers report that Nome is crowded with people waiting for opportunity to get out. The customs report at Nome shows that 7,000 people arrived there this season and that 4,000 have already departed.

American Divorce Not Good.

Toronto, Oct. 3.—An important verdict, touching upon divorce law, was given in criminal sessions last evening when the jury found Minnie C. Woods guilty of bigamy. The accused was legally divorced according to the law of the state of Michigan. The woman remarried in Canada. The judge charged against the prisoner and told the jury that American divorces did not hold good in Canada. An appeal will be taken to the superior court.

A Few Wedding Presents.

Paris, Oct. 3.—Le Figaro today gives some details as to the presents to Miss Helen Morton from the family of her betrothed, Comte Boson de Perigord, forming what the French call "La Corbeille." These include two diamond diadems, a diamond aigrette, diamond and pearl necklaces, a number of other jewels and an antique fan.

Lawson Bound to Race.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 3.—Thomas W. Lawson telegraphed to Secretary Wilson of the Kentucky Trotting association that he is very anxious to start Boralma against Lord Derby here, authorizing him to increase the amount of the challenge to $10,000 a side and urging him to use his best endeavors to secure the match. It is said by Mr. Lawson's friends that he is willing to increase the amount to $50,0000 a side. Each of the horses has beaten the other twice.

No Reciprocity.

"Brownly thinks he has the smartest child in the world."

"Yes," answered the morose man. "That illustrates the ingratitude of life. There isn't one chance in a thousand that that child when he grows up will go around declaring that he has the smartest father in the world."—Washington Star.

A Woman Balancing.

When a woman stoops over to pick up something on the floor, why does she always balance herself on one foot, extending the other outward and backward as a counterpoise? This question, not new, never has been satisfactorily answered.—New York Press.

SCHLEY'S FIRST WITNESS.

Lieut. Doyle Changed the Log of the Brooklyn.

Washington, Oct. 3.—An interesting turn was givnn to the Schley court of inquiry yesterday by the introduction of the first witness in Admiral Schley's behalf. This was Lieut. James J. Doyle, who was a watch officer on board the flagship Brooklyn during the war with Spain. The fact that Lieut. Doyle was put on the stand does not mean that the navy department has concluded the presentation of its side of the case. Mr. Doyle was called by the department, but as it also had been the purpose of Admiral Schley to summon him, advantage was taken of his presence on the stand to question him as an original witness for "the applicant." He was under examination by Mr. Rayner in the interest of the admiral when the court adjourned for the day. Before undergoing examination at Mr. Rayner's hands, Mr. Doyle, at Capt. Lemly's request, explained his part in the battle of July 3 and his original entry in the ship's log concerning the famous loop and his alteration of that entry because he subsequently discovered that his first entry had been erroneous.

Lieut. Commander Sharp, who commanded the Vixen during the Spanish war, also gave his testimony during the day, giving especial attention to notes of the battle of July 3, made by Lieut. Harlow, of his ship.

Admiral Evans, Capt. Sigsbee and Correspondent Dieuaide were all recalled for the purpose of correcting their testimony as given Tuesday, and all made additional statements.

Just before the adjournment for the day the court announced its decision not to allow any questions concerning the blockade of Santiago after July 1, when Commander-in-Chief Admiral Sampson arrived there.

WANT SENTENCE COMMUTED.

Gov. Odell Received Two Letters That Surprised Him.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Gov. Odell arrived in this city yesterday afternoon from Newburgh, and when he reached the executive chamber he was surprised to find on his desk two letters requesting him to commute to life imprisonment the sentence of Czolgosz, the murderer of President McKinley. One letter was sent by a man in Illinois and the other by a man in Maine. They were evidently written by cranks, in the opinion of the governor, and no attention will be paid to them.

"You may be assured that nothing will be done by me," said Gov. Odell, "to prevent the execution of Czolgosz on the day fixed by law."

The governor also received a petition for the body of the murdered after electrocution be buried at sea. The government understands the body must be surrendered to the condemned man's relatives, if they claim it after death, and that they have charge of disposition.

PRINCE CHUN Emperor Before More Bad News.

Berlin, Oct. 3.—Prince Chun before leaving Germany sent long dispatches to Emperor William, thanking him for the "gracious reception" extended to the expiatory mission and for the hospitality bestowed and the decoration conferred upon him, and expressing "a ity bestowed and the decoration conferred upon him, and expressing "a hope that the power of the German emperor may promote the culture and development of China by a gracious show of mercy toward the Chinese dynasty and that Germany will maintain the best of relations with China.

He had scarcely gotten away when news arrived that the German mission station near Piang-Tong had been devastated by rebels. The German consul in Canton requested the Chinese to take steps to punish the perpetrators of the outrage. The latest information as to the fate of missionaries is that all but one escaped and reached Hong Kong.

Wholesale Grocery Burned.

Marinette, Wis., Oct. 3.—Fire destroyed the warehouse of Smith, Thorndyke & Brown, wholesale grocers, together with contents, entailing a loss of about $200,000. Among these goods was a large quantity of kerosene oil, which exploded with damaging effect to other goods. It was with the greatest difficulty that the mills and lumber yard of the N. Ludington Co. were saved. The damage is partly covered by insurance.

Child Baptism In Early Days.

The following from the early court records of York county, Me., we give verbatim et literatim: "At a general court held at Saco Sept. 17, 1640, it is ordered by the court that the Worshipful Thomas Georges and Edward Godfrey, councillors for this province, shall order all the inhabitants from Piscataquis to Kenebache, which shall have any children unbaptized as soon as any minister is settled in any of their plantations, they bring their said children to baptism, and if any shall refuse to submit to the said order that the party so refusing shall be summoned to answer their contempt at the general court to be holden in the ince."—Lewiston Journal.

SATURATED IN OIL

Body of Capt. Connell Found by Eleventh Infantry.

FORTY-FIVE BODIES BURNED

The Charred Remains Were Recovered—Bodies Had Been Badly Mutilated—Troops Were Dispatched to the Scene.

Manila, Oct. 3.—The latest news from Island of Samar give harrowing details of the slaughter of the members of Company C, Ninth U. S. infantry, last Saturday at Balangiga. It seems that the president of the town, claiming to be friendly, led the assault in person.

On hearing of the slaughter, Col. Isaac D. Derussy of the Eleventh infantry started for the scene immediately with a battalion. The body of Capt. Connell had been tied at the heels, saturated with kerosene and partly burned.

Forty-five bodies had been burned in a trench, leaving seven unaccounted for. The charred remains of many were recovered. In numerous instances the bodies had been badly mutilated.

Three hundred Macabebes will also be dispatched to the scene of the massacre on board the Legaspi, which is delayed by a typhoon.

Will Know Arctic Currents.

Washington, Oct. 3.—News has been received by Admiral Melville that Capt. Francis Tuttle, the commanding officer of the revenue cutter Bear, placed 15 of the Melville-Bryant drift casks on several of the largest ice floes to the northward and westward of Point Barrow.

Admiral Melville says it will be exceedingly satisfactory information to those interested in Arctic discoveries to learn that the trend of the ice floe this year is easterly, and that the current has considerable strength.

Admiral Melville is exceedingly pleased with the character of the work performed by the Bear and regards the work of Capt. Tuttle as worthy of a medal of honor of the treasury department, if not of congress.

Bisbee a Brigadier-General.

Washington, Oct. 3.—The president has appointed Col. Wm. H. Bisbee a brigadier-general of the regular army. He was recommended highly by Maj.-Gen. Lloyd Wheaton and Maj.-Gen. Arthur MacArthur for his recent service in the Philippine islands. He entered the service as a private of the lieutenant for gallant and meritorious service in the battle of Murfreesboro, Tenn., and brevetted captain for gallant and meritorious services during the Atlanta campaign and the battle of Jonesboro, Ga., in 1864. He participated in the Santiago campaign and went to the Philippine islands in 1899. He will retire Jan. 28, 1904.

The Last But One.

Joliet, Ill., Oct. 3.—Rod mill No. 2, the last but one of the departments closed by the great steel strike here, will resume operations next Monday, notices to this effect having been posted by the Illinois Steel Co. More than 200 men will go back to work. This leaves only the Merchant mill in idleness. It is expected that this will start up soon. Efforts by prominent citizens are under way to settle the strike at the Bates machine works, which has been in progress several weeks and has led to bitter personal encounters between union and non-union men.

Episcopal Church Convention.

San Francisco, Oct. 3.—The triennial convention of the Episcopal Church of America was formally organized today by the election of Bishop Fowler of Kentucky as president, and Rev. S. Hart of Kansas City secretary of the house of bishops; Dr. John S. Lindsey of Massachusetts, chairman, and Rev. Charles Hutchins secretary of the house of deputies.

No other business of importance was transacted during the first business session of the convention, which did not assemble until late in the afternoon.

Two Race Horses Burned.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 3.—Fire at noon Wednesday destroyed a barn on the farm of Peter Vreedenburg, four miles west of Springfield. Four horses were burned, including the racers Cutting and Lillian Brooks. Cutting has a record of 2:13, and Mr. Vrendenburg had refused $4,000 for the horse. The loss is $12,000.

Princeton Won the Game.

Princeton, Oct. 3.—The university football team defeated the Villa Nova eleven here yesterday in the first game of the season by a score of 35 to 0, two touchdowns being made in the first half and four in the second. The game was characterized by Princeton's fumbling the ball and lack of team work of Villa Nova.

To Break World's Record.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 3.—In a telegram to the Kentucky Trotting association, declining the challenge of Thomas W. Lawson for a $5,000 match race between Boralma and Lord Derby, Harry Hamlin announces that he will start Lord Derby during the meeting here to break the world's record, now held by Cresceus.

Will Command the Ranger.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Commander Wm. P. Potter has been detached from the navy yard at League Island and is ordered to command the Ranger on the Pacific station. The order previously assigning Commander Dennis H. Mahan at the Puget Sound navy yard to that vessel has been revoked.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous [illegible] 104 issues in

Can't Get the Testimony.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 3.—News was received from the supreme court yesterday morning that the application of Salsbury and other grand jury respondents for an order directing the circuit judge to furnish them with a copy of the testimony taken before the grand jury is denied. This is a most severe blow to the defense, as they have banked all the time on getting this testimony.

The circuit judge refused the application on the ground that he had no authority over such testimony, and that it was a secret of the jury room. Defense insisted that he had discretionary jurisdiction, and Judge Morse took an appeal to the supreme court accordingly. The decision of the court declares that the circuit court has no jurisdiction whatever over the grand jury testimony, and that under no circumstances is the defense entitled to it. It is expected now that the cases will go to trial immediately.

State Auditors Will Test the Law.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 3.—The supreme court at the October session, which will commence next week, will probably pass on the validity of the act passed last winter, providing a salary of $1,800 for each member of the board of state auditors for services as a member of such board, in addition to his constitutional salary as an elective state official.

Each member of the board has filed with Auditor-General Powers his bill for $1,350 for salary to Oct. 1. In compliance with his agreement with Gov. Bliss, the auditor-general will refuse to allow these bills, and mandamus proceedings will follow.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Michigan pensions were granted Wednesday as follows: Original—Ransom N. Francis, Three Rivers, $6; Franklin Whitbeck, Grand Rapids, $8; Richard Lambert, Hillsdale, $6; Martin V. Shears, Marcellus, $6; (war with Spain) Floyd M. Chatterton, Lansing, $8; Ralph P French, Marshall, $6. Increase—Harry Howard, Jackson, $8; Wm. McMaster, Galien, $17; Hobias C. Haynor, Lyons, $12; John H. Sage, Henriette, $8; Jos. H. Barker, Homer, $10; Luther C. Britton, Hudson, $21. Widows—Caroline Weaver, Munson, $8; Elnora Marks, St. Clair, $8; Roena Wright, Biteley, $8; Ellen A. Lamoreaux, Shelbyville, $12.

Has His Troubles.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 3.—Edward Deforest, charged with sending poisoned peaches to Mrs. Clara Wandell, who had discarded him, was bound over to the circuit court for trial. Another warrant was issued both for Deforest and Mrs. Wandell, charging adultery. The complaint was made by Deforest's wife, who lives at Climax. Deforest's bonds were fixed at $200. Mrs. Wandell was released on her own recognizance. Her examination will be held on Friday.

Sportsmen Arrested.

Alpena, Mich., Oct. 3.—Sheriff Noffze of Presque Isle county, served warrants yesterday on Dr. V. F. Godfrey and J. C. Rutledge, two well-known residents of this city, on a charge of shooting deer out of season. Hearing before Justice Blow of Belle, Presque Isle county, today.

Monroe Brewery Burned Out.

Monroe, Mich., Oct. 3.—The Wahl Brewing Co.'s large plant was visited by another disastrous fire early yesterday morning, practically the whole plant being consumed. A high wind prevailed at the time. Cause of fire unknown. The loss will probably reach $20,000; fully insured.

Sale of Public Lands.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 3.—Land Commissioner Wildey will hold a public sale of reappraised college, primary school and swamp lands, as well as some forfeited lands. Most of these lands have been out of the market for some months while being re-examined and reappraised.

Wanted in Texas.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 3.—Jack Dempsey, who is wanted in Texas on a charge of robbing a man of $2,600 in cash and a quantity of jewelry, while attending the funeral of the attorney-general of that state, will be given a hearing by Gov. Bliss this afternoon. Dempsey is under arrest in Detroit.

Victims Will Recover.

Standish, Mich., Oct. 3.—The condition of ex-Senator Alexander Forsyth, who was badly hurt by being thrown out of his buggy, striking on a stump, Monday night, is much improved, and he will recover. The little girl, Blythe Honey, who was badly hurt, will also recover.

Prof. Keene Disappeared.

Owosso, Mich., Oct. 3.—Prof. Keene, palmist, who has been here for a week, disappeared, and the officers have started a vigorous search. They connect him with Palmist Wyman of Port Huron, who, it is alleged, flimflammed Mrs. Emma Hastings out of $200.

Ingenious.

"I can't help admiring the ingenuity of the landlady at our house."

A FAREWELL TO YESTERDAY.

Where is the road to Yesterday?
Oh, tell in prose or rhyme,
For I would trace my backward way
To that enchanting clime!

Life was so fresh and good and true
And friends so kind and fair,
Why should a day so bright and new
All fade away in air?

Who knows the road to Yesterday?
Is every seeker blind?
Say, does it cast no single ray
To pilot those behind?

Oh, there's a road that leads our feet
To hours more glad and bright—
A road so short, a joy complete,
A journey of a night!

Come, bid farewell to Yesterday,
For in Tomorrow's face
The happiest days now flown away
Shine with a sweeter grace.

THE LITTLE GOLD NUGGET

A Tale of the Australian Gold Diggings.

John Archer decided that the nugget would be safer in his little daughter's keeping than in his own.

"You must take great care of it, darling," said John Archer. "It is for your mother." And Effie stowed the little nugget away in a corner of the old workbox which had been her mother's under the cotton and socks she was darning for her father. She felt duly weighted with the responsibility. She knew that this yellow earth was of great value, for her father, leaving her mother, who was very delicate, with some friends in Brisbane, had come a long, weary way to find it.

Having hidden the little nugget away, Effie came out of the hut to look around and see if any one was near who might have seen her. No. No one was near who might have seen her, only Billy, the black—King Billy, the aboriginal monarch, who loved rum and tobacco and who was chopping some firewood for her.

This little girl's reason for trusting King Billy, the black, was somewhat strange and is worthy of being recorded. She trusted him because she had been kind to him.

But Effie was only 12.

As the child stood in the broad light, her tumbled hay hued hair kissed and illumined by the bold rays of the sun and her round, trustful blue eyes shaded from the glare by two little brown hands, watching King Billy at his work, a flock of laughing jackasses alighted in a neighboring gum tree and set up a demoniac cachinnation. What made the ill omened birds so madly merry? What was the joke? Effie's trust? Billy's gratitude? They failed to explain, but their amusement was huge and sardonic.

"Drive them away, Billy," cried Effie, and the obedient king dropped his ax and threw a faggot of wood at the tree, which stopped the laughter and dispersed the merrymakers.

"Billy tired now," said the black grinning. "Too much work—plenty wood," and he pointed to the result of his labor.

"Yes, that will be enough, thank you. You're a good boy. I'll give you some tobacco."

"Billy's thirsty."

"Then you shall have some tea."

"No tea. Rum."

"No, Billy. Rum isn't good for you."

"Good for miners; good for Billy."

"No, it's not good for miners," said Effie emphatically. "It makes them fight and say wicked things."

"Makes black fellow feel good," declared Billy rolling his dusky eyes.

This last argument was effective. Effie went into her hut—her father had returned to his work—and poured a little spirits from John Archer's flask into a pannikin. Billy drank the spirits with rolling eyes, smacked his lips and then lay down in the shadow of the hut to sleep.

The long afternoon passed very slowly for Effie. Her few trifling duties as housekeeper were soon done. The little hut was tidied and the simple evening meal prepared and some hours must pass before her father returned. How could she pass the time? She had only two books—a Bible and a volume of stories for little girls, which she had won as a prize at school in Brisbane. But she was too young to appreciate the first, especially as the type was very small and it was difficult reading, and she had grown beyond appreciating the stories for little girls, having known them by heart three years before. She would like to have slept. Everything around her suggested and invited the siesta—the steady heat, the brightness of the light without the hut, the distant murmur of miners' voices which came from beyond yonder belt of wattle gums, the monotonous hum of the locusts in the forest, the occasional fretful cry of a strange bird and the regular snores of the fallen king, who slumbered in the shade of the hut. Even the buzz of the annoying flies assisted the general effect and brought drowsiness.

To remain still for a few minutes would have meant inevitably falling asleep. Effie felt this and remembered the little gold nugget. If she slept, some thief might come and take it. And so she put on her hat and, forsaking the seductive cool and shade of the hut, went out into the brightness and heat.

Archer's hut stood on the edge of the valley, over against the foot of the blue, heavily timbered hills. About 50 yards distant from it, hidden among the trees, was a high moss grown rock, at the base of which Effie had discovered the smallest and sweetest of natural springs. Thither the child ran—looking back often to see that no one approached the hut in her absence—to bathe her face. In a few minutes she returned, drying her face in her apron and shaking her wet hair in the sun. No one had come, but King Billy was now awake and was slouching lazily off toward the bush. Effie laughed as she saw him, his great head bent forward and his thin, narrow shoulders bowed. She laughed to think of his laziness and that he should look so tired after such a very little wood chopping.

She was still laughing at King Billy as she opened the old workbox to take another peep at the yellow treasure and to make quite sure that the heat hadn't melted it away. And it was quite slowly that the laugh died from her pretty eyes and mouth—quite slowly because of the moments it took to realize and accept a misfortune so terrible—when she lifted the coarse socks and looked and saw no little gold nugget, saw nothing. Then horror and great fear grew in the blue eyes, and pale agony crept over the childish face and made it old, and the poor little heart seemed to stop beating.

Effie said nothing and made no cry, but she closed her eyes tightly for a moment and looked in the box again. No, it was no illusion. The little nugget was not there. The first gold her father had found, which had been intrusted to her care, which was to have been taken to her mother—it was gone. She put down the box quite quietly and walked out into the day. But the sun was shining very strangely and mistily now, and the blue sky had grown black, and the trees seemed to move weirdly, and the locusts had ceased humming from fear, but the strange bird was somewhere near, shrieking brokenly: "What will father say? What will father say?"

But as the child stood there despairing her sight grew clearer, and she saw a black figure among the trees, and she was conscious of a pair of dusky eyes watching her through the leaves. Then only she remembered, and she knew who had done this cruel thing. King Billy! And she had been kind to him. Effie suddenly burst into passionate sobbing. The black figure still hovered among the trees, often changing its position, and the dusky eyes still peered through the leaves. And the laughing jackasses flew down to the old tree again and laughed more madly than before—laughed at Effie's trust, at Billy's gratitude!

It was 10 o'clock, and darkness and quiet reigned in John Archer's hut. Over among the tents behind the wattle gums a few gamblers and heavy drinkers were still awake, and their voices, raised in anger or ribald merriment, might occasionally have been faintly heard from the hut. But Archer, who had sown his wild oats, was a true worker, and he had his little daughter, for whose sake he had built the hut away from the noisy camp.

Archer had come home late and weary, as usual, had eaten his supper and gone to rest without, to Effie's intense relief, speaking of the little gold nugget. The child was afraid to speak of the loss, and she was not without vague hopes that a beneficent Providence would restore the nugget during the darkness and save her from this great trouble.

For this she prayed very earnestly before she lay down to sleep. Or did she sleep at all that night? She never quite knew. But she thinks that it was then that she first experienced that terrible purgatorial condition which is neither wakefulness nor sleep when the body and mind are weary enough to bring the profound sleep which they require, but which the brain is too overladen and too cruelly active to allow, when dreams seem realities and realities dreams. It must have been a dream when she saw something small and yellow float through the tiny window on the ghostly silver moonbeams. And yet when, having closed her eyes, she opened them again it was still there, hovering about in the darkness, less bright now and with a pale yellow halo. But it faded quite away. It was a cruel, mocking dream.

Then was it a dream when the old curtain which divided her corner of the hut from her father's moved near the ground, bulged slightly toward her? It would be curious to see, and she lay still. From under the curtain seemed to come a thin arm and slowly, cautiously, after the arm a head with a great shock of hair. And the moonbeams just touched a face. I think they kissed it, though it was black, for they found in a black hand the little yellow object which had floated in the first dream.

It was all so real, so beautiful, that the child lay still, scarce daring to breathe lest the vision should melt away, and when in her dream came the voice of her father with the words, "Speak, or I'll fire!" her lips refused to open.

But it was no dream when the shot came and the black king rolled over on the earth dead, with the little gold nugget he had come to restore pressed in the death agony against his heart, where, too, was a little gold.

And the laughing birds in the old tree, startled from their sleep by the shot, laughed once more, wildly and madly, at Billy's honesty.—Exchange.

His Reform.

Lady—What is the matter with my husband?

Doctor—I cannot be sure yet. Have you noticed him doing anything unusual lately?

"Let me see. Well, last evening, instead of lighting his cigar the moment he left the table, he walked into the library and put on his smoking jacket, smoking cap and slippers before beginning to smoke."

"Hum! My, my!"

"And later on, when he wrote a letter, he wiped the pen on a penwiper."

"Horrors! It's paresis!"—New York Weekly.

Keeping Vegetables.

Vegetables should never be put into the cellar, as many of them contain acids which will absorb the poison of the ground air, and if eaten will prove very unhealthy, and if allowed to remain will rapidly decompose and fill the air which arises to the upper rooms with a poison that will undoubtedly cause much mischief. Potatoes should not be exposed to the sun, but kept in some dry place where the light and air can always strike them.

Parasites of the Tiger.

In speaking of the minute parasites which are found in the hairy part of a tiger's foot a scientist says: "They constitute one of the most wonderful curiosities I know of in the animal world The parasites are so small as to be almost invisible to the naked eye, and yet each is a perfect counterpart of the tiger—head, ears, jaw, legs, claws, body, tail, all are there.

A Liquid Glue.

An excellent liquid glue that is very tenacious and almost dampproof can be made by dissolving glue in nitric ether and adding a few pieces of caoutchouc. The solution must be allowed to stand a few days and frequently stirred. As the ether will only dissolve a certain amount of glue there is no danger of getting it too thick.

Meat In Norway.

You don't see fresh meat in Norway any more frequently than in Japan. There is an abundance of ham, bacon and other cured meats and odd things like reindeers' tongues and haunches from polar bears sent down from the arctics, but very little beefsteak, roast beef or mutton.—Chicago Herald.

The etiquette that makes us do an insincere act is an etiquette to be avoided. Honesty of action is the foundation of the finest manners.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Eat Live Fish.

The Japanese practice refined cruelty to delight their palates. They believe that the fish called the dai is most delicious when eaten alive. An expert Japanese carver can dexterously remove five-sixths of the edible matter from its bones without touching a vital part. During this cruel operation the fish is kept alive by wet seaweed which, being placed over its gills, enables it to breathe.

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs Martha Keller, of Cohoctah township, Livingston county who has been seriously afflicted with a complication of diseases for years, voluntarily makes the following statement. She says: I had been a great sufferer with catarrh of the stomach, heart failure and nervous debility. I would have peculiar nervous spells come over me and I would faint away; have been carried in the house more than once in that condition, My heart and stomach troubled me terribly all the time, having tried a number of doctors without receiving any permanent relief. I saw the advertisement of Dr. Walker in the papers, also hearing of the doctor's many cures. I decided to call at the hotel and see him. I at once placed myself under Dr. Walker's treatment. I improved right along and am now happy to say that all of the above symptoms have left me. To have my stomach, heart and nerves feel natural once more causes me to feel very grateful. I most cheerfully recommended the doctor to all afflicted ones. Signed MRS. MARTHA KELLER.

Mrs. Chas. Maltby, of Milan, Mich., says: I was taken with Lagrippe last winter; soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system; my sufferings at times were intense and intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I go around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health. Signed CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was." Signed JAMES B. GILDAY. Yargerville. Monroe County, Mich. June 28. 1901.

Sick all his Life. Read the statement of another well known citizen of Monroe county: Mr. W. W. Murphy, of Samaria, who had been almost a constant sufferer all his life from stomach and liver complications. He says: "I have found Dr. W. C. Walker's treatment a great help to me. I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment, Had tried everything I could hear of befor with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker." Signed W. W. MURPHY Samaria, Monroe Co., Mich., June 25, 1901.

Mr. A. C. Crittenden, a well-known business man of Carleton, Mich., states: I took a course of treatment of Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, some 2 years ago and I take pleasure in saying the doctor made a permanent cure of my case. There has been no return of former trouble. Signed A. C. Crittenden. Carleton, Monroe co., Mich., Sept. 10, 1901.

Brussels Lace.

After Waterloo M. Trayaux, a leading lace merchant, turned his warehouse into a hospital for British soldiers. Such virtue was not left to be its own reward. His good action was noised abroad, and when the stream of tourists set in again all the English made it a point of honor to buy lace of him; hence in a few years his fortune was made.

Many attempts have been made to make brussels lace away from Brussels, always though without success. Though the mechanical processes are strictly followed, something in the air or water or soil gives a hallmark that nothing else can attain.

The Wonderful Number Seven.

Seven is a number of great prominence and singularity. There are seven planets, seven metals, seven colors and seven tastes; there are seven principal virtues—three divine and four cardinal; there are seven days in the week and seven ages of man; there are seven windows through which the ordinary senses are exercised—the eyes, the ears, the nostrils and the mouth; there are seven liberal arts, seven sciences and seven notes in music; the seventh son is a wonder, and the seventh son of a seventh son is simply marvelous in his healing powers.

Incontrovertible Evidence.

Greek Marriage Customs.

The marriage in Constantinople of an Englishman and a Greek woman entails three wedding ceremonies. To be legal it must be performed at the consulate. The couple are legally married there the first day, and on the next a church ceremony is performed in the English church, while the Greek religious ceremony which follows is celebrated at the bride's home. The last is the only legal form of marriage as far as the bride is concerned.

In the Greek ceremony no ring is used, but the best man places a wreath bound with white satin ribbons on the heads of bride and bridegroom. Then, while the priest is pronouncing the words of the service, the couple walk around him in a circle three times, holding candles, the best man at intervals changing the wreaths from one to the other. When all is over, the friends throw small coins or tokens of gold and silver over the wedded pair, and a general scramble ensues among those present to secure the tokens.

Mrs. Frank D. Avery

Mrs. Jennie Avery, nee Lee, beloved wife of F. D. Avery, departed this life at her home in Tecumseh Sept. 28, 1901. She was born in Cambridge, Mich., Aug. 3, 1850 and was married to F. D. Avery July 12, 1874. In September of that year the newly married couple moved to New York State and four years later returned to Cambridge, Mich.

In 1888 the family moved to Tecumseh, where they have since resided. Five children have been born to them, two of which died in infancy. Three children, Clarence, Jessie and Lisle, a daughter-in-law, a husband, an only sister, Mrs. J. Hand, of Cambridge, and a very large circle of friends mourn her loss.

Mrs. Avery united with the Cambridge Baptist church about thirty years ago. When the family moved to Tecumseh she identified herself with the First Baptist church, of which she was a member at the time of her decease. She was one of the most active members, always doing her work with cheerfulness and great efficiency. Mrs. Avery was also a member of the Tecumseh W. R. C. and at one time president of the society and always active in the work of the society. She was also a member of the Eastern Star and Research Circle. She was a faithful wife and mother, a generous, genial, energetic soul.

That she was loved by all is evidenced by the very large attendance at her funeral, which was held at the Baptist church. The services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Leslie Bower. Bible lesson, Psalm 90 and I Cor. 15: 1-23. Text of sermon Rev. 14: 23. The choir sang "Drifting Away" and "Nearer my God to Thee." Her body rests in Brookside cemetery, her spirit is in the Father's house. The mourners go about the streets. She is gone up to the celestial gardens.

Yesterday and to-day have been
Heavy with care and sorrow;
I should faint if I did not see the dawn
Of God's day that's after to-morrow.

The cause of the people I serve
To-day in impatience and sorrow,
Once more is defeated, but yet,
'Twill be won the day that's after to-morrow;

For me with spirit elate,
The mire and the fog I press through
For heaven shines under the cloud
Of the day that's after to-morrow."

Mrs. Caroline Smallidge.

Mrs. Caroline Smallidge, a former resident of this place, who has been growing feeble for the past three years, died of paralysis at the home of her son Frank at 701 Jefferson Ave., Detroit, Sept. 24, 1901.

Mrs. Smallidge was once a resident of this city but moved to Detroit about thirty years ago, where she has since made her home. She was brought here and laid to rest in the family lot in Brookside cemetery Sept. 27.

The deceased was born at Trumansburgh N. Y., Dec. 7, 1819. Her father's name was Thomas Mandeville and her grandfather's, Francis Mandevile, was a Presbyterian minister during the days of the revolution. Her family furnished soldiers for every war in which their nation has entered; so she must be counted among the first families of the land, the true blue.

Miss Caroline Mandeville was married to Wm. Smallidge at Meadville, Pa., from there they moved to Erie, Pa., and then to this city to make their home. To them were born eight children, five of whom survive her, Mrs. James Berringer, of Los Angeles, Cal., Mrs. C. W. Reynolds, Mrs. G. E. Burnham and Frank E. Smallidge, of Detroit, and Wm. Smallidge, of this place.

Mrs. Smallidge was a woman of great executive ability and a determined will which enabled her to lead her family through an eventful life to manhood and womanhood in a manner to command the respect of all who knew her. Though she lived to the ripe age of 82 years she kept her own home to the close, not giving up the responsibility even during the last three years of her declining health.

During her life by her sympathy and charity she endeared herself to many. She did not make a show of her benevolence but now a large number rise up to call her blessed. Her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren with a large circle of friends delight to do her honor. She joined the Presbyterian church when a girl. She held her Savior precious through all her long life. She died in the full hope of coming glory. May her bereaved family find comfort in the promises of her God.

A NICE WEDDING

Solomnized at Kalamazoo Wednesday, Oct. 2.

FRANK NYLAND

Becomes the Happy Husband of Miss Margaret Tanis.

Last Wednesday Frank Nyland quietly stole away up the road and next was news that he was married at Kalamazoo. He can be regarded as one of Tecumseh's foremost young business men, being one of the proprietors of the Heesen Bros. & Co.'s foundry. The HERALD desires to extend congratulations and wish the young couple all success in life, also to assure the young lady that she has made no mistake as Mr. Nyland is one of Tecumseh's best young men in every particular.

The following account from the Kalamazoo Gazette speeks many words of praise for Mrs Nyland:

The marriage of Miss Margaret E. Tanis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Comer Tanis, and Frank H. Nyland, of Tecumseh, Michigan, was celebrated at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents 911 South Burdick street, Rev. H. W. Gelston officiated, the ring ceremony being used.

The ceremony took place in the front parlor under a canopy of white lace draperies, from which was suspended a horseshoe of carnations. Ferns and palms were the other decorations in the two parlors. The bride wore a dainty gown of Persian lawn with garniture of Mechlin lace, and carried bride's roses. The attendants included the maid of honor, Miss Nellie Tanis, sister of the bride, and Miss Lida Nessink, cousin of the groom, as bridesmaid, and Messrs. John Nyland, brother of the groom, as best man, and Peter Servaas as groomsman. The maid of honor and bridesmaid both wore gowns of pink silk mull trimmed with narrow rushings of the same, and carried pink roses.

After congratulations had been tendered the newly wedded pair by the large company of relatives, a delicious three course luncheon was served at small tables, which were decorated with carnations and ferns.

Many handsome gifts of silver, china, linen and cut glass were showered upon the young couple, and a Haviland china lemonade pitcher and tray were the gifts of a number of friends from the Upjohn laboratory, where the bride was employed. Mr. and Mrs. Nyland left for an eastern honeymoon trip and will be at home in Tecumseh after Nov. 1, where the groom is proprietor in a foundry business. The bride's traveling suit was a dark wine color tailor made, with hat to match.

From out of town were present Mrs. Aaron Bosman and Miss Maude Marsilje of Holland, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Van Lopik, of Grand Haven, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Heesen, John Nyland Mr. and Mrs. Will Raymond and son Henry, and Jennie and Angie Nyland, sisters of the groom, of Tecumseh.

Dr. Walker to Visit Tecumseh Regularly.

Dr. W. C. Walker, the eminent Detroit specialist, will be at the Lilley House, Tecumseh Wednesday, Oct. 9, that being the date of his next visit here. Dr. Walker has arranged to make regular monthly visits to Tecumseh in connection with his Adrian visit. The Adrian Weekly Press says under date of Sept 13 last, Dr. Walker gave excellent satisfaction here during his visits to this city some three years ago. Dr. Walker's reputation has been made largely by curing diseases that were supposed to be incurable. See the doctor's column notice in this issue of the HERALD and read the signed statement of well known people cured. Oct. 9, next date at Tecumseh. Consultation free. Office hours 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.

LITERARY NOTES.

There are three short love stories—"Over Sunday," by Corolyn Wells solves a most amusing situation; "Oscar and Louise" is the love story of a Danish overseer and a French maid, told with charming humor by Margaret Sutton Briscoe and illustrated by Louise L. Heustis; "A Triumph's Evidence" is a story of love and politics in the Middle West by Wm. Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kansas) Gazette. Mr. White is a politician as well as a vigorous writer, and this story depicts a race for a United States Senatorship in a most vivid manner.

In the October Review of Reviews there appears an unsigned appreciation of President Roosevelt. The writer regards Mr. Roosevelt, not as a political accident of the Tyler-Fillmore-Johnson-Arthur class, but as a man picked out in advance for the office to which he now succeeds under most painful and undreamed-of conditions. In the writers view, the spirit of the original constitutional provision regarding the Vice-Presidency has been, for the time being, restored, since the second choice of the electors for President was the man whom they named for the Vice-Presidency, and who now, as the result of the assassin's act, becomes President. In other words, Theodore Roosevelt was in fact his party's second choice for the Presidency in 1900.

AN AGED VETERAN.

A Detroit Veteran Talks of War and The Legacy it left Him.

When the annual reunion of the G. A. R. is held, Michigan is always well represented. Around the camp fires of the encampment our boys tell of the hardships they have gone through and the listener who knows nothing of war will wonder how they lived to tell the tale. Few men who followed old glory and escaped the shot and shell returned home without some legacy as a constant reminder of their war days. Our representative found Veteran O. P. Newcomb, of Detroit, at his place of residence, No. 237 Second street. Mr. Newcomb told him how the little conqueror had rendered him invaluable service. We give his account here and some words ofadvice tersely told He said:

"A lake coveing about two acres in extent, containing the dead bodies of 20 les, is not tempting water to drink, but I was one of many who drank it, and all of us wo uld have done so if we had known there was death in every swallow. This illustrates but one of the many hardships and privations passed through during the civil war and it is no wonder G. A. R. men suffer from aches and pains, the most prevalent of these being due to kidney disorders. I am pleased to note that a great many others who passed through as trying ordeals as I, have now learned how these trouble can be mitigated. When I say Doan's Kidney Pills will cure them I not only speak from experience but from observation. To all old soldiers or anyone suffering from kidney complaint my advice is to try that remedy."

I have been taking Kid-Ne-Oids for about four months and am improving wonderfully. I was almost dead and the doctors told me I could not get well without an operation, but the new discovery, Kid-Ne-Oids cured me. Sold by,

His Prayer.

The little son of an Episcopal clergyman of Los Angeles was visiting with his mother a Canadian city, where the two attended services at a certain church. It is the custom in that church for the clergyman and congregation to bow in silent prayer for a minute or two just before the sermon begins. It was a new proceeding to the child, for he was not accustomed to seeing this done in his father's church, but the little chap bravely and reverently did his part.

After the service was over the clergyman, one of the old evangelical school, who had noticed the reverence and apparent devotion of the child, spoke to him and commended his reverence with an affectionate pat on the head. "It was very pleasing," he remarked to a group of bystanders, "to see this little fellow so deeply engaged in earnest prayer just before I began my sermon. What prayer did you offer to the throne of grace, my little boy?"

All unconscious of the effect it produced, the little fellow candidly and instantly replied: "I said: 'Now I lay me down to sleep. I pray the Lord my soul to keep.'"—San Francisco Argonaut.

When suffering from racking cough take a dose of Foley's Honey and Tar. The soreness will be relieved and warm grateful and healing of the partsa affected will be experienced. J. J. Orr.

National Hatreds.

King Joseph, in one of his letters, tells his imperial brother of France that the people of Naples have begun to love their new sovereign and that they hate the old queen. To this Napoleon replies by cynically advising his brother not to believe any of the nonsense talked by courtiers as regards popular likes or dislikes for particular individuals. They are mere evanescent expressions of feeling upon which it is quite unsafe to depend. "What," he adds, "one nation really hates is another nation." We fear that there is a profound truth in this saying. National hatreds are never obliterated, though they are sometimes temporarily concealed by the personal popularity which a particular man or woman may gain in a foreign country.—Saturday Review.

WHAT ABOUT YOUR BOWELS?

If the people only attended to the regular movement of their bowels as closely as they do to their business and social affairs, half the ills of life would be avoided. Obeyed Orders.

An old Yorkshire farmer was walking out one day looking very glum and miserable. He was a typical Yorkshireman, and he dearly loved a joke. But jokes seemed a long way off just then, and the old man was thinking deeply when he was accosted by a tramp, who made the usual request for a night's lodgings and something to eat, as he explained he had had nothing for two whole days. The effect upon the farmer when he said this was magical.

"Why, man," he said, "I've been looking for you all day."

And then without more ado he knocked him down and walked on him from one end to the other. The tramp got up, looking very staggered, and asked him why he had done that.

"Well," said he, "my doctor has ordered me to walk on an empty stomach, and now that I have fulfilled his injunction I can go and have a good feed, and you can come with me."—London Answers.

Bathing In Salt Lake.

"Salt lake is a remarkable sheet of water in many ways, and bathing in it possesses features which are unique," says a Utah man. "It is very invigorating and refreshing, to be sure, but it takes some time to become accustomed to the extraordinary buoyancy of the water. It is quite impossible to sink or to drown in the lake, but many people have been killed by the water. When there is a breeze and spray is dashed upon bathers, the water is so densely impregnated with salt that the liquid portion evaporates very quickly and leaves a deposit of salt on the skin.

"On several occasions people have drifted out while bathing or been wrecked and thrown overboard and afterward found dead on top of the water, choked to death by the accumulation of salt in their mouths and nostrils."

A Pompous Ceremony.

An interesting ceremony takes place daily at Gibraltar. The town and fortress lie at the end of a peninsula, about a mile and a half long, the mainland being Spanish territory. The gate leading to Spain is, every evening, locked at sunset and every morning unlocked at sunrise. Each day a company from one of the regiments performs one of these functions. In the morning the company, fully officered, with colors flying and accompanied by a band, marches to the commandant's house. The company comes to attention, and the commandant hands out the keys on a velvet cushion. These are received by the captain's orderly, the band strikes up, and the procession marches to the gate, which is unlocked with great ceremony. In the evening the same ceremony, in the reverse order, is gone through. All suspicious characters are put out of the town before the gates are locked in the evening.

An Exception.

"I feel so depressed when it rains hard," said Mrs. Snaggs. "But, then, I suppose that is the rule."

"There are exceptions," said her husband.

"Are there?"

"Yes; umbrellas are raised."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

A hopeless man is deserted by himself, and he who deserts himself is soon deserted by his friends.

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insiduous consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

Fainting Spells

always indicate a weak heart. They are usually preceeded or followed by palpitation or fluttering, and there may be pain in left side, a smothering sensation and shortness of breath. Such a heart should be treated at once, before the disease develops beyond control. Heart disease is as easily cured as other troubles if taken in time.

"I was subject to fainting spells, and many times I have fallen on the street. I was often compelled to sit down while walking to avoid falling. When physicians failed to help me, I took Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and was completely cured."

Noisy Sunbeams.

Fill a glass vessel with lampblack, colored silk or worsted. Focus the rays of the sun in a lens—that is, hold a magnifying glass so that the rays pass through it before they fall on the glass vessel. Then revolve in the light, between the lens and the vessel, a disk with an opening or slit in it so that the light is alternately falling on the vessel and being shut out. Now listen, and you will hear a noise when the light passes through the slit, but there will be silence when it is shut out. You must place your ear close to the glass holding the silk or other substance.

Another experiment is to use a prism instead of an ordinary lens. This makes a rainbow, and as the rays pass through the slit it is possible to tell that some parts of the solar spectrum—as it is called—produce sound as they fall on the glass vessel, while other parts have no effect.

The Tunnel Was Forgotten.

At Brussels the visitor is often struck by the extreme thinness of the earth covering the Braine le Comte tunnel and wonders why the common sense of the engineers who made the line did not direct them to continue the cutting and thus avoid a subterranean passage.

The mystery is thus explained: When railways were in their veriest infancy, the Belgian government sent a party of engineers over to England to acquire experience in construction of the new iron highways, and on their return they were instructed to lay out the first railway in that enterprising little kingdom. The work was accordingly put in hand, but on its completion one of the engineers exclaimed:

"Good gracious, we have forgotten the tunnel!"

The consternation was general, especially when it was remembered that there was not a single line in England but could boast of a tunnel. What was to be done? Nothing but to construct the long corridor at Braine le Comte, and when it was finished the earth was put on top. The tunnel was the glory of the line.

Massage For the Scalp.

The hair falls out when the strength of its roots is insufficient to sustain its weight any longer, and a new hair will take its place unless the root is diseased. For this reason each person has a certain definite length of hair. When the hair begins to split or fall out, massage of the scalp is excellent.

Place the tips of the fingers firmly upon the scalp, and then vibrate or move the scalp while holding the pressure steadily. This will stimulate the blood vessels underneath and bring the blood vessels underneath and bring about better nourishment of the hair. A brush of unevenly tufted bristles is also excellent to use upon the scalp, not the hair.

Irregularity and Indigestion.

A common cause of indigestion is irregularity respecting the time of meals. The human system seems to form habits and to be in a degree dependent upon the performance of its function in accordance with the habits formed. In respect to digestion this is especially observable. If a meal is taken at a regular hour the stomach becomes accustomed to receiving food at that hour and is prepared for it.

If meals are taken irregularly, the stomach is taken by surprise, so to speak, and is never in that state of readiness in which it should be for the prompt and perfect performance of its work.

Ashes on Cigars.

"Few men professing to be judges of fine cigars know anything at all about smoking them," remarked a cigar dealer. "The ashes on the end of the cigar serve to retain the flavor and should be permitted to remain as long as possible. Then the constant thumping some smokers give their cigars in the attempt to keep them clear of ashes often causes the wrappers to break, and that also lessens the pleasure of a good smoke."

Dogs of Alaska.

The dogs of Alaska are called malamutes. They are a cross between a dog and a wolf and work in harness soon after their birth. They do not bark, but have a peculiar howl. They have long hair and can sleep in the open with the thermometer [illegible]0 degrees below zero. Their usual food is fish and seal blubber. They are fed once a day, usually at night.

A Reef, a Sand Bank and a River.

Lord Coleridge, the famous lord chief justice, once recounted to Sir Mount Stuart E. Grant-Duff an incident of his earlier life. He had to cross examine an eminent professional witness about a proposed harbor. In the course of doing so he said, "But, Mr. —, isn't there a reef of rocks that would be a great inconvenience to you?"

"Oh, yes," replied the witness. "Undoubtedly there is, but we propose to get rid of it in such and such a manner."

"Very good," rejoined Coleridge, "but when you have got rid of it, would there not be a very awkward sand bank to contend with?"

"Certainly," said the witness, "but against it we should provide thus and thus."

"Well," answered Coleridge, "but when you have removed both these obstacles would you not still have a great deal of trouble from the current of the river when in flood?"

"Clearly," was the answer, "but we should encounter that difficulty successfully by another expedient," which the witness proceeded to explain.

"You have seen the place, have you not?" said Coleridge.

"Oh, yes," replied the other.

"Well, I never did," was the rejoinder. "I have invented alike the reef, the sand bank and the river!"

The Equality Line.

"All people," remarked the earnest citizen, "are born equal."

"Perhaps," answered the deliberate friend, "but they don't stay equal any longer than it takes for their parents to provide them with clothes and playthings."—Exchange.

Consumption

is, by no means, the dreadful disease it is thought to be—in the beginning.

It can always be stopped—in the beginning. The trouble is: you don't know you've got it; you don't believe it; you won't believe it—till you are forced to. Then it is dangerous.

Don't be afraid; but attend to it quick—you can do it yourself and at home.

TRY IT

Women suffering from female troubles and weakness, and from irregular or painful menses, ought not to lose hope if doctors cannot help them. Physicians are so busy with other diseases that they do not understand fully the peculiar ailments and the delicate organism of woman. What the sufferer ought to do is to give a fair trial to which is the true cure provided by Nature for all female troubles. It is the formula of a physician of the highest standing, who devoted his whole life to the study of the distinct ailments peculiar to our mothers, wives and daughters. It is made of soothing, healing, strengthening herbs and vegetables, which have been provided by a kindly Nature to cure irregularity in the menses, Leucorrhœa, Falling of the Womb, Nervousness, Headache and Backache. In fairness to herself and to Bradfield's Female Regulator, every suffering woman ought to give it a trial. A large $1 bottle will do a wonderful amount of good. Sold by druggists.

BRADFIELD'S Female Regulator

WON AMID CHEERS

The Columbia and Shamrock Have Close Finish.

AT THE LINE RAIL TO RAIL

Columbia Saves the Cup in the Closest Race Ever Sailed—The Plucky Sir Thomas Says "She Deserves to be Cheered" as the Better Boat.

New York, Oct. 5.—With victory flags flowing from her towering mastheads and the ends of her spreaders in honor of her concluding triumph in the cup races of 1901, the gallant sloop Columbia returned to her anchorage last night under the escort of the entire excursion fleet. She yesterday completed her defense of the honored trophy in another stirring race with the Shamrock II. over a leeward and windward course of 30 miles, crossing the finish line two seconds behind her antagonist, but winning on the time allowance conceded by Lipton's boat, by 41 seconds. For the second time she has now successfully foiled the attempt of the Irish knight to wrest from our possession the cup that means the yachting supremacy of the world. And plucky Sir Thomas Lipton, standing on the bridge of the Erin, led his guests in three hearty Huzzas for the successful defender. "She is the better boat," he said, "and she deserves to be cheered."

The series of races just closed will always be memorable as the closest ever sailed for the cup, and Sir Thomas, although defeated, will go home with the satisfaction of knowing that his golden yacht is the ablest foreign boat that ever crossed the western ocean. During both series of races not an untoward incident has occurred and Sir Thomas will return to England by far the most popular of foreigners who have challenged for the America's trophy.

Yesterday's race, on paper, was the closest of the series, but because of the flukiness of the wind on the beat home as a contest of the relative merits of the yachts, it is not to be compared with the magnificent, truly run and royally fought battles of Saturday and Thursday. The conditions of the race at start yesterday were very similar to those of Thursday. The wind was strong and from the shore, embroidering the sea with foam and piling up a swell—ideal conditions for the challenger.

The racers were sent away before the wind, each carrying a penalty for crossing the line after the handicap gun.

No official record is kept of the time after that gun is fired, but the experts with stop watches estimated Columbia's handicap at 15 seconds, and Shamrock's at 30 seconds. The contest of the yachts fleeing before the following wind was picturesque, but not exciting. The big racers, like gulls with outstretched pinions, had every inch of canvas spread, all their light sails, including bulging spinnakers and balloon jib topsails. Their crews were gathered aft to keep the heads of the boats up, and thereafter until the outer mark was reached it was merely a question of holding on to all the canvas and letting the wind do the rest.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Columbia beat the Shamrock before the wind last Saturday, the challenger yesterday gained slowly but steadily all the way out and rounded 49 seconds before the defender, having actually gained one minute and four seconds.

It was a pretty sight and one seldom witnessed when they crossed rail to rail, the white yacht's bowsprit just lapping the golden boat's mast. The usual pandemonium that attends the final Yankee victory in a cup contest followed. Whistles, sirens, bells, bands and cheers united in a grand chorus of jubilation, and J. P. Morgan's steam yacht Corsair added to the terrific din by firing a national salute of 21 guns.

After the Columbia had hauled down her sails and set her victory flag the excursion boats crowded alongside to cheer the Yankee sailors and the winning skipper. Nor did they forget either Lipton or his gallant craft. In turn the crowded steamers ran alongside the Shamrock and Erin, and the vanquished received almost as much honor as the victor. And thus with felicitations all around the twelfth series of races for the old cup which the schooner America brought over 50 years ago ended with the best of feeling.

There is a feeling of supreme disappointment in London over the failure of the Shamrock II. to win even a single race.

SETTLERS ARE SCARED.

The Indians Are Mad About Having to Move.

Minneapolis, Oct. 5.—Lars Erickson, a pioneer trader of the Mille Lacs Indian country, called on Gov. Van Sant for aid yesterday. The settlers on the south shore of Mille Lacs lake are in great fear of the Indians, who are on homestead lands, where they have no rights, but are very ugly over the proposed removal to White Earth and over the smallpox quarantine. Erickson said the settlers were seven hours from a telegraph and all might be massacred before help came, in case of an actual outbreak. The government is withholding money due the Indians because they will not move, and this increases the tension.

Fire at Benton Harbor.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Oct. 7.—Fire destroyed the saloon of Peter Scherer and the restaurant of Harry Schaus. The adjoining saloon of Amel Reick was ruined by water and smoke. A gasoline stove exploded in the rear of the restaurant a few seconds later, the interior of the building was on fire. Total loss, $3,500; partly covered by insurance.

Horse and Buggy Stolen.

Flint, Mich., Oct. 7.—Sheriff Rust has been notified that the horse and buggy of Joseph Cathcart, living near Fenton, had been stolen Saturday evening from the Roberts house barn in that village. The horse is a dark dapple gray, weighing about 1,100 pounds.

Farmer Commits Suicide.

Corey, Mich., Oct. 5.—Homer Everart committed suicide yesterday morning by shooting himself through the head. He was a prosperous farmer; family troubles are hinted at.

The Lustrous Pearl.

Pearls, as most readers know, are small bodies found either in the mother of pearl shells or those with a nacreous lining. They are formed either by a disease, by the presence of a parasite or by an effort on the part of the mollusk to rid itself of some foreign substance which has found its way into the shell.

Pearls are composed of many layers of carbonate of lime with organic matter between and are not always pearly throughout and invariably have some small central core or nucleus. Round pearls of fine luster and color are very valuable, and their value increases rapidly with their size.

FOUR MEN KILLED

Collision of Two Freight Trains on the Pan-Handle.

BODIES BADLY MUTILATED

Part of Logansport Fire Department Went to Assistance—One Body Almost Entirely Consumed — Fire Made Work of Rescue Difficult.

Logansport, Ind., Oct. 7.—Four Pan-Handle railroad trainmen met death near Onward, 14 miles southeast of here, Sunday morning in a rear-end collision of freight trains. The bodies of three of the dead were taken out badly mutilated, but the fourth was almost entirely consumed by flames, which broke out soon after the wreck, before the wrecking crew could subdue the fire sufficiently to permit work in that portion of the debris.

The dead: Elbert Greeley, conductor; Thomas H. Brosius, flagman; S. A. Galbreath, brakeman; John Hutchison, fireman.

Injured: Frank Jatterson, engineer.

During the night Conductor Weaver, in charge of the second section of a train, consisting of an engine and two cabooses, left Hartford City for Logansport. In the rear caboose were Galbreath, Brosius and Greeley, who had been working on the gravel train at Hartford City and who were en route to this city to spend Sunday with their families.

All were asleep when the train stopped near Onward to make up steam. The flagman was sent out to watch for the third section, and no danger was thought of until the train loomed up too close for any of the men to escape except Weaver, who jumped and got off uninjured. The third section, with Engineer Frank Paterson at the throttle, had attained high speed, and when it struck the caboose of the second section the engine reared in the air, turned entirely around and came down on its side in the ditch. A number of cars were smashed into kindling wood. The sleeping trainmen in the caboose of the second section and Fireman Hutchinson of the third section were buried in the mass of debris.

The wreckage immediately caught fire and the flames prevented the injured trainment and others who gathered from nearby houses from attempting to extricate the dead bodies of the trainmen. A special train conveyed a part of the Logansport fire department to the scene. The fire was extinguished and the work of removing the bodies begun. The remains of Galbreath, Hutchison and Greeley were found, but the body of Brosius was almost entirely consumed.

The wreck was most disastrous. Six cars were burned from the third section, which with the two cabooses and the ruined engine, make the loss a large one.

The bodies of the victims were brought here and placed in the morgue awaiting removal to their homes.

Shaffer and the Strikers.

Milwaukee, Oct. 7.—President Theodore J. Shaffer of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin-workers, it was learned yesterday, made a flying trip to Milwaukee Saturday, remaining only long enough to make a short speech to a few of the strikers and then took his departure.

It is said not over 15 or 20 of the strikers heard him. The substance of Mr. Shaffer's remarks was that all members of the Amalgamated association who are now at work in the Bay View mills who shall not walk out at once will be considered as black sheep unless the mills are paying the Amalgamated scale in all departments. Mr. Shaffer's visit had no effect on the strike. It is said he did not see any of the officials of the Bay View mills.

Student Roughly Treated.

Beloit, Wis., Oct. 7.—George F. Stockwell, a student in the preparatory department department of Beloit college, was enticed from his room at the house of President Eaton at an early hour Sunday by members of the middle preparatory class. He was overpowered, divested of every article of clothing and compelled to walk ahead of a score of howling students, aided by the application of switches in the hands of his tormentors. His clothing was fastened to the top of a flag pole, and after he had been sufficiently "disciplined" he was allowed to go home to plan revenge.

Indians Have Signed.

Chamberlin, S. D., Oct. 7.—The work of securing signatures of the Rosebud Indians to an agreement relinquishing for settlement their portion of the Rosebud reservation in Gregory county is practically completed. Major McLaughlin, chief Indian inspector, has been engaged for some months in securing the signatures. He hopes to put the lands on the market soon. There are many thousands of acres in the tract of a superior character, and applications are already being filed for them, many people having come here to await the opening.

A Murderous Assaulter.

Pueblo, Col., Oct. 7.—This city is in great excitement over a series of murderous assaults on women and girls. From what can be learned, they seem to have been committed by the same person, a negro or very dark white man with his face blackened. Saturday night Mrs. James P. Henderson was a victim, being half killed with a club while alone at her home. Later a girl in a family named Hamilton was terribly choked by a man who had forced his way in. Mrs. Hickey who was struck down while riding a bike a few nights since, is still at the point of death with a fractured skull and can give no clear account of what occurred. Several other women have been assaulted recently.

Why a Horse Eats Often.

The horse can conveniently eat for twenty hours out of the twenty-four. A horse which is in good health has a good appetite at all times and is able to stand plenty of work and is rarely on the sick list. To be a good feeder, especially on a journey, is a great recommendation in the opinion of every good judge of horseflesh. The reason of a horse being such a constant eater is that its stomach is really small in proportion to the size of its body, and therefore it requires feeding often, not less than four times a day, two of which should be early in the morning and at night, while hay should in the stall be always within its reach.—London Tit-Bits.

INTENSE FEELING

The Authors of the Massacre Were Friendly Natives.

THEY HAD TAKEN THE OATH

The Leader Was Holding Office and Was Considered a Friend—Captain Connell Had Been Warned of an Attack.

Manila, Oct. 7.—Major Morris C. Foote of the Ninth United States infantry, who has returned here from the island of Samar, was in Balangiga the day before the disaster to Co. C. He says that Capt. Connell had been fully warned and had taken what he (Major Foote) considered every necessary precaution. Information that a plot was brewing among the Filipinos came to Major Foote from a priest, who said that it was in the plans of the populace at both Balangiga and Basey to attack the garrisons, and that the Basey garrison was to be attacked from a cockpit in the rear of the barracks. Orders were given to demolish the cockpit, and extra guards were stationed.

There is intense feeling throughout the army because of the massacre which would not be the case to any such extent had it been the work of ordinary insurgents. The latter might have been expected to commit such an outrage.

Feeling is intense in military circles because the authors of the massacre were pacificos, most of whom had taken the oath of allegiance and many of whom, including the president of Balangiga, were actually holding office.

Some of the after effects are already shown at many points, particularly at Baulan and Caloocan, in the provinces of Batangas and Manila, where disaffection is manifesting itself, although it is not likely to be allowed to go far.

On the other hand, the officers feel that the disaster conveys a lesson to themselves of the necessity for increased vigilance.

GOEBEL MURDER CASE.

Court Grants a New Trial for Howard and Powers.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 7.—The court of appeals, having granted former Secretary of State Caleb Powers and James Howard new trials, the case of the former will be called here next Tuesday. Powers has been removed from Frankfort to the jail here, and it is denied that his mind is giving way under the long confinement. Powers was convicted more than a year ago as accessory to the murder of William Goebel, in January, 1900, and sentenced to life imprisonment. Howard was later convicted of the deed and sentenced to be hanged. Over 60 witnesses have been summoned and it is expected this trial will be conducted on lines of marked difference from that of the last year. It is generally believed that both sides have secured much new evidence.

BIG FIRE IN PITTSBURG.

Loss Estimated at Over Quarter of a Million.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 7.—Fire in the Pittsburg clay pot works in Allegheny damaged the plant to the extent of $280,000, injured six men and enforced an idleness of several months upon a force of 165 workmen.

The injured men were firemen who were on the roof of the boiler house when the wall fell, and they were carried with it. None of them will die. The fire originated in the boiler room from an unknown cause and quickly burned its way through into the upper floors used as a drying room and kept at a high temperature. From there the fire communicated to block No. 3, and it was soon reduced to ruins.

To Cross the Ocean in 14-Foot Boat.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 7.—Capt. Wm. Andrews, the veteran mariner left here yesterday afternoon for Europe in his 14-foot boat, the Dark Secret. Accompanying him on the daring trip is his young bride, whom he wedded a few weeks ago. The captain is 60 years old and this is said to be his seventh trip across the ocean in small boats. He expects to reach the English channel in about 12 weeks. In the boat were provisions for four months.

Mormon Annual Conference.

London, Oct. 7.—The semi-annual conference of Mormon missionaries in London came to a close yesterday with three services in the Finsbury town hall, which was crowded at all three. G. Q. Morris presided, and addresses were made by Messrs. Lyman, Eckersley and Emmett, apostles, and other Mormon leaders from the United States. Mr. Lyman referred to the work of the mission in London as a great success and predicted that the Mormon cause would have increased prosperity in Great Britain next year.

Exonerated Rev. McCommish.

Carbondale, Ill., Oct. 7.—The coroner's jury summoned to inquire into the killing of Ben C. Brown on the streets of this city Saturday noon, has rendered a verdict fully exonerating Rev. Joseph McCammish. The prisoner is a man 56 years of age and served with distinction in the confederate army. The funeral of Brown will be held today.

Disastrous Fire at Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—The six-story building at the foot of Michigan avenue, used by the Barry Bros. Transportation Co. as a warehouse, was destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss $100,000.

They Found the Pail.

During a spell of particularly hot weather a well known baronet came across three workmen engaged on a job on his estate. One of them remarked, as workmen not infrequently do, on the dryness of the job. The heat had perhaps extended itself to the baronet's temper. At any rate, he turned away, with the reply: "If you are thirsty, you know where the well is. You will find a pail there."

Thinking over his remark a little later, it flashed across the baronet's mind that he had given orders for three bottles of champagne to be put into the pail and lowered into the well to cool for dinner. He hastened to the well and discovered — three empty bottles! What he said this time is not reported.

SEARCH FOR HUBBY

A Chicago Woman Scoured the Streets of St. Joseph.

SHE WILL SHOOT ON SIGHT

Daughter Followed Her Father to the Dock at Chicago, But Missed the Boat—Her Mother Took the Next Steamer.

St. Joseph, Mich., Oct. 7.—A mysterious woman, clad in black, with a heavy veil covering her face, whose seeming peculiar nervous action attracted the attention of the crew, was a passenger on the steamer Puritan that arrived in this city Sunday afternoon from Chicago. Later in the day it was learned that the passenger's name was Mrs. Walter A. Roberts of Chicago. She related a peculiar story to bystanders in the lobby of a local hotel. It appears that Mrs. Roberts lived happily with her husband and daughter in Chicago, but of late she learned that her husband was keeping company with a handsome young lady. Late Saturday night the daughter shadowed her father with a female companion journeying down Wabash avenue, leading to the Graham & Morton boat docks. The couple purchased tickets on the docks and immediately went aboard the steamer City of Milwaukee, and before the grief-stricken daughter could return home and inform her bother the couple were on their way to St. Joe. Mrs. Roberts followed on the steamer Puritan, and without the aid of the police scoured dozens of streets and boldly entered several saloons without finding the wayward husband, but was compelled to give up the search. While in hotels she boldly remarked that she would have shot her husband on sight. Calmly pointing toward a pocket she said: "I have a weapon concealed that would have executed my wishes." Mrs. Roberts is a handsome woman and appears refined. A man and woman answering to the description of the much-wanted husband and companion was seen aboard an excursion train bound for the interior of Illinois on the Three I. railroad last evening. Mrs. Roberts refused to give her Chicago address.

Miner Killed at Saginaw.

Saginaw, Mich., Oct. 7.—Geo. Robinson, aged 40, was killed in the Chapel-Fordney coal mine Saturday, and Herman Miller was severely injured. They had drilled two holes for shots two and a half feet apart. Robinson lighted one and attempted to light the other, but the fuse did not burn and after the first cartridge had exploded Robinson returned to t[illegible] to examine the second shot, which it exploded, mangling his face and body.

Farmer Had to Pay.

Owosso, Mich., Oct. 7.—A jury in the circuit court gave A. L. Beard of Morrice a verdict of $115 in his case against James Hill, also of Morrice. Farmer Hill and his wife were cured of diseases by Dr. C. A. Fletcher of Kalamazoo, and after the latter had sold a note to Banker Beard, repudiated the signature, declaring it was obtained by fraud. Hill has been defeated in the justice and circuit courts.

May Be Sugar War in Michigan.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 7.—A serious blow would be struck at the manufacturers of beet sugar in the state should the sugar trust transfer the field of war from Missouri to Michigan. It is admitted by local manufacturers that sugar cannot be produced from beets at a less cost than 3⅜ cents a pound, the price which the trust has forced the Missouri beet sugar men to sell at in its war of extermination.

ACCIDENT ON M. C.

Fireman Thrown Violently From His Cab Near Lapeer.

Lapeer, Mich., Oct. 7.—Fireman Corwin, on the Michigan Central passenger train due here at 10:26, was thrown from his cab one mile this side of Hunter's Creek, near what is known as the fatal Newark crossing. The train after leaving Metamora had gained a speed of 60 miles per hour, when the side rod broke and Corwin was either thrown or jumped from the train, striking on his head. He has been unconscious since the accident and it is feared that he will not live. The accident occurred at the curve where young Beecher of Detroit lost his life in 1895.

Food Factory Fire.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 7.—Fire in the storage rooms and elevator sheds of building No. 2, Malta Vita food factory, Saturday did $2,000 damage. It originated from a tinner's fire box while the tinner was working on the roof. The flames were confined to the upper stories and did not communicate to either of the other two buildings where food is made. There was no interruption in work.

Told a Good Story.

Monroe, Mich., Oct. 7.—A stranger representing himself to be in the employ of the Michigan Telephone Co., worked the proprietors of both the Park and Commercial hotels for money. He told a flimsy story about a check which he could not get cashed until later. He was captured as he was about to leave the city and will be tried Tuesday.

Fell Sixteen Feet.

Menominee, Mich., Oct. 7.—Wanses Roshon, while drunk, fell off a lumber pile at the Kirby Carpenter Co.'s yard, and was internally injured. He tried to climb up the side of the pile to get on the tramway and fell about 16 feet.

Rev. Fayette L. Thompson, pastor of the First M. E. church at Jackson, has received a call to the M. E. church at Davenport, Ia., and if the bishop consents, will probably accept. It is regarded as a splendid opening.

Gov. Bliss has pardoned Mrs. Addie Debar, sent to the Detroit house of correction for 60 days; also paroled Carlos Giddings of Gratiot county and commuted the sentence of John Wenig of Jackson from five to three years.

The semi-annual disbursement of primary school money will be made on Nov. 10. It amounts to $1,739,463 72. The total number of children of school age in the state is 720,612, and the rate will therefore be $2 41 per capita. The next highest rate ever made was $1 65. More specific taxes have been paid into the state treasury.

Orion and Oxford villages are furnished with lights by the electric railway company, and the former's light takers are kicking because they have found that while they are paying 20 cents per 1,000 volts for their illuminating juice, the Oxfordites are getting theirs for 8 cents.

Tried to Shoot the Officer.

Vassar, Mich., Oct. 7.—Albert Bently of Mayville tried to shoot William Haines, special officer of Millington, on the fair grounds because Haines pushed him off the race track while drunk. The revolver was taken from him after a desperate fight and he was locked up.

Smallpox at Ann Arbor.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 7.—The case of Ernest Grisbrook of Cheboygan, registered at the university homeopathic hospital for chronic dyspepsia, was diagnosed as suffering from a mild attack of smallpox and removed to the pesthouse.

Big Fire at Ovid.

Ovid, Mich., Oct. 7.—Saturday night the large apple dryer of the Clinton County cider mill, owned by Gleason Bros., at this place, was burned. Loss $5,000; insured for $920.

Taught by Experience.

"We shall need," said the officer who was arranging for the government expedition, "food supplies for six men and a boy."

"Supplies for eight men," said the secretary, jotting it down. "What else?"—Chicago Tribune.

A Neglected Apple.

A BIT OF DIPLOMACY.

CLEVER TRICK OF AN ENGLISH GOVERNOR OF THE PORT OF ADEN

The Curious Story Connected With the White House of Bab-el-Mandeb A Monument of the Undoing of a French Admiral.

On the foreshore of the Arabian coast in the strait of Bab-el-Mandeb, at the southern entrance to the Red sea, stands a large white house concerning which the travelers to the far east may hear a curious story. In the middle of the nineteenth century, when M. de Lesseps, after many difficulties, had successfully floated the Suez Canal company, the governor of the British port of Aden, about 100 miles distant was surprised one morning by the visit of a French squadron of very unusual size for that part of the orient which, having encountered a terrific storm off Sokotra, had put in for repairs.

In the mind of the governor curiosity was at once aroused as to the destination of so large a command, a curiosity which increased as he found it impossible to extract any further information from the French admiral or his officers beyond the statement that they were upon an ordinary cruise, an explanation which the former was not the least inclined to believe.

Firm in the belief, therefore, that some political move of great importance was afloat if not afoot, the governor, in order first of all to gain time, gave orders to go very tortoiselike on the repairs and then set to work to take the Frenchmen off their guard by giving a succession of such entertainments as both his slender means and the awful barrenness of the place would afford.

But though at the end of two weeks the French and British officers had got upon the best of terms the immediate destination of the French squadron remained as much of a mystery to the governor of Aden as before and in spite of all possible delay the repairs were nearly completed.

Now, it happened that the wife of the governor possessed an Irish maid who had been receiving attentions from one of the French petty officers—attentions which the girl did not regard seriously. It occurred to the governor that by such means something might be learned of his unexpected visitor's plans, and a private conversation between the governor's wife and her maid resulted in another between the latter and her French admirer, by which it was discovered that Perim island was the objective point.

At this information the governor opened his eyes wide indeed, for, if the Suez canal were cut through, Perim, as commanding the southern entrance to the Red sea, in the middle of the strait of Bab-el-Mandeb, would be a place of great strategic importance, over which, without doubt, it was the intention of the French admiral to hoist the tricolor.

Secretly giving orders, therefore, for a gunboat to immediately embark a detachment of soldiers and steal away in the night for Perim island, the governor then announced a farewell banquet and ball for the day but one following, a final act of courtesy with which the French admiral would willingly have dispensed, for he was anxious to sail, but which he could not well refuse on account of the use he had made of the British supplies and machinery at Aden.

So the dinner and party in due course came off, the governor being in high spirits, because in the meantime he had received the news of the occupation of Perim, which under the circumstances would surely be followed by the longed for promotion, and the French admiral was equally happy, for he hoped on the morrow to add the same important little speck of land to the dominion of his own country, thereby covering his breast with the stars and himself with maritime glory.

Next day, after an interchange of cordial farewells, the French squadron sailed away to an apparently unknown destination, until, when clear of the land, the course was laid full speed direct for Perim island.

Then what was the dismay and disappointment of the French admiral and his officers when, on coming in sight of their destination, they beheld the British flag flying and a company of soldiers drawn up to give them a proper salute. It is said the French admiral was so mortified at being thus outwitted that he first flung his cocked hat overboard and then followed it himself into the sea.

Be this as it may, as Perim was clearly already occupied by the British, the only counter move which the French could make was to take possession of a strip of the foreshore on the opposite Arabian coast, where they built the fortified white house in question, but as the place was entirely at the mercy of the guns on Perim island it was shortly abandoned, to remain to this day as a monument of a French admiral's undoing.—Exchange.

Inopportune.

"I just saw the young Widow Weeds. She looked just charming in her mourning," said the pretty woman.

"I suppose," remarked her crotchety husband, "that you wouldn't mind being a widow yourself."

"Oh, it's hateful of you to talk that way, when you know I've got a blue silk waist that I haven't worn yet."—Philadelphia Press.

Birds' Eggs Superstitions.

The old, wrinkled, dusky aunties of the south tell children: "Do not eat the bluebirds' eggs. They make you love to wander." They believe that the pale blue eggs of that beautiful creature, "that violet of the air," that bird with "sky tinge on his back, earth tinge on his breast," will make the greedy nest robber restless as long as he lives. No place, however enticing, can hold the being who has once tasted a bluebird's egg.

He who eats a mocking bird's egg will be compelled to "tell all he knows." The one who robs a killdee's nest and eats its eggs will surely break an arm.

He who eats a dove's egg will be followed by bad luck, while the egg of any bird of yellow plumage will be sure to cause a fever, and he who eats an owl's egg will be always shrieking. The eater of a crow's egg will always, as old aunties say, "be gwine on foolish like a crow does go on, 'Ha, ha, ha!' But a partridge's egg," they declare, "du des make you thrive an' grow fas'. Dey is de onlies' sort er birds' eggs dat you kin eat widout findin' 'em dangersome."

Some Girls.

Some girls, when asked to elope, are like ice. At first they are cold and repulse you; then they melt and run away.—Whitewater (Kan.) Independent.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at C. A. Wright's.

Many people would do very little for God if they were sure that hell was closed.

Can't be perfect health without pure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters makes pure blood. Tones and invigorates the whole system.

Better suffer in a good cause than make a good cause to suffer.

Makes assimilation perfect, healthy blood, firm muscles, strong nerves. Quickens the brain, makes and keeps you well Great medicine, Rocky Mountain Tea, 35c. J. J. Orr.

A sinner's company is not hard to find

The Hawaiian woman's club at Honolula debated the question: "Is it better to take Rocky Mountain Tea hot or cold?" Either way it magnifies your pleasure. J. J. Orr.

Better to think and not to say than to say and not to think.

Stepped Into Live Coals.

"When a child I burned my foot frightfully," writes W. H. Eads, of Jonesville, Va., "which caused horrible leg sores for 30 years, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured me after everything else failed." Infallible for Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Sores, Bruises and Piles. Sold by C. A. Wright.

A man lives to no purpose who lives to bad purpose.

J. Odgers of Frostburg, Md., writes: "I had a very bad attack of kidney complaint and tried Foley's Kidney Cure which gave me immediate relief and was perfectly cured after taking two bottles. Be sure you take Foley's. J. J. Orr.

The best throw with the dice is to throw them away.

After exposure or when you feel a cold coming on take a dose of Foley's Honey and Tar. It never fails to stop a cold if taken in time. J. J. Orr.

If you cannot speak well, it is well not to speak.

S. A. Ingalls, Crown Point, N. Y., writes: "My wife suffered from kidney trouble for years. She was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure and in less than a week after she began using it she was greatly improved and three bottles cured her." J. J. Orr.

Gold loses its shine when it is gotten by guilt.

What's Your Face Worth?

Sometimes a fortune, but never, if you have a sallow complexion, a jaundiced look, moth patches and blotches on the skin, all signs of Liver Trouble. But Dr. King's New Life Pills give Clear Skin, Rosy Cheeks, Rich Complexion. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright's.

The little form is silent,
His little hands are cold,
The tiny feet are tripping
The shining streets of gold.

How sweetly he is sleeping,
His sufferings are o'er,
And in the arms of Jesus
He's resting evermore.

Our darling Ralph is with the angels,
He no more will suffer pain,
God has taken him in his bosom,
And our loss is but his gain.

ROUND ABOUT US

The Manchester creamery received 203,891 pounds of milk during the month of August produding 11,076 pounds of butter and paid the patrons for the same $1,956.97.

A Chicago kid, swallowed a toy balloon, or swallowed at it, lodged in his throat, and began to inflate with his breath. A doctor slashed open his wind pipe, cleared out the throttle, inserted a silver tube, and prevented an ascension.—Adrian Press.

A girl goes down town five evenings a week and has a different "feller" on the string for each of the remaining evenings. She continues this for one year, when she goes down town every night and has added three more fellers to her list. At the end of ten years will she be a sour old maid, a sporty widow or the wife of a boose fighter with six children to support by taking in washings?—Brooklyn Exponent.

Two weeks ago Street Commissioner Edwards and a gang of men commenced the experiment of using cobble stones and cement in the gutters on Main street. The street committee and council have let the job to M D. Green, of Tecumseh, who will put in eight feet of cobble stones and cement on both sides of Main street. Those that know, claim them to make a good gutter and one that will be dry at all times.—Milan Leader.

And it came to pass that after he had advertised his goods there came unto him great multitudes from all the region round about and did buy of him. And when his competitors saw it they marveled among themselves, saying: "How be it that this man is busy while we loaf about our doors? And he spake unto them, saying: "Verily, verily I say unto you in this fast age of push and rustle, it is easier for a camel of enter the eye of a needle than for a business man to flourish without advertising."—Photographic Times.

At the close of today's run at the canning factory 611,000 cans will have been used, and if there is no severe frost tonight or this week the company will get cans from Adrian and operate the factory until the first of the coming week. The factory was closed down yesterday because of a shortage of tomatoes, but this morning about 1200 bushels had been delivered and the factory is again in operation. Several directors of the company were out in the country yesterday to get an idea of the apple supply with a view to canning apples this fall. If the company can get apples they will begin canning next week.—Monroe Democrat.

The Hayden Milling Co., of Tecumseh has flour at the exposition in Buffalo, and a letter from Central America written in Spanish, was received the other day, inquirlng all about the "1900" brand. The Supervisor took a squint at the chirography, and the "El porto escrite, etc.," and scratched his head. He showed it to Professor Kellogg, who gave it a glance and said his Hernandez dictionary was missing. Then he interviewed Geo. Stacy of the HERALD and after much deliberation George allowed that the base ball club was disbanded and Senorita Velasquez had not left the key to the Spanish cipher code, but his judgement was that it was an inquiry for a gold loan. Harve Doty and Jim Lowry, the only native Americans, masters of the Spanish language had gone to the State fair, and Cap Kyle who "fit" in the Spanish war was out of town, so the company sent the letter to Cleveland to Tom Johnson and found out what was desired. Why didn't they go down and see Ex-Senator Tom Palmer?—Adrian Press."

MONDAY CLUB

A Very Nice Reception Given by MRS. T. C. HARRIS

At her Home on Pottawatamie Street Yesterday Afternoon

Mrs. T. C. Harris, the president of the Monday Club, gave a very pretty reception to the members of the club at her home Monday afternoon. In the reception she was assisted by the other officers of the club. The tables were nicely decorated with madeira flowers and astors, a dainty lunch was served and the forty ladies present enjoyed the afternoon.

The Monday Club starts out this year very promisingly, the membership is full besides two associate members and both officers and members seem full of interest. The first regular meeting will be held at the Universalist church next Monday afternoon.

TWO MEN KILLED.

Frightful Accident Saturday at the PAGE WIRE FENCE

Company's Plant at Adrian.

Last Saturday afternoon while at work amongst wire at the Page Wire Fence Company's plant at Adrian, Wm. Bowen and Thomas Bee lost their lives. Wire slipped, fell upon them and crushed out their lives immediately. A number of others were slightly injured. As near as can be learned no one is to blame for the accident. The city is badly excited as it is the worst accident there in years.

The Carlyles will perhaps always enlist the interest of Anglo-Saxon readers, and the article on "Mrs. Carlyle and her Housemaid" in the currant issue of the Critic should prove a welcome sidelight on the domestic life of a couple which has so long suffered from Froude's misinterpretations. The letters between Mrs. Carlyle and her maid here published for the first time, show better than any biography the real aspect of life in the Cheyne Row house.

A Tarantula's Jump.

"There are strange sights in Porto Rico," said a returned traveler. "Tarantulas are one of them," he continued, "and you should see a tarantula jump! One of them went through a marvelous performance, with myself and a dog for spectators. The dog's barking awoke me early one morning, and I slipped into my shoes and ran out. Spot—that's the dog's name—was making frantic plunges at an enormous tarantula, as big as my palm and its legs covering as much ground as a soup plate. Its wicked black eyes made me creep.

"All of a sudden the thing shrank up like a sponge and jumped for the dog. I give you my word, it jumped fifteen feet if it was an inch. Twice the dog ran under the spider's jump—fact. Others were watching by this time, and they all saw it. Usually, though, I just side stepped a bit.

"I broke up little pieces of a branch of a tree and hurled them at the tarantula. My aim was just good enough to stir him up. At first he kept jumping away from us, but Spot always herded him back again. Then he jumped straight for us. At last a lucky shot keeled him over, and a few strokes with a convenient club finished him."—New York Times.

The Subjection of Man.

"No, I never have a bit of trouble with my husband," remarked the frail little woman with the intelligent face. "In fact, I have him right under my thumb."

"You don't look very strong," doubtfully commented the engaged girl.

"You mistake me, my dear. "It's a mental, not a physical, subjection."

"Would you mind telling me how"—

"Not a bit. Always glad to help any one steer clear of the rocks. First of all, you must know that a man in love is the biggest sort of a fool and says things that make him almost wild when he hears them in after life. I realized it, and from the very beginning of our courtship I kept a phonograph in the room, and every speech he made was duly recorded. Now, whenever my husband gets a little bit obstreperous I just turn out a record or so. Heavens, how he does rave! But he can't deny it. They always will, though, if you don't have proof positive."

"Thank you," gratefully murmured the engaged girl. "I'll get a phonograph this very day."

His Prize.

An amusing story, which may perhaps he entirely true, is told of a short-sighted but energetic member of the Russian secret police.

He was walking through a little frequented street of St. Petersburg one night when he spied high up on a lamp-post a placard.

"Aha!" he said to himself, scenting mischief on the instant and alert for action. "That's one of those incendiary notices about his majesty the czar! It must come down at once!"

With some difficulty, being of a stout build, he succeeded in climbing the post and dislodging the placard. He bore it to the ground, and there, peering at it by the light of the lamp, he read two Russian words, the English equivalent for which is the well known legend "Wet Paint."—Youth's Companion.

A Fable.

One day as the Elephant was passing through the forest he came upon a Hare who had fallen into a pool and was shivering with cold, and in his good heartedness he stopped and called out:

"How, now, Mrs. Hare, but what is the trouble here?"

"Alas, but I fell into the pond and am almost dying with a chill!" wailed the Hare.

"Say you so. Ah, but we can easily remedy that. I will lie down beside you, and the heat of my body will soon make you warm and blithe again."

And the Elephant tumbled down with a grunt and a groan and observed that he was always cheerfully willing to put himself out for the sake of others, especially for the weak and helpless.

After a quarter of an hour, and not hearing from the Hare, he rose up to inquire if she felt better, and to his sorrow and consternation he discovered that he had crushed the life out of her as he laid down.

Revival of Quarry.

The old Grecian quarries of green cipolino marble in the southern portion of the island of Euboea, which were rediscovered after a rest of nearly 2,000 years, are now being actively worked by an English firm. There is a steady demand for the marble. The Penteliko quarries are also in the hands of an English company. At present the Greek market takes most of its output. But already several trial shiploads have been sent to America and other countries. The new statue of Von Moltke in Berlin is to be made from a block of marble recently taken from one of the Grecian quarries. The block weighs seventy-five tons at present, but owing to the high freight rates and other expenses it will probably be roughly "shaped down" before shipment.

Easily Answered.

General Sherman was one of the most approachable men who ever commanded a great army. During his famous "march to the sea" both north and south were completely mystified as to what point he was striking for, and one day an old Georgia planter who had called at his headquarters and enjoyed his good cheer asked him plumply if he had any objection to telling where his army was bound.

"Not the least," said Sherman. Then, leaning over, he whispered in his guest's ear, but so loudly that everybody else in the tent overheard it, "We are going pretty much where we —— please!"

Fair Warning.

Time, 11:45 p. m.

A sound resembling a distant peal of thunder is heard directly overhead.

"What was that?" asked the young man as he started up from the parlor sofa in alarm.

"That?" echoed the fair pride of the household. "Oh, that was only papa dropping a hint."

And hastily gathering the hint unto himself the young man carried it out into the gloomy night.

A Theory That Failed.

Relying upon the old saying that the shortest way to a man's heart was through his stomach, the fond wife, who wanted a new Worth gown, regaled her husband with costly viands for a month.

Then she made her request.

But the heartless wretch replied:

"Can't stand it now. The grocery and meat bill was too heavy this month."

A war of extermination has been going on in Denmark for some time against rats, which have caused much damage to property. A number of new inventions in the way of rat traps and the like have been offered to the public, and this has suggested the ide ain Copenhagen of an exhibition.

At the coronation of Queen Elizabeth, in 1558, the roads in the neighborhood of London were so bad that the queen's coach twice stuck in the mud on the way to Westminster and the queen was compelled to alight while the vehicle was pried out of the the attendants.

Pretty Fair Shots.

In an English paper there appeared recently the veracious story of two brothers who lived in the Rocky mountains. They had two rifles, one bullet and a keg of powder. With this outfit they managed to kill on an average twenty-seven head of buffalo a day. The way they managed was this: Brother No. 1 would stand on one side of a buffalo and shoot through it, the bullet going into the barrel of the rifle of Brother No. 2, who stood on the other side. Then Brother No. 2 would fire through the next buffalo into the rifle of Brother No. 1, and so on until the day's sport was over.

Some one who saw this story has written to say that he is acquainted with a man, a cousin, he thinks, of the two mentioned, who also lived in the Rocky mountains at one time. He had one rifle, one bullet and a keg of powder, yet he managed to kill thirty head of buffalo a day—buffaloes were plenty then—and the way he did it was this: He was not only a champion shot, but a champion runner, and when he fired through a buffalo he would run around and catch the bullet again to reload with, and so on until he exhausted his powder.

The Eight Hour Day.

The eight hour day is not such a new thing. On April 2, 1792, the town of Partridgefield, Mass., now Peru, voted "to grant £150 for repairing highways in said town, to be worked out 2 thirds in June next, at 3s 6d per Day, and the other third in September at 3s per day. Eight hours in a day to be Deemed a Day's Work."

TESTS PATIENCE.

The Most Patient People Must Show Annoyance at Times.

Nothing spoils a good disposition quicker
Nothing taxes a man's patience
Like any itchiness of the skin
Itching piles almost drive you crazy
All day it makes you miserable.
All night it keeps you awake.
Itch. Itch. Itch. With no relief
Just the same with eczema.
Can hardly keep from scratching it.
You would do so but you know it makes you worse.
Such miseries are daily decreasing.
People are learning they can be cured.
Learning the merits of Doan's Ointment.

Plenty of proof that Doan's Ointment will cure piles, eczema or any itchiness of the skin.

Read the testimony of a Battle Creek citizen.

Mr. A. G. Ayers, Book Binder, of 197 West Main street, Battle Creek, says: "My hands became so sore from eczema that it was with difficulty I could bend my fingers. The skin cracked open, large scabs formed and in addition to the spots being tender they itched intolerably. I tried everything I could hear about or get hold of to stop the trouble but I was unable to do so until I procured Doan's Ointment. I had heard it spoken about by several people but as I thought it would act like all other preparations which I tried I waited some time until I was compelled from the condition of my hands to do something. Doan's Ointment cured me. Up to date, and this is some months after I stopped the treatment, I have had no indication of any return."

Doan's Ointment for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan and take no substitute.

Everybody's liable to itching piles. Rich and poor, old and young—terrible the torture they suffer. Only one sure cure. Doan's Ointment. Absolutely safe can't fail.

The Tobacco Habit.

Chewing tobacco is a filthy habit. Smoking makes you so foul that you smell yourself. Tobacco is very injurious to health. Every user of tobacco tries to quit it and finds it very difficult. Boys see their elders trying to quit, yet boys make themselves sick in acquiring the tobacco habit.—Atchison Globe.

Brain-Food Nonsense

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain another for muscles and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or to prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthy action, purifies the blood and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

Daring Wasps.

"Wasps were the first paper makers," said an entomologist. "It is very interesting to study the ways of these fierce little insects. For the sake of a grab at the honey store a single individual will sometimes face a whole hive of bees, being in fair combat a match for any three inhabitants of the apiary. Most of us have had experience of the fearlessness with which they will attack human beings."

Fire Fighting In England.

In the smaller places in England horses have to be borrowed for the fire engines. Often thirty to fifty minutes are wasted in getting horses, which, when an alarm of fire was given, were at work at their daily duty. A considerable amount of time is also lost in finding proper harness for them. The horsing of steam engines in country districts is a very difficult problem.

How the Lover Looks at the Fire.

When a young Savoyard goes a-wooing, he pays considerably more attention to the admired one's fire than to her face. If she leaves the billets of wood undisturbed on the hearth, it is a sign that he is welcome, but should she place one of the blazing fagots in an upright position against the others it is a hint for him to take his departure.

Considerate.

Bangs—Jubkins is the homeliest man I ever saw.

Slangs—Why don't you say it to his face?

Bangs—I don't want to.

Slangs—You're afraid to, ain't you?

Bangs—Oh, no. But his face has enough to bear already.—Detroit Free Press.

A Great Storm Wave.

A great storm wave is peculiar to cyclones. At the center of the disturbance the mercury in a good barometer may be lower by three inches than that in a similar instrument on the verge of the cyclone This is owing to the diminution of atmospheric pressure consequent on the rotation of the air wheel, and as nature abhors a vacuum the sea in the vortex rises above its usual level until equilibrium is restored. This storm wave advances with the hurricane and rolls in upon the low land like a solid wall. In the Backergunge cyclone of 1876 the storm wave covered the land at the eastern end of the Ganges delta at heights varying from ten to forty-five feet, as measured by marks on the trees. One hundred thousand lives were lost on this occasion.—Chambers' Journal.

She Valued Her Head.

Catastrophe of the Oneida.

One of the most extraordinary catastrophies that have befallen vessels of the United States destroyed the sloop of war Oneida in 1869. She was bound homeward, with a jolly ship's company, eager to see wives and sweethearts and native land once more, when not far out of port she was struck by the British steamer Bombay coming in. The stem of the Bombay cut off the stern of the Oneida. The ship was sinking rapidly, and guns of distress were immediately fired, but the Bombay steamed on her way and left the vessel to her doom. She went down, and all but one or two of her crew were drowned.

The captain of the Bombay gave no other reason for his conduct than that he had Lady Eyre, the wife of a distinguished British satrap, on board and did not wish to disturb her nerves with scenes of shipwreck He was mobbed when he reached Yokohama, dismissed from the service, socially tabooed from that time on and died in disgrace a year or two later.

Unlucky Day Superstitions.

In Grafton's manual of his chronicles, 1565, the unlucky days, according to the opinions of the astronomers, are named as follows: Jan. 1, 2, 4, 5, 10, 15, 17 and 20 are unlucky; Feb. 26, 27 and 28 unlucky, 8, 10 and 17 very unlucky; March 16, 17 and 20 very unlucky; April 7, 8, 10 and 20 unlucky; May 3 and 6 unlucky, 7, 15 and 20 very unlucky; June 10 and 22 unlucky, 4 and 8 very unlucky; Aug. 29 and 30 unlucky, 19 and 20 very unlucky; Sept. 3, 4, 21 and 23 unlucky, 6 and 7 very unlucky; Oct. 4, 16 and 24 unlucky, 6 very unlucky; Nov. 5, 6, 29 and 30 unlucky, 15 and 20 very unlucky; Dec. 15 and 22 unlucky, 6, 7 and 9 very unlucky.

Ornaments on Saddles.

In the 5th century saddles were made so extravagantly magnificent that a prohibition was issued by Leo I., in which it was ordered that no one should ornament them with pearls or precious stones. In the sixth century the Emperor Mauritius required that the saddles should have large coverings of fur. The ignominous punishment of "bearing the saddle" had its origin in the middle ages.

A Cockney.

Bullokar, the lexicographer who gave the famous definition for "crocodile tears," was outdone by Minsheu, another dictionary maker of London, who in 1617 issued the work which gave the following amusing account of the origin of the word "cockney:" "A cockney, or cockny, applied only to one born within the sound of the Bow bells—that is, within the city of London—whiche terme came first out of the following tale:

"A citizen's sonne, riding with his father out of London into the country, and being a novice and merely ignorant of how corne and catel do increase, asked when he heard a horse neigh what the horse dide. His father answered, 'The horse dothe neigh.' Riding further, he heard a cock crow and said, 'Dothe the cock neigh too?' And therefore cockney, or cockneigh, by inversion thus: Incoctus,—i. e., raw or unripe in countrey-mens affaires."

When the Crowd Gathered.

At the close of some sports that were being held at a country village one of the competitors, coming across the local policeman, inquired when the theater opened.

"We have no theater here," said the policeman.

"Well, the music hall, then?"

"No; nothing of that kind here."

"Have you no evening amusement at all?" asked the stranger.

"Oh, yes," said the policeman, rising to the occasion. "If you wait till 9 o'clock, you'll see them shunting the goods train."—London Spare Moments.

Clarence, aged five, had been severely punished by his parents for disobedience, and the next day, without saying a word to any one, he called at the office of the family legal adviser, who happened to be a particular friend of the little fellow.

"Well, Clarence," said the man of the law after shaking hands, "what can I do for you?"

"Please, Mr. Brown," said Clarence, "I want to get a divorce from our family."—Newark News.

A Wife's Allowance.

It is one of the most humiliating elements in woman's life in America today and one of the phases which is most uncomplimentarily reflective upon American husbands that a just allowance is withheld from many wives. No matter how small the allowance may be, so long as it is fair in proportion to the income earned, every wife should have a purse of her own, sacred to herself and her needs and free from the slightest intrusion on the part of her husband. Every wife is entitled to this, and no young man—I care not how small his income nor what his reasoning may be—starts married life aright who withholds that courtesy and that right from his wife.—Edward Bok in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Tired Farmer.

"Yes, sir, you simply start our automobile plow and leave it to itself while you sit on the fence here in the shade and enjoy your weekly paper and a jug of hard cider. The plow will go right ahead and break up your field better than you could possibly do it, and when it has finished all you have to do is to press the button here and stop it."

"Waal, say, couldn't you fix it so's it would kind o' steer up here close to the fence, so's I could press the button without gittin' down?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Teaching a Dog.

To teach a dog to "speak" hold some dainty before him when he is hungry. At first he will not know what is wanted, but say "Speak!" to him, and when he barks, which he is pretty sure to do when he finds the morsel still beyond his reach, feed it to him at once. He will soon associate the work "speak" with the bark and the dainty.

Wanted, Sharp Knives.

"I have often wondered where one could find the sharp knives of the world," said an observant citizen, "and really the problem is one of some seriousness, and one, upon reflection, is almost driven to the conclusion that there are no sharp knives in the world

"Have you ever noticed how hard it is to find a really sharp knife? Stop the first man you meet and ask him to let you have his knife for a minute and listen to what he says about it. Nine times out of ten he will say, 'I have one, but it isn't very sharp.' You may pick out your men indifferently, and they will always tell you the same thing. If a man should ask me for my knife to sharpen a lead pencil or to use for some other purpose, the chances are I would say about the same thing, 'I have one, but it isn't very sharp.'

"And really the answer thus made is generally true. Men do not keep sharp knives. It may be because they do not need sharp knives or it may be a matter of laziness, but in any event they do not carry them around with them, or if they do they always give their friend a dull one."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed four-year-old Bessie, looking up at the starry skies one evening, "what a pretty place heaven must be when it is so beautiful wrong side out!"

You rob yourself oftener than others rob you.

Retort From Nature.

Among the useful results of aerial excursions are the satisfactory experiments in the way of echoes and reverberations. John Mackenzie Bacon has many opportunities of testing the carrying of sounds to and from a balloon at a great height, and Mr. Wise the American aeronaut, relates a case in point.

He was [illegible] one day above a dense cloud when he heard a cow bell [illegible] sounds of a wood chopper's [illegible], to attract the attention of the laborer, he shouted "Hello!" He was immediately answered by another "Hello!" from the ground.

He then asked the question, "How far is this from Lancaster?" and was annoyed by being mocked by his own words.

"Being in the clouds," he says, "and not able to see things above or below, I felt somewhat nettled at this clownish display of wit, and in a very audible tone of voice, while the foregoing was still reverberating in my ear, I sang out, 'You're a fool!' which in a very few seconds was answered by an equally distinct and measured tone of voice, 'You're a fool!'

"Then it suddenly flashed upon my mind that it was the echo of my own voice, which opinion was ratified by the dying reverberations of my words which had now become as numerous as though a whole regiment had caught the watchword and were passing it in quick succession through the whole line."

Orderly Habits.

"It is a curious fact," commented a man recently, "that almost no mother realizes the importance of bringing her son up to orderly habits. She impresses upon her daughters from the time they are old enough to recognize any responsibility the necessity to keep their rooms tidy, put away articles after use and care for their belongings at all times.

The boy, however, is exempt from any similar requirement not only in his own room, but throughout the house. He reads newspapers and throws them on the floor, gets up from a divan leaving the cushions packed and shapeless, without the slightest reproof, the only notice taken of the occurrence, indeed, being to ask a sister, if he has one, to pick up the one and straighten the other. The women of the family follow in his footsteps all day long, removing whatever disorder he creates.

Yet there is no business occupation upon which that boy will presently enter in which order is not a fundamental necessity. Girls, on the other hand, do not, as a rule, suffer so seriously from a lack of order, or at least consequences are not so continually disagreeable and costly as is the case with boys."—New York Post.

Sure Proof.

When France and Germany were at war, an Englishman was arrested by the French and accused of being a German spy. A letter dated "Berlin" and signed by his mother was found upon him. He was tried by drumhead court martial and condemned to be shot.

On the way to the place of execution he said that he had left something behind and insisted on going back for it.

"You can't go back," was the reply. "You are about to be shot."

"I can't help that," said he. "I have left something, and I must get it."

"What have you left?"

"My umbrella."

That settled it. He was released. No one but an Englishman, said his captors, could be such a thoroughgoing imbecile as that.

Tale of a Dormouse.

This tear compelling tale is from the London Globe: "A young lady bought a dormouse. After keeping it for some time she had occasion to send a present to a friend and utilized the dormouse for that purpose. A few months later the friend wrote to say that the pet did not seem very lively and was refusing its food. Would she come and inspect it? She came and inspected it and finally, feeling that this was a case for professional opinion, called in a vet. The vet's verdict was brief and to the point. The dormouse had been dead just six months."

Advice About Health.

Don't worry about your health. More people make themselves ill by doing that than is generally supposed. If you are constantly imagining that there is something the matter with you, you will do yourself harm. Live as far as you are able a healthy life and for the rest take your chance like a man. There are plenty of people who suffer a living death by allowing themselves to imagine that they are going to have every illness they read about.

Depressed.

"I am afraid Bliggins has met with reverses."

"What makes you think so."

"He goes about with a gloomy look, saying there is no such a thing as disinterested friendship. That is almost a sure sign that a man has been trying to borrow money."—Exchange.

Writing a Book.

The following confession of a novelist as to the method in which he wrote one of his books is not without interest. He had had the story outlined in his notebook for a long time and ought to have been able to write it, but did not feel able. Then one day he happened to think of it again and saw, almost as if it had been a stage scene, the little tableau with which the book was to close—one of those ends which are also a beginning. So he began to work and in a short time had completed the first three chapters. Then, for no reason that he can give, there was a jump, and he wrote the chapters which are now numbered XXI and XXII, the last in the book. Then he went back and wrote straight on from IV to XVII.

The story had been with him so long that it was the easiest thing in the world to write it, and so he got through this part of the work with remarkable celerity. In the eighteenth chapter nothing happens. Every day for a fortnight he rose, breakfasted and tried to write that chapter; every night he tore up a big pile of manuscript which he knew to be hopelessly bad. Then he got desperate. The chapter should be written and should stand, whether good or bad. He wrote it and left the house because it was bad and he had resolved not to tear it up. Next day he wrote chapter XIX, and on the morrow he rewrote chapter XVIII and somehow or other contrived to get into it all that he had failed to get before. Then he wrote chapter XX, and the book was completed.—London Post.

Modern Advertising.

A little over half a century ago it was considered beneath the dignity of many substantial concerns to advertise beyond the insertion in the newspapers of an occasional business card. Some of the experiences of that time show how recently advertising, as we know it, has developed.

A retail hardware house in an eastern city once found itself possessed of ten times the number of articles of a certain kind that it had intended to buy. As they had been ordered especially for a new hotel and were of a peculiar design, there seemed to be no way of disposing of them except at a merely nominal sum.

One of the younger men connected with the concern offered to "move them" at a fair price provided he be permitted to advertise. The suggestion encountered much opposition, but finally a small sum was set apart to carry it out. The advertisement was drafted in an attractive way, and the people soon began to buy the new article. Finally the house was obliged to send to the manufacturers for more. When the next season's trade opened, the member of the firm who had most opposed the experiment whispered to the young man that he had better write out a few notices "and put them in the papers."

From such beginnings the advertising practice has come. Thousands of dollars are now spent not only in advertising itself, but in devising clever catch words, ingenious phrases and illustrations which will stick in the memory of the reader as well as new general methods.—Youth's Companion.

English Quail Stew.

For four plump quails provide four oysters, four tablespoonfuls of butter, three large cupfuls of ox tail soup or rich stock, two small glasses of port or madeira, two tablespoonfuls of onion vinegar, the same of India relish and mushroom catchup, celery salt, white pepper and four slices of crisp, brown toast. Leave the quails whole, simply opening down the breast. Put the butter in a frying pan over a hot fire and when brown lay the quails in the pan. Cover and cook ten minutes. Turn and cook ten minutes more. When browned on both sides, add the soup or stock, wine, catchup and relish. When it boils again, add celery salt and pepper to season and thicken with a tablespoonful of flour wet up in cold water. Stir it gradually until it boils. Turn each quail on its back and insert an oyster. Cook five minutes and serve on slices of toast with the liquid poured over all.

"Where there's a will there's a way," which is just as likely to be the wrong one as the right.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Duty is a power which rises with us in the morning and goes to rest with us in the evening.—Gladstone.

Lobsters' Eggs.

A fair sized female lobster carries 20,000 eggs at a time. The eggs, when extruded, are covered with a viscid matter which, drawn out into threads, attaches them to the long hairs that fringe the fanlike tail of the mother. These threads quickly become hard and strong, the eggs waving about in the water and being thus aerated. When they are ready to be hatched, the mother lobster oscillates her tail so as to assist the offspring to escape.

The young at first resemble shrimps, being about one-third of an inch in length. They have bright blue eyes. After a few days they desert the mother and swim out into deep water, where they rise to the surface and lead a vagabond sort of existence for thirty or forty days.

During this time the young ones change their shells four times. On the fourth occasion they shed their swimming organs and fall to the bottom, where they remain for the rest of their lives. During their existence as swimmers most of them are gobbled up by fishes, for which they afford a favorite food.

How Things Grow In Hawaii.

How great are the possibilities of Hawaii as a fruit and vegetable growing country will be understood when it becomes known that four crops of potatoes have been produced in succession on the same piece of land within twelve months. Radishes become edible in ten days after sowing. Strawberry vines bear fruit all the year. The berries are of the finest flavor.

Cabbage grows all the year, and it apparently makes no difference whether it is planted in the spring, summer, autumn or winter. Parsley once sown grows forever apparently. Lima beans continue to grow and bear for over a year, and they have to be gathered every week after starting to bear. Cucumbers bear the entire year, and so do tomatoes, which, with proper attention, bear for years. Raspberries bear for six months.

Pineapples come into bearing when the plants are four months old and bear in abundance for years. Lettuce can be planted at any time, and it develops quickly. The same is true of celery.—Fruit Trade Journal.

Judge Sentenced Cashier Johnson to Ten Years.

DETROIT HOUSE OF CORRECTION

The Niles Bank Wrecker Pleaded Guilty at Grand Rapids—Said He Speculated in Order to Keep the Bank Up.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 9.—Chas. A. Johnson, defaulting cashier of the Niles National bank, pleaded guilty in the United States court yesterday and was given the maximum penalty, 10 years in the Detroit house of correction.

Before sentence was imposed, Johnson's attorney said in extenuation of the offense that when Johnson became cashier, 10 years ago, he found that the bank was in a bad way and he resorted to speculation to restore its condition. Instead of improving it he made matters worse, and then was compelled to plunge deeper, not only to save the bank but to save himself.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge Wanty said it was incomprehensible that one man could embezzle $150,000, especially when his misdeeds involved forgery and falsification of securities.

Miles Callahan, ex-postmaster of Reed City, and prominent in political and secret society circles, was sentenced to the Detroit house of correction for one year for failure to deposit government funds, and the same sentence was given Milton P. Lawton, an ex-postmaster of Lawton, for the same offense. Dr. Jacob C. Batdorf was fined $300 for using the mails in carrying on fake medical treatment.

Smooth Game at St. Joe.

St. Joseph, Mich., Oct. 9.—A stranger went to the postoffice yesterday and received mail belonging to Phil Daily, a fruit grower. In the letters were several checks for payment of fruit. The unknown visitor went to a local bank and cashed the checks, which represented about $30. Daily's name was followed by the name of John Mitchell, as a forged indorsement on the checks.

Postmaster Woodruff says his office clerks inform him that the victim's mail was not given out to a stranger. Daily, however, insists otherwise.

Broke Both Arms.

Albion, Mich., Oct. 9.—John Groff pitched headlong from the roof of a house which he was shingling yesterday morning, striking the sidewalk on his head and shoulders. He put out his arms in falling, which broke the force somewhat and probably saved his life. Both arms were broken a the wrists and he sustained other injuries about the head. He will probably recover. He was a member of the firm of Groff Bros., formerly lumber dealers here.

Fortune for Fenton Woman.

Fenton, Mich., Oct. 9.—Mrs. Helen Parker Allen of this place has been notified through the law firm of Floyd, Ross & Floyd of Edinburgh, Scotland, that she is heir to a fortune of $25,000. The money was left to her by her friend, Mrs. Phyllis Masone, who died in Scotland Sept. 8 last.

C. E. Convention.

Chelsea, Mich., Oct. 9.—The district convention of the Epworth league began its sessions here Tuesday, and will continue through today. Rev. C. H. Morgan spoke last evening, and the principal address tonight will be delivered by Dr. Joseph F. Berry of Chicago. Special music will be furnished by Misses Lighthall and Nickerson and Messrs. Ward and Hughes.

Sentence Day at Ann Arbor.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 9.—In the circuit court yesterday after pleading guilty, Frank Williams, Claude Buckman and John Moran were sentenced to Ionia for two years and three months each for the burglary of Dodge's jewelry store at Ypsilanti. Most of the forenoon was occupied in securing a jury for the trial of Fred Shoemaker, the alleged horse thief.

Foreign Missionary Society Meet.

Flint, Mich., Oct. 9.—Thirty-first annual meeting of the northwestern branch of the Womans Foreign Missionary society began at the Court Street M. E. church last night, with a lecture on "The siege and relief of Pekin," by Rev. F. D. Gamewell, one of the prominent figures in that event. Four hundred delegates are here from Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Diphtheria Closed Schools.

Saginaw, Mich., Oct. 9.—Seven cases of diphtheria were discovered among children in attendance at the Carrollton school yesterday. The schools were ordered closed awaiting developments.

New Mission Church.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 9.—Father Sadlier, pastor of the Catholic church of this city, has established a mission church in the village of Athens, and Father Fisher, his assistant, will hold services there once a month.

Woman Attempted Suicide.

Frankfort, Mich., Oct. 9.—Rosa F. Smith of Howell attempted suicide by taking carbolic acid at the National hotel. Physicians have no hope of her recovery. The woman has been despondent for several days.

Fell Eleven Feet.

Nashville, Mich., Oct. 9.—G. U. Gribben fell out of an apple tree a distance of 11 feet and struck on his head and shoulders. He was injured internally and will probably die. He is 72 years of age.

KID-NE-OIDS CURED HIS SUFFERING.

Have been afflicted with kidney and bladder diseases for the past three years, being chronic from the start, was in much pain and forced to stop work. For the past four months I have faithfully tried several of the so-called "guarantee cures" but without any benefit. I finally concluded to try Kid-Ne-Oids and began to feel better immediately after using them. I continued using them and am now permanently cured. I make this statement of my own volition and will make oath to it if necessary.—Geo. S. Estell, Kansas City, Mo.

ISTHMIAN CANAL TREATY.

Reports of England's Surrender of Rights Are False.

Washington, Oct. 9.—There has been no surrender by England to the United States in the matter of the new Isthmian canal treaty, according to the best authority here. It is said to be equally true that the United States has sacrificed no principle in these negotiations and the effect of contrary statements is deprecated as likely seriously to jeopardize the chances of the consummation of the convention which shall finally and peacefully settle an issue that has been a source of danger for the past 50 years.

It is said that what actually has happened is that each side has preserved the underlying principles of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and the new convention will provide for a waterway, neutral at all times, and open to commerce of the world. The Clayton-Bulwer treaty, however, drawn half a century ago, has proved to be defective in mechanism for giving effect to this purpose. The new treaty simply provides this mechanism. England is relieved from the guarantee. As viewed from the American point of view, even, there was no surrender on England's part in seeking this relief, inasmuch as the above mentioned principle is reiterated and affirmed as binding upon the United States. As for the form of the treaty, it may be stated that it embodies in substance, the amendments to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty which were adopted by the senate, and beyond that the changes are believed to be textual rather than substantial.

THE SCHLEY COURT.

Commander Wainwright Does Not Consider Maps Correct.

Washington, Oct. 9.—There were two new witnesses before the Schley court of inquiry yesterday. They were Commander Richard Wainwright, who commanded the Gloucester during the war with Spain, and Lieut. M. L. Bristol, who, as ensign, was a watch and division officer on the battleship Texas during that period.

Lieut. Bristol had not concluded his testimony when the court adjourned for the day. He did not see the loop made by the Brooklyn, the greater part of his testimony turning upon a chart he had made showing, largely according to his memory, the position of the various ships of the American fleet at different times during the engagement of July 3. There were several spirited controversies between counsel over questions asked the witness by Mr. Rayner concerning the chart.

Commander Wainwright's testimony dealt largely with chart marking. He was for a time senior member of the board of navigation, which prepared the official chart showing the positions of the American ships during the battle off Santiago, and gave details if the method of its preparation. He said he did not consider the positions assigned in that drawing accurate, but that they were given as the result of a compromise of the views of the members of the board.

Lieut.-Commander Hodgson, Capt. Folger and Lieut. Dyson made additions to their previous testimony.

Through the Fruit Belt.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Members of the steel trust are behind an electric railway which will run from Benton Harbor to Grand Rapids, through the richest fruit country of western Michigan.

The corporation will also run two lines of steamers from Chicago and Milwaukee to Benton Harbor. The boats are now being built in Toledo. The name of the corporation is the West Michigan Traction Co., capital stock is $1,000,000. At a meeting of the directors, held here yesterday, plans for the work were formulated. President C. O. Hadley of the American Sheet Steel Co. of New York, and George H. Moore, secretary and treasurer, were present.

Heaviest Rain Storm Known.

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 9.—A foot and a half of rain fell here during the last 24 hours. This is the heaviest rain ever experienced here. The streets are flooded and some damage has been caused to goods on ground floors of stores and by leaking roofs. The rain has stopped and the weather is clearing. There was practically no wind and the tide is normal.

Grand Jury Has Important Case Before It.

ATTY. SALSBURY AND MacLEOD

City Attorney and Bank Teller, Respectively, Will Have a Chance to Explain Their Actions—Judgment Rendered Against Stockholders.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 10.—The grand jury Wednesday afternoon took up the charges against City Attorney Salsbury and S. V. MacLeod, the latter for issuing fraudulent certificate of deposit to Salsbury, and Salsbury for being an accessory to the transaction. Harvey J. Hollister, Wm. H. Anderson, Charles B. Kelsey and "Deacon" Ellis were before the grand jury as witnesses. It was stated the fraudulent certificate was for $10,000, and Salsbury used it as collateral in securing a loan to carry a wheat deal through at another bank. MacLeod at the time was paying teller in the Old National bank. The fraudulent certificate was destroyed before its existence was known by the bank officials, but the facts came out in the water boodle investigation.

In the suits of Joseph W. Selden, receiver of the First National bank of Niles against the stockholders to enforce the collection of assessments on stock, judgments were rendered by default against Cashier Charles A. Johnson, for $16,468.95; Wm. K. Lacey, former president, $2,445; Edith Fitzgerald, $511.46; Mary S. Cook, $1,943.54; Susanna Long, $1,534.37; Rebecca Reynolds, $409.16, and Wm. Womer, $2,148.13.

Wheat Crop 10,000,000 Bushels.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 10.—In the monthly crop report, issued by Secretary of State Warner last evening, the final estimate of this years wheat crop is made.

The report shows that the total number of acres of wheat on the ground last April was 1,173,784. According to reports received from crop correspondents, 83 per cent of this acreage was harvested.

The estimated yield of oats per acre is 29 bushels; corn, 36 bushels; potatoes, 70 bushels, and beans, 12 bushels.

The total acreage of buckwheat is 16,929, and the average yield per acre is 15 bushels.

Bondsmen Must Pay.

Reading, Mich., Oct. 10.—Eugene Saunders, one of the most promising young attorneys in the county, acting as agent for the Caledonia Insurance Co., is said to have written two policies, aggregating $3,500, for the Reading Robe & Tanning Co., against the specific orders of the insurance company. A fire at the plant brought the matter to light. A. L. Kinney, attorney and former partner of Saunders, has been notified that as surety on the latter's bonds, he will be expected to adjust the loss.

LEFT THE BABY.

Also a Board Bill Did a Toronto Couple.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Oct. 9.—Undine Conley, a handsome young brunette boarding at M. S. Van Sycle's in this city, with a young man named Allen J. Rattray, mysteriously left town Monday night with Rattray, leaving a $40 board bill and a 5-weeks-old baby behind. About six weeks ago Rattray and the woman came to Van Sycle's, representing themselves to be married. The woman received mail in her maiden name, representing to the landlady that her uncle, J. Robertson, of Toronto, from whom she regularly received remittances, did not know of her marriage and would cut her off if he knew she had married Rattray.

TOOK THE DESERTERS.

Sailors Were on Board American Vessel at Halifax.

Halifax, Oct. 10.—Two British sailors, who had deserted from the war ship Niobe, were forcibly taken from the American schooner Mist Wednesday afternoon. Warrants for their arrest were issued by Admiral Sir Frederick Bedford, and an imperial government launch, having on board a squad of police and an American escort of marines, went out to the schooner, which was lying in the stream.

A demand was made for the men and the captain of the vessel was prepared to give them up, but the sailors refused to come on deck. The police boarded the schooner and finally removed tne men.

Previous to this action Admiral Bedford had consulted with United States Consul-General Foster about the matter. Mr. Foster thought that the marines had better not go on board of the vessel, but gave his consent for the civil police to take the sailors. In compliance with the consul's wishes, none of the marines boarded the Mist. The two sailors will be court-martialed on the flagship Crescent.

Crew Nearly Perished.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 10.—Wrapped round and round with anchor cables, the British bark Guiseppena, Capt. Lockhart, from St. Georges, Bermuda, arrived here yesterday with her crew of 13 nearly dead from exhaustion. The bark sailed Sept. 25 and encountered a fierce northeaster. Her seams loosened and the holds began to fill. The leaks became so wide that anchor chains were wrapped around the hull to keep it from falling to pieces. The crew pumped night and day to keep afloat.

Boston Man Won Balloon Race.

Buffalo, Oct. 10.—The balloon race from the stadium of the Pan-American exposition grounds yesterday afternoon between Prof. Charles Litchfield of Boston and Leo Stevens of New York, for a purse of $3,000, was won by the Boston aeronaut. The men started at the same moment and their balloons rose rapidly to a high altitude before the parachutes were cut loose. Litchfield's balloon ascended about 200 feet higher than did Stevens's, deciding the race in his favor.

How is This?

Pekin, Oct. 10.—Prince Ching has written to the ministers of the powers, requesting a withdrawal from Pekin of the foreign business establishments. He says that Pekin is not a treaty port, that foreign business houses have been illegally established here and that all such should be moved to treaty ports. He desires the ministers to secure their removal.

Russians Are Helping.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 10.—The United States ambassador, Charlemagne Tower, has been most active in connection with measures looking to the release of Miss Stone. Mr. Tower has had several interviews on the subject with the officials of the foreign office. The Russian government is cordially supporting the efforts being made to secure the release of the American missionary.

Shot Himself Because Ill.

New Orleans, Oct. 10.—Louis Hermann, a prominent member of the cotton exchange, shot himself in the breast last evening because of ill-health, which compelled his retirement from active business several months ago. He died in a few hours. Mr. Hermann was the senior member of Louis Hermann & Co., cotton brokers.

Hunters Saw a Wild Man.

Crystal Falls, Mich., Oct. 10.—Two residents hunters reported meeting a wild man in the woods near the headwaters of the Deer river, about 14 mile from this city. They got within 30 feet of the placewhere he was eating the carcass of a dead skunk. He snarled at them, then bounded off into the woods.

Chinese Bound to Come.

Port Townsend, Oct. 10.—Another evidence of the determination of Chinese to evade the exclusion law was brought to light here by the capture of a sloop with four Chinese on board. The capture was made by the United States revenue launch Guard a few miles south of Ft. Flagler.

SAYS SCHLEY WAS EXCITED.

Admiral Taylor Relates Incidents of the Battle.

Washington, Oct. 10.—In the Schley naval court of inquiry yesterday Lieut. Mark L. Bristol completed his testimony begun Tuesday, and three new witnesses were introduced. They were Rear Admiral Henry C. Taylor, who as captain commanded the battleship Indiana during the war with Spain; Lieut.-Commander Templin M. Potts, who was navigator of the battleship Massachusetts during that period, and Lieut. Edward F. Leiper, who was on the New Orleans during the war, the last-named still on the stand when the court adjourned for the day.

Admiral Taylor related incidents of the battle off Santiago on July 3, including the Brooklyn's famous turn. He said that none of the Spanish ships had made any effort to ram the American vessels when they came out of the harbor at Santiago. Commander Potts's testimony dealt especially with the bombardment of the Colon. Answering a question from Judge Advocate Lemly as to the conduct of Commodore Schley during the engagement, he said it was that of a man laboring under great mental excitement and of a man who was anxious to discharge, as soon as possible, a disagreeable duty. Lieut. Leiper expressed the opinion that the Spanish shore batteries at Santiago had not been at any time formidable.

During Commander Potts's examination Mr. Rayner secured permission from the court to introduce as evidence the order of Secretary Long to Admiral Sampson, dated April 6, in which he was admonished against the exposure of the American vessels to the fire of strongly-fortified ports.

SPANISH CLAIMS COMMISSION.

Amount of Claims Over Fifty Seven Million Dollars.

Washington, Oct. 10.—The Spanish treaty claims commission met informally yesterday and discussed regulations to be formulated covering the taking of testimony by the commissioners appointed some time ago. All of the members were present except Commissioner Dilkema. Daily sessions will be held here. Nov. 20 has been fixed as the date of the hearing of a motion to dismiss the cases growing out of the sinking of the Maine for want of jurisdiction.

The amount of claims of all kinds filed with the commission is $57,581,807. Of this amount, $1,890,000 is on account of deaths resulting from the sinking of the Maine, and $135,000 on account of injuries received in that disaster.

Claims for assault by Spanish and Filipinos in the Philippine islands and compelling the removal of the claimant from that country were filed, amounting to $151,400.

England Will Try Again.

New York, Oct. 10.—The Hon. Hugh Kelly, secretary of the Royal Ulster Yacht club, sailed Wednesday on the steamer Majestic. He expressed himself as being perfectly satisfied with the treatment he had received here and the fair treatment that had been accorded the Shamrock II. He said that Sir Thomas Lipton would not challenge next year, and Mr. Kelly had no idea who would. He was satisfied, however, that England would again strive to "lift the cup."

Congress Urged to Build Canal.

Baltimore, Oct. 10.—The national rivers and harbors congress adjourned sine die yesterday after adopting resolutions embodying its sentiments with regard to congressional appropriations for the improvement of waterways. Congress was urged to take speedy action in the matter of the construction of an isthmian canal. The place of meeting for the next congress was not decided upon. Invitations were received from Beaumont, Tex., and St. Louis, Mo.

He will leave for Washington immediately after the degree is conferred.

Supreme Court Opinion.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 9.—The supreme court has handed down an opinion, written by Justice Long and concurred in by Montgomery and Hooker, holding the so-called term extension law affecting Detroit, valid. This law abolishes this fall's election and extends the terms of the present city officials one year, bringing future elections at the same time as state and national elections. Justice Grant wrote a dissenting opinion, Moore concurring.

Football Tragedy.

Alma, Mich., Oct. 9.—Robert L. McKee, left tackle of the Alma college football team, who was injured in the game with the Detroit Athletic club last Saturday, died at Brainerd hospital here yesterday afternoon. He was injured in the second half, immediately after a fierce scrimmage. He was one of the lightest men on the team and played against Nunnelly, the 200-pound tackle. He sustained an injury to his abdomen.

Woman Thumped a Barber.

Owosso, Mich., Oct. 9.—Mrs. Charles F. Schultz, wife of a local saloonkeeper, hid in a dark alley last night and pounced on Jay Herrick, a barber, when he was going home from work. Live Stock Shows
...AT THE...
PAN-AMERICAN

When Superintendent Converse promised a better series of live stock shows at the Pan-American Exposition than was ever before attempted, the statement was accepted as an ordinary pleasant and pardonable exaggeration.

The complete success of the dog and the swine shows, however, proved to be the first steps toward redeeming his promise.

The cattle show was an agreeable surprise to every stockman who saw it and at once established a new standard of excellence that will not be equaled for years to come and possibly never surpassed as regards quality.

The sheep show, now fully under way and lasting to Oct. 25, is in every way a worthy successor to the dog, the swine and the cattle shows. The best flocks in the United States and Canada are represented, together with their recent additions of imported stock, consisting of about twenty fine animals now shown in this country for the first time.

The sheep show, taken as a whole, is one of the most complete ever brought together. Every important breed has a strong representation, while every breed known has an exhibit of some kind. The Island Black Face, of which there are but three or four flocks in the United States, are well represented, and they are creating a great deal of interest among the exhibitors and visitors.

All classes in the middle wools are particularly strong, among which are noted prizewinners from the east, west, north, south and Canada. The strongest representation of all is from the Merinos. Vermont, the home of the Merino, where the only distinctive American breed of sheep originated, is represented by many of her best breeders. This fact deserves more than a passing notice, as our domestic animals of American origin are not numerous. We have borrowed almost everything of this nature from other countries. The only other exception is possibly the American trotting horse.

Angora Goats.

In connection with the sheep show is an exhibit of 240 Angora goats. These interesting animals fill one of the live stock pavilions. The growing of Angora goats is a comparatively new business in this country, and very little is known about it in the east. Their adaptability to rough, rocky pasture lands, where they graze and grow contentedly, has brought them prominently into consideration where such lands have proved useless or nearly so.

Wool Exhibit.

As another feature of the sheep show Superintendent Converse has arranged an exhibition of wool. This is international in scope, having fleeces from the different states, Canada and several South American countries. Argentina alone contributes more than 200 sample fleeces. Chile, Costa Rica, Bolivia, Salvador and other Central and South American countries are also represented. Such an international wool exhibit was never before attempted. It cannot fail to produce lasting benefits that will be shared by growers of sheep, manufacturers of woolen goods and through them the general public.

Shearing Machinery.

Still another accessory to the sheep industry is elaborately illustrated. In one of the stock buildings a platform was erected about three feet above the floor, upon which is installed the latest and best shearing and clipping machinery. Some of the machines are operated by electricity, while others are worked by hand. To show to Exposition visitors their practical working, twenty sheep are brought from the East Buffalo stockyards every morning. One machine is set in motion each half hour during the day, and one of the men in charge removes a fleece with it. One of the operators claims a speed of one and one-half minutes to a fleece.

Range Sheep.

In a pen outside of the regular sheep exhibit is a carload of range sheep direct from the Canadian northwest. These are sent as an advertisement of the rich pasture lands and an illustration of what may be produced there without additional feed and without artificial shelter.

The Pan-American Horse Show.

Dame Fashion may have withdrawn her smile of approval and the different styles of autos turn their backs in derision, but the horse still holds favor with the great majority of mankind. The horse show at the Exposition which holds the boards for two weeks, from Oct. 7 to Oct. 19, will be no exception. Five hundred horses are coming which are carefully selected to faithfully represent the best of every breed found in the United States and Canada.

Vermont is again courting prominence by sending a fine lot of Morgan horses, a breed that should receive more attention than it does.

Draft horses, especially the Clydesdale and Percheron breeds, are well represented. These are principally from Canada and the western states.

German coach horses attract a great deal of attention. One large importation of these horses will be brought direct to the Exposition.

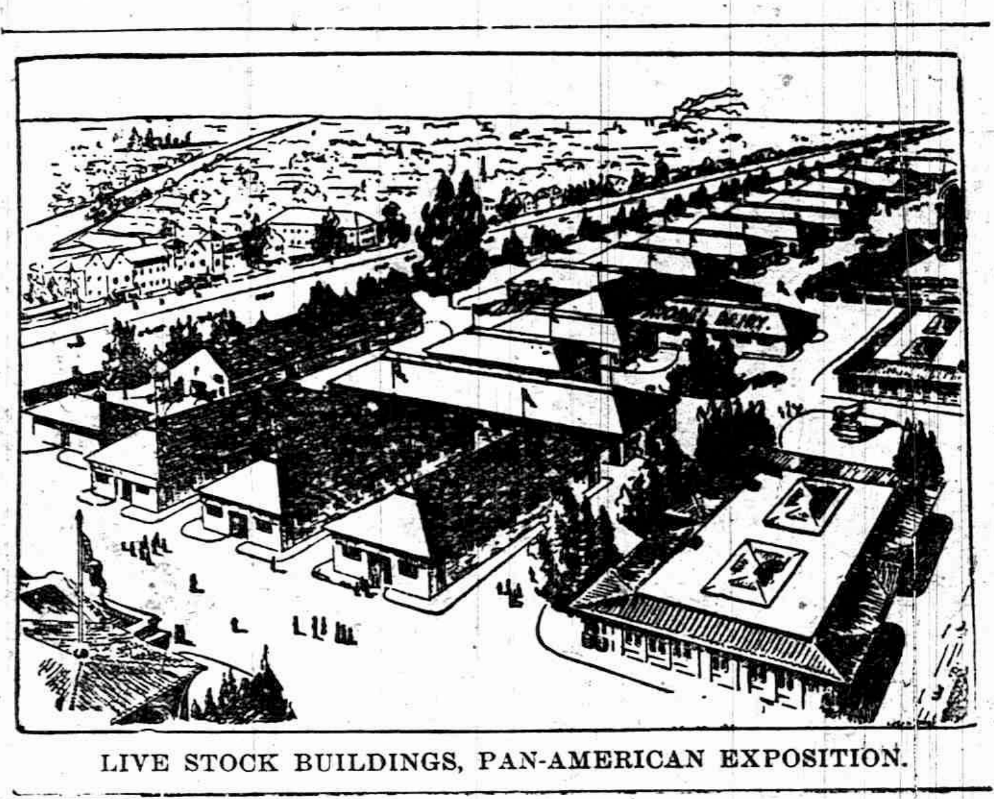
French-Canadian horses from Quebec are entered more as a special feature of the horse show. They are little known in the United States, but their style and endurance will commend them as superior coach horses and those that will command favor in any market.

Instead of enumerating the different breeds it is only necessary to select any kind of horse wanted, with the assurance that it will be on exhibition. The finest stables on the continent are contributing to the show with sufficient enthusiasm to insure the finest representation possible. The judging takes place in the Stadium on the 9th and 10th of October, when this immense structure will be none too large to accommodate those who will want to see this crowning climax to such an elaborate series of live stock shows.

Poultry and Pet Stock.

From Oct. 21 to the close of the fair the stock pavilions will be once more filled with life, though in a very different form. Poultry of high degree from all parts of the United States and many places in Canada will fraternize without regard to politics or tariffs. As near neighbors the poultry will have mice, rabbits, cats, cavies, prairie dogs, squirrels, ferrets, rats and Belgian hares, besides a great assortment of pigeons, owls, magpies and a great many cage birds.

Eight thousand animals and birds are being gathered together to form this complete cosmopolitan assemblage of birds and animals.



LIVE STOCK BUILDINGS, PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

The Pan-American Exposition is proving a great success. While the enterprise suffered for a few days from the national tragedy, the crowds that have put off going until the fall are rushing to Buffalo in great numbers now.

President Roosevelt said of the Pan-American Exposition, "It is well worth the while of every man, woman and child in the country to visit the Pan American Exposition."

More than 5,000,000 people have visited the Pan-American Exposition. As Secretary of Agriculture Wilson said on Sept. 11, after a visit, "No one can afford to keep away."

Thomas A. Edison said of the Pan-American Exposition after viewing the illumination, "This is the apotheosis of the incandescent light."

Poultrymen from all over the United States will be meeting at Buffalo and the Pan-American Exposition the last three weeks of October.

The stock shows at the Pan-American Exposition have been most popular. The sheep show began Sept. 23 and lasts until Oct. 25.

Innes' band, one of the best in the country, will give concerts free to all Pan-American Exposition visitors from Oct. 7 to 20.

Fire Among the Redwoods.

Perhaps the most startling phenomenon of the fire was the quick death of childlike sequoias only a century or two ago, says John Muir in The Atlantic. In the midst of the other comparatively slow and steady fire work one of these tall, beautiful saplings, leafy and branchy, would be seen blazing up suddenly all in one heaving, booming, passionate flame reaching from the ground to the top of the tree and fifty to a hundred feet or more above it, with a smoke column bending forward and streaming away on the upper free flowing wind.

To burn these green trees a strong fire of dry wood beneath them is required to send up a current of air hot enough to distill inflammable gases from the leaves and sprays; then, instead of the lower limbs gradually catching fire and igniting the next and next in succession, the whole tree seems to explode almost simultaneously, and with awful roaring and throbbing a round tapering flame shoots up 200 or 300 feet, and in a second or two is quenched, leaving the green spire a black dead mast bristled and roughened with down curling boughs.

Limited Numeral System.

The natives of Murray island, Torres strait, have a numerical system which is based on two numbers, netat, one, and neis, two. Above two they compute by composition—neis-netat means three, neis i neis (two and two), four. When they get above this figure, they have recourse to different parts of the body, beginning with the little and other fingers of the left hand and going from there to the wrist, elbow, armpit, shoulder, etc., on the left side, and thence down the right side to twenty-one, the toes giving ten numbers more, to thirty-one. Beyond this they are satisfied with "many."

All His Fortune.

One day before his marriage the Rev. Sydney Smith ran into the room where his fiancee was, flung into her lap six small teaspoons which "from much wear had become the ghosts of their former selves" and said, "There, Kate, you lucky girl, I give you all my fortune." He gave her, however, what he did not mention, his fine character and great talent and in every way proved himself an excellent husband.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble purifies the blood and builds up your ealth. Only 50c at C. A. Wright's.

Many people would do very little for God if they were sure that hell was closed.

Can't be perfect health without pure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters makes pure blood. Tones and invigorates the whole system.

Better suffer in a good cause than make a good cause to suffer.

Makes assimilation perfect, healthy blood, firm muscles, strong nerves. Quickens the brain, makes and keeps you well Great medicine, Rocky Mountain Tea, 35c. J. J. Orr.

A sinner's company is not hard to find

The Hawaiian woman's club at Honolula debated the question: "Is it better to take Rocky Mountain Tea hot or cold?" Either way it magnifies your pleasure. J. J. Orr.

Better to think and not to say than to say and not to think.

Stepped Into Live Coals.

"When a child I burned my foot frightfully," writes W. H. Eads, of Jonesville, Va., "which caused horrible leg sores for 30 years, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured me after everything else failed." Infallible for Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Sores, Bruises and Piles. Sold by C. A. Wright.

A man lives to no purpose who lives to bad purpose.

J. Odgers of Frostburg, Md., writes: "I had a very bad attack of kidney complaint and tried Foley's Kidney Cure which gave me immediate relief and was perfectly cured after taking two bottles. Be sure you take Foley's. J. J. Orr.

The best throw with the dice is to throw them away.

After exposure or when you feel a cold coming on take a dose of Foley's Honey and Tar. It never fails to stop a cold if taken in time. J. J. Orr.

If you cannot speak well, it is well not to speak.

S. A. Ingalls, Crown Point, N. Y., writes: "My wife suffered from kidney trouble for years. She was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure and in less than a week after she began using it she was greatly improved and three bottles cured her." J. J. Orr.

It is understood that Miss Lulu Jones has left the post office. Henry McClure will take the place thus made vacant. David Jones has, for a number of years, been ill and his poor health of late has no doubt made it necessary for Lulu to devote her whole attention to his care. Lulu has been a faithful and painstaking employee there for years and will be greatly missed by any patron of the office.

WARM WORDS

Of Praise to Rev. Walter Burnett given by the

MONROE COMMERCIAL

In the issue of Last week. Former Tecumseh boy Deserves all Praise.

The new pastor of the M. E. church, Rev. Burnett, has been in the exercise of his duties on this charge but two weeks and yet the audience room of that edifice sees congregations such as it has not known for a quarter of a century.

There is a kind of impression abroad that people do not like to attend church. It is a mistake. The fact is there is nothing more attractive than a really fine church service. The multitude will go where it is fed, and it likes intellectual and spiritual food better than any other if it could only be gotten.

This new comer among us takes texts that have not been threshed to by mouldy generations of indifferent sermonizers, but is apt to select a passage of Scripture that makes one wonder when it is announced what meat can come from that apparently unpromising verse. But there is where the charm is. From a foundation you never went of before a structure of beauty of diction and perfection of logic is reared that makes you wonder how you could [illegible] unmindful of the splendor of every young man [illegible] passage. A [illegible] over the 26 line. He got pastor pulpit without a scrap of note [illegible] help; just the plain bible for his [illegible] tion. Slender, pale, with a voice of high pitch that never fails to get to the very last pew in a clear stream he speaks without a hesitant moment and with often a dramatic fervor that thrills the whole audience.

The highest proof of oratory is to interest young people. When every young person in an audience is listening with an intentness that does not allow even a stray whisper to break in—it is an orator that is doing that.

Another beauty has the preaching of this young man—he stops when he is through. It is a wise but uncommon pulpiteer who knows when he has really got to the end of his sermon. From twenty to thirty minutes suffices this vivid speaker in giving a brilliant elucidation of a theme, and his listeners devoutly thank him—and go again. There is no higher compliment possible than that.

Good Fits.

FARON ANDERSON

By a Score of Young People. Lots of Fun and a Good Time.

Last Monday Mrs. S. W. Anderson journeyed to Grand Rapids to attend a grand star meeting and Seaton W. intended to go to New York Wednesday afternoon. Miss Helen was over to Ann Arbor visiting her friend, Mrs. Loree so the young people thought it a very appropriate time to give Faron Anderson a little surprise party, and a fine party they had at S. W. Anderson's house Wednesday evening.

The young ladies had to meet at Shull's Monday evening and at Arnold's Tuesday evening to make arrangements, in fact the whole week was taken up with the affair. S. W. was ill and did not go away as anticipated till Monday, but the surprise came off and it was a glorious time. a picnic lunch prepared by the girls, 63 and a merry evening. So good, in fact, that no doubt the Third 63 club will be organized and meet every two weeks during the winter.

TANGLED UP

The Dray Team Belonging to

ROB'T McCLELLAND

Stumbled on the Sidewalk and got Mixed up in a Wire Fence.

Around the corner of Maiden Lane and Logan street it is usually very quiet, Martin Zimmerman makes no disturbnce neither does Dr. Frost or the Rev. Jones, but Wednesday afternoon things were torn loose up there and for a time it looked as if Martin's quiet home would be moved against its will and half the neighborhood carried along.

Our wavy haired drayman, Robert McClelland, drove his team into the back part of Zimmermans lot for some errand. The horse fell over the side walk, got tangled in the wire fence, knocked down the other horse, then both horses turned in and attempted to tare up the back yard.

Meantime the noise of the team and Robert called together all the men, women and children in the neighbornood. The excitemont for a short time was intense, still nothing was broken and no one hurt but "Bob" was badly frightened and vowed it was his worst experience since being a married man.

An Entertaining Afternoon

At the home of Mrs. A. Hardenburgh, in response to invitations given by Mrs Hardenburgh and her daughter, Mrs. Fisher, about twenty-five ladies were splendidly entertained at cards Thursday afternoon. Sixty-three was the game played and Miss Harriet Whittier secured the first favor, the foot favor being taken by Mrs. S. W. Temple. A dainty lunch was served and the ladies passed a most delightful afternoon.

AUGER HOLES

An Open Market for Them in

TECUMSEH

Two Sold last week and More now on the Market.

Ed Everett is one of the best natured young men in the township and it may be well to state that no one enjoyes a little joke better than he especially if the joke is on the other chap

Last week Ed had occasion to order quite a bill of groceries and after the order was given, "Burf" Anderson asked him if "there was anything, more." After thinking carefully and some little hesitation Ed remarked, "Nothing more that I can think of except, perhaps, if if is convenient, you might send down a couple of auger holes."

This was the last thought of the conversation, until Mrs. Ed. Everett discovered amongst the groceries two small pieces of wood in which were bored two auger holes and on the bill was this item, "2 auger holes 20c."

This is no doubt the first and last lot of auger holes that Ed Everett ever purchased, and not least, the goods have cost him good cigars besides the price.

LITERARY NOTES

What Makes a Woman Old.

"I ain't hard work so much that makes a woman old, fur she kin work an' toil an' grub fur them she loves an' still come up smilin' an' rosy, but it's waitin' an' hopin' an' starvin' that ages 'em"—Paul Laurence Dunbar, in October "New" Lippincott.

Professor W. A. Dunning, of Columbia opens the October Atlantic with the last of the Reconstruction Series of articles, a trenchant paper on The Undoing of Reconstruction, which is prefaced by an instructive editorial on Reconstruction and Disfranchisement, summing up the purpose and purport of this valuable set of papers. Their cumulative weight can be realized only by reading and comparing together as a whole this remarkable series, which has never yet been excelled in political value and critical instructiveness.

The stories of the Century for October include the richly illustrated "An Angelican Monk" by Torquil MacDonald. the second installment of "Trent's Trust" by Bret Harte, "The Triumph of Shed," by Virginia Frazier Boyle, with Potthast's illustrations, "Rosalie," by Joel Chandler Harris, and "Bred in the Bone," by Thomas Nelson Page. The editorial pages include a strong paper upon "The Desperate Plight of New York City," and a resume of the Century's prize competitions for college graduates.

The Cosmopolitan for October is ful of entertaining fiction. Thomas A. Janvier, for some time not seen in the magazines, reappears in the Cosmopolitan with a Mexican story of love and adventure, "Forfeits to the Gods." Bret Hart, whose condensed novels "won him so nuch fame, contributes a side-splitting parody of Hall Caine's "The Christian," Irving Bacheller writes a short sketch of a little New York inn, "The Shadow of Happiness." Clara Morris' love story reveals her as an accomplished writer, capable of analyzing and sympathizing with man's deepest emotions.

When Louise M. Alcott was a Monk

In a letter written by Miss Alcott in 1862 to her "Laurie," which is one of many published for the first time in the Ladies' Home Journal for October, she thus describes an interesting event of that year: "We had a grand Masque in March, when 400 people appeared in fine costumes and had a merry time. I was a 'Monk.' and no one knew me even after we unmasked for a black beard and cowl changed me into a jolly friar and made great fun. The boys called me 'sir,' pushed me around in the dressing-room, and asked me to tie and pin them, supposing I was a man, and the girls flirted in earnest till I took off my beard, when they shouted."

* * *

At a time when all the world is asking "What manner of man is our new President?" Modern Culture reprints in the October number an article entitled, "Theodore Roosevelt—The Typical Man of the Twentieth Century," by Day Allen Willey. Of this article the President himself has written:

I have have so genuinely liked that article of yours about me that appeared in Modern Culture, that I must send you a line to tell you so. You have recognized what I was trying to be and to do—no matter how far I have come short in both respects. Let me thank you heartily. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

No more authoritative commendation is needed than this, and if the reader wishes to know what the new President "is trying to be and to do" he has Theodore Roosevelt's assurance that he will find it in Modern Culture.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

A VETERAN'S STORY OF A TASSELED TURKISH FEZ.

The Grewsome Incident In Which He Participated at the Second Battle of Manassas—A Brave Boy and His Dying Request.

"Whenever I see a tasseled Turkish fez," said a Confederate veteran whose attention had been attracted by a showy cap of that pattern in a Canal street window, "I am reminded of a curious and rather gruesome incident of my campaigning days. It was on the morning after the second battle of Manassas," he continued in response to a request for the story, "and several of us from my company had gone over to the field in the hope of picking up a few things that we badly needed and for which the dead had no further use —waterproofs, for instance, and sound canteens.

"During the previous day's engagement you may remember that a regiment of freshly recruited New York zouaves held the crest of a hill and were charged and almost annihilated by Hood's brigade. They were mowed down like ripened grain and fell so thickly that their corpses literally carpeted the earth. I dare say it was as awful a slaughter, considering the number engaged, as occurred anywhere in the course of the war.

"Well, we hadn't gone very far when we came to this hill and began to get among the dead men. The poor fellows had been mustered into service less than a week before, and they were said to be the most gorgeously uniformed military troop ever organized. They wore scarlet Turkish trousers, blue jackets embroidered with gold bullion braid and purple fezes with long pendent tassels.

"Being just from the outfitters, all this fine regalia was perfectly fresh and new, and somehow or other it added to the ghastliness of the spectacle on the hillside. The corpses were in all sorts of strange postures, and their fantastic costumes gave them an air of horrible grotesqueness that I couldn't begin to describe in words.

"However, to come to my point, I had picked up a fez to carry away as a relic and was about to leave the spot when I happened to notice a much handsomer specimen on the head of a little zouave stretched out, stiff and stark, a few yards away, with a handkerchief over his face. I stepped up to make a 'swap,' but had barely touched the tassel when a low, sweet toned voice under the handkerchief said, 'Please don't!'

"For a moment," continued the veteran, "that unpleasant protest, coming from what I had supposed to be a corpse, made my hair bristle on my head. Then I lifted the handkerchief and was shocked to see the delicate, refined features of a boy not over 15. He was pale as death and evidently desperately wounded, but he looked at me calmly. 'My God,' I exclaimed, 'what a lad you are to be here!' 'I'm afraid I'm dying unless I have help,' he replied. 'Do you think the surgeons will be around pretty soon?' 'The Lord knows!' I groaned, for the boy's courage touched me to the heart. 'Your surgeons have all run away, and we only have a few, with more wounded than they can attend to.' 'Then I guess all I can do is to lie here quietly and die,' he said in the same gentle voice. 'Can you get me a little water before you go?'

"I took his canteen and hurried down to a branch at the foot of the hill, where the first thing I saw, by the way, was the corpse of a zouave floating in a pool. I went up the stream far enough to get out of the horrible death zone, filled the canteen with pure water and was soon back at the boy's side. I gave him a drink, and he thanked me. 'Is there nothing else I can do?' I asked awkwardly, because I knew our company was under early marching orders that morning and that it would be impossible for me to linger much longer. 'Nothing at all, thank you,' he replied. 'No message to anybody?' 'No; nothing, thanks.'

"I turned away most reluctantly and had gone only a few yards when I heard his thin voice calling me back. 'Excuse me,' he said, 'but I want you to accept this as a present,' and he handed me his fine purple fez. 'No, no,' I exclaimed, greatly embarrassed; 'I couldn't think of taking it. When I started to a little while ago, I thought you—you'— 'Thought I was dead, of course,' he interrupted. 'Well, I soon will be, and that other fez will do me just as well. Please put it on my head and take mine.' I saw that he would be hurt unless I did as he desired, so I took the fez and went away.

"In less than half an hour our company was on the march, and, needless to say, I never heard anything more of the little child zouave. He was badly wounded and undoubtedly died where I left him. I kept the fez a long time," added the veteran, "but it was finally lost, with other odds and ends, in the general confusion following the war. I'd give some money for it today."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

People are learning they can be cured.

Learning the merits of Doan's Ointment.

Plenty of proof that Doan's Ointment will cure piles, eczema or any itchiness of the skin.

Read the testimony of a Battle Creek citizen.

Mr. A. G. Ayers, Book Binder, of 197 West Main street, Battle Creek, says: "My hands became so sore from eczema that it was with difficulty I could bend my fingers. The skin cracked open, large scabs formed and in addition to the spots being tender they itched intolerably. I tried everything I could hear about or get hold of to stop the trouble but I was unable to do so until I procured Doan's Ointment. I had heard it spoken about by several people but as I thought it would act like all other preparations which I tried I waited some time until I was compelled from the condition of my hands to do something. Doan's Ointment cured me. Up to date, and this is some months after I stopped the treatment, I have had no indication of any return."

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insiduous consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

Much In the Name.

Once there were some very swagger people in an ultra fashionable village not far from the metropolis who decided that no society yet bunched together was exclusive enough for them. Even the Colonial Dames failed to meet their requirements. So they determined to start a new aggregation that should be the real thing.

After considerable thought they concluded that if they limited membership to direct descendants of Fernando de Soto it would be sufficiently exclusive for their fastidious tastes. A "Society of the Sons and Daughters of De Soto" was the outcome. All the best people in the village proved that they were eligible and were enrolled as charter members.

However, there was one man on the outer fringe whose proof of descent was not accepted; in short, he was blackballed. This made him angry, and he started to investigate the subject.

One day he published his findings in the local newspaper. The principal fact was this: "F. de Soto died a bachelor."

The Sons and Daughters of De Soto are now known as the Elite Euchre club.

JOHN ANDREWS.

About three weeks ago, John Andrews, our popular jeweller, not feeling very well went to visit Mr. Easlick, his uncle, and while there was taken sick with typhoid fever. While everything was done to arrest the progress of disease, yet in spite of all, the fever had gotten such a hold upon him that his constitution was unable to sustain it, and he departed this life Oct. 5, 1901, aged 32 years.

Johnny, as he was generally called, was almost alone as far as relatives were concerned. His parents being dead, he struggled to meet life's battles and while there was none to guide his wandering feet, he bravely faced the storm of life and grew up to be respected and highly esteemed by everybody. While living here and there, and mingling with all kinds of people, it could be said to his credit that he was free from bad habits, no profane word even escaping his lips, he thus impressed his life upon all with whom he associated.

His funeral was held at the residence of Mr. Easlick Sunday at one o'clock, conducted by Rev. G. W. Foltz, of Britton. He was greatly loved, which was evidenced by the large number of people that went seven miles to attend his funeral

Rev. Foltz spoke of the possibility of success to any young man, whose life was governed by such noble principles as that which characterized our young friend, John Andrews. His remains were taken to Azalia and buried beside his mother, whose last words to him before dying were "Be a good boy and you will always have friends." He never forgot those words, and he always had friends.

A Formidable Meal.

Sometimes the names given to different varieties of plants and vegetables are confusing, not to say startling. It sounds as if one had indulged in a most æsthetic meal to say, "I have just eaten an early rose." But when one remembers that Early Rose is the name of a popular variety of potato the æstheticism vanishes. Potatoes seem to be especially liable to have names bestowed on them which have a most "unedible" sound.

Two women out on a bicycle tour became hungry, and there was no inn in sight, but there was a farmhouse near by, and an old man was pottering about in the adjacent potato patch. To him they appealed for food. He promised to do what he could, saying that, at any rate, he could assure them of good potatoes, as he had every variety in his garden. The women enjoyed the meal and especially commended the potatoes.

"Yes," said the farmer, "you hav not done so badly. You have eaten tw Schoolmasters, two Blacksmiths, fou Kidneys and a couple of White Elephants."

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed four-year-old Bess, looking up at the starry skies one evening, "what a pretty place heaven must be when it is so beautiful wrong side out!"

You rob yourself oftener than others rob you.

Walker Gave the Horse Away.

"J. Brisben Walker has one of the most adventurous natures of any man of importance I know," said Harry Wells of Denver, recently, in New York. "When Walker was remaking a mile or so of river front in Denver that he later turned into a fine park a sudden rise of the Platte washed away a number of things, including the ground from under a stable on the improvement Walker was making. When Walker came on the scene to look over the damage done a horse that had been in the stable was half submerged and in danger of being smothered in the quicksand and rolling mud that the angry waters made of the half-prepared new ground. Walker asked several men to go and help the horse. When they refused he started laying planks along the treacherous ground, just as they do to get drowning persons from out an icy river. In a short time he was in a position where a false step meant an even chance for life or death. He got both the horse and himself out of the scrape. Then he turned around and discharged every man on the job, and wound up by giving the horse away."

Child (in high, shrill treble)—Mamma, did you get papa's birthday present?"

"Yes, dearest."

"What did you get, mamma?"

"Cigars, lovey."

"The cheap ones that Aunt Millie told you about?"

Silence from mamma, but a heightened flush on her face that was not entirely the reflection from "dearest lovey's" red velvet hat.

Three Ways.

An Englishman, an Irishman and a Scotchman, making a tour around the city a short time since, were observed looking through a confectioner's window at a beautiful young woman serving in the shop.

"Oh," exclaimed Mr. Patrick, "do let us be after spending half a crown with the dear craytur, that we may look at her convaniently and have a bit of chat wid her."

"You extravagant dog," said Mr. Bull. "I'm sure one-half of the money will be sufficient. But let us go in, by all means. She's a charming girl."

"Ah, wait a wee," interposed Mr. McAndrew. "Dinna ye ken it'll serve our purpose equally weel just to ask the bonnie lassie to gie us twa sixpences for a shilling and inquire where's Mr. Toompson's house and sic like. We're no hungry and may as weel save the siller."—Birmingham Mercury.

A Lake's Jawbreaking Name.

The town of Webster, Mass., has always been proud of the beautiful little lake within its limits, but never boasted of the jawbreaking name by which it is known. The lake has the longest and most unpronounceable name of any in the world, and residents and visitors who pass the summer on its shores and islands are quietly suggesting a substitute for the unwieldy Indian term which for many years has been applied to this body of water. The full name of the lake is Chargoggagoggmanchogagoggagungamaug, but the residents have contracted it to Chanbunagungamaug.—Engineer.

Insomnia

Nerve-racked, weary and heavy-eyed, the head that seeks repose finds only ceaseless tossing and feverish unrest. Strange fancies —vague forbodings—fill the mind with harrowing thoughts until morning brings its rasping headache, irritable temper, and loss of appetite. Rest the nerves—build them up—and gentle, restful, refreshing sleep will be yours.

"My greatest trouble was sleeplessness. I was nervous and restless, and would toss and roll for hours. Had no ambition and had to abandon business. One bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine put me on my feet again."

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" and the South.

Possibly the most general conception of the old life at the south held by the rest of the country is that drawn from "Uncle Tom's Cabin," a work which, whatever its truth in detail—and there was doubtless much truth—yet by reason of its omissions and its grouping contained even more untruth as a correct picture of a civilization, says Thomas Nelson Page in The Atlantic. As an argument against the evils inherent in slavery it was unanswerable; as a presentation of the life it undertook to mirror it was rather a piece of emotional fiction, infused with the spirit of an able and sincere but only partially informed partisan, than a correct reflection. It served a purpose far beyond the dream and possibly even the intention of its author. It did much to hasten the overthrow of slavery. It did no less to stain the reputation of the south and obscure what was worthy and fine in its life. From that time the people of the south were regarded, outside its own border, much—as, shall we say, China is regarded today—as one of the effete peoples, as an obstacle in the path of advance and possibly among many as an object of righteous spoil.

Chelsea, Mich., Oct. 9.—Bishop Foley visited St. Mary's parish last evening and confirmed a class of 50 children and eight adults.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

The family of Ed Williams, a farmer near Coldwater, is quarantined. Two members of the family are sick and it is believed with smallpox.

Bishop S. M. Merrill has appointed Rev. Fayette L. Thompson pastor of the First M. E. church at Jackson to Central M. E. church, Davenport, Ia.

The 8-year-old son of Nick Faber of Menominee was accidentally shot in the stomach by his brother with a 22 caliber rifle. His condition is critical.

Ex-Gov. Luce is so much improved that he was able to take a ride in his carriage Tuesday. His physicians now state that he will recover his former good health.

The grocery store of A. A. Riker at Flint was closed Tuesday on a chattel mortgage held by W. J. Gould & Co. of Detroit. The stock is advertised for sale next Monday.

The case against ex-Rep. D. Judson Hammond, convicted by an Ingham circuit court of soliciting a bribe, has gone over to the January term of the supreme court by stipulation.

Editor M. L. Izor of the Durand Express criticised Judge Smith for not soaking a saloonist and burglar and has been cited to appear Oct. 15 and show cause why he should not be fined for contempt of court.

Mayor Foeltzer of Benton Harbor started out after an alleged horse thief named George Oderkirk and captured him at Watervliet, 15 miles distant. He obtained a confession from the chap and will receive the $50 reward offered.

Workingmen while excavating at Kalamazoo for a new street unearthed the skeleton of a woman, aged about 20, that had rested there for at least 50 years. The head was pressed against the breast and the legs curled up unled the chin. No explanation of the mystery is offered.

The double funeral of William Bowen and Thomas Bee, the victims of the accident at the Page Wire Fence Co.'s works in Adrian Saturday afternoon, was held Monday. All the workmen employed at the concern attended. The cause of the accident is still a mystery, as no one is able to account for the displacement of the heavy coils of wire.

That the next state encampment will be held at Manistee is now a settled fact, Gens. Hart and Kidd having met at the Morton house in Grand Rapids and concluded negotiations. Included in the arrangements for next year are water to be supplied to all headquarters direct from the lake, a rifle range, additional land for the camp ground, removal of stumps from entire camp site and better railroad facilities for carrying troops to the camp.

Origin of Ice Cream Soda.

According to a Wisconsin legend, ice cream soda had its origin in Milwaukee, the town that made lager beer famous. A confectioner whose trade was among the wealthy used to make a good, rich soda water by adding to it, when drawn, pure cream. His trade rapidly increased, and one night when he had a crowd to serve he ran out of cream. In desperation he used a small quantity of ice cream to give the drink the proper rich consistency, and what resulted is history.—Beverages.

Sin Promoters.

His satanic majesty announced that he intended taking a much needed vacation.

Some surprise being expressed at this action, he explained:

"Well, I've fixed things so that the trolley motormen will refuse to stop for passengers when they are in a hurry, and I guess that will keep things going until I return."—Baltimore American.

Too Realistic.

"Look here," said a Suffolk farmer to a friend, "I'm going to kill my pig, but I owe so much pork to my neighbors that I shall have none left for myself if I pay it all back. What would you do?"

"Quite easy to trick 'em," said the friend. "Kill your pig and leave it hanging outside until late at night, so's every one can see it. Then take it in and say some one stole it. Stick to the tale, and you'll be all right."

The farmer followed instructions, and the kind friend watched his chance and stole the pig. The poor farmer came around next morning to tell what had happened.

"Somebody's stolen my pig!" he cried.

"Good!" said the friend. "Stick to it, and the neighbors 'll believe you, sure enough."

"But it was stolen, I tell you!"

"Excellent!" quoth the friend. "Just you stick to the tale."

"You confounded ass!" yelled the farmer. "Don't you understand? It was really stolen!"

"Superb!" laughed the delighted friend. "You ought to have been an actor, so you ought."

That Suffolk farmer slammed the door and went away fuming.—London Answers.

A Simple Disinfectant.

A simple disinfectant to use in a sickroom or in any room where a close, musty or sewer smell is noticed is to put some ground coffee on a shovel, a bit of camphor gum in the middle of it. Rock-a-Bye Baby

These are sweet words, but how much pain and suffering they used to mean. It's different now. Since Mother's Friend has become known expectant mothers have been spared much of the anguish of childbirth. Mother's Friend is a liniment to be applied externally. It is rubbed thoroughly into the muscles of the abdomen. It gives elasticity and strength, and when the final great strain comes they respond quickly and easily without pain. Mother's Friend is never taken internally. Internal remedies at this time do more harm than good. If a woman is supplied with this splendid liniment she need never fear rising or swelling breasts, morning sickness, or any of the discomforts which usually accompany pregnancy.

The proprietor of a large hotel in Tampa, Fla., writes: "My wife had an awful time with her first child. During her second pregnancy, Mother's Friend was used and the baby was born easily before the doctor arrived. It's certainly great."

WIND AND WAVES

Crew of Schooner Clung to Rigging All Night.

BOAT WENT DOWN IN GALE

Were Rescued by a Tug and Taken to Amherstburg, Ont.—Were in a Perilous Position All Saturday Night.

Detroit, Oct. 14.—The schooner Mont Blanc, coal laden, sprung a leak on Lake Erie in Saturday night's gale and went down about [illegible] miles from Bar Point. The water is not [illegible] where she sank, and the crew saved themselves by climbing the rigging, and were able to keep out of the high seas which roared beneath them.

After clinging to the rigging all night they were rescued by the tug Cheboygan in the morning and taken to Amherstburg. They were nearly worn out with exposure, and Mrs. Littleton, the captain's wife, who was cook of the vessel, is seriously ill. She lies in the cabin of the Cheboygan and has not been moved on account of her condition. Had she not been rescued yesterday morning she would have perished from exposure.

The Mont Blanc loaded her coal cargo at Toledo and was bound for Port Huron in tow of the tug Gladiator. In the same tow were the schooners Mineral State, John Kilderhouse and Roberts. The gale struck the vessels in the middle of Lake Erie, and the heavy seas proved too much for the Mont Blanc. She sprung a leak and the crew worked hard at the pumps, but to no account. In the heavy seas the leaks became too great, and when a short distance from shelter the schooner sank to the bottom. Had it not been for shallow water at this point the crew would have been drowned. They were able to save nothing but the clothing that they wore, and were barely able to scramble into the rigging of the schooner before she went to the bottom.

The Mont Blanc came out in 1867, and was owned by John Little of Port Huron. She was 137 feet long by 26 feet beam and rated 174 net tons. Her cargo was something over 500 tons of coal for J. W. Thompson.

The Mineral State lost both fore and main masts. The Kilderhouse and Roberts also lost considerable canvas, and all three are anchored off Bar Point.

A Strange Illness.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 14.—Herbert D. Lewis, a painter and paper hanger, is very low with an illness so peculiar that the physicians are baffled. Lewis was taken a week ago with a numbness, and since that time has slept nearly every minute. He has taken no nourishment and at times his pulse has scarcely been perceptible.

Stung to Death By Bees.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 14.—A special from M[illegible]awaka says the 10-year-old son of John Hillis, south of Mishawaka, accidentally backed a team of horses into an apiary. Both horses were killed by the stings, and the boy will lose the sight of both eyes and may die from his injuries.

Died From Blood Poisoning.

Standish, Mich., Oct. 14.—Mrs. Morley, or Grandma Morley as she was called, was found dead in bed. She was 84 years old. She leaves several children in the county. Blood poisoning caused by the scratch of a cat caused death.

Soldiers Paid Today.

Jackson, Mich., Oct. 14.—Quartermaster-General Kidd was in Jackson today to pay off Cos. D and C and independent battalions staff and band for services during the state encampment. About $4,000 will be distributed among local militia men.

Boom in Copper Country.

Houghton, Mich., Oct. 14.—The extent of the building boom in the copper country at present is shown by the fact that the South Shore road delivered 100 carloads of building material at Houghton, Hancock and Calumet.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Albern Stroud of Pontiac, charged with the death of Fred Newbirth, was convicted of manslaughter. Blows and kicks during a drunken row caused his death.

Joseph Wrinkle, arrested at Sarnia, is wanted at Alpena for alleged criminal assault and house breaking. His two pals were convicted there, but Wrinkle escaped.

The largest fish ever caught in the vicinity of Iron Mountain was taken from Spread Eagle lake by Walter Weber. It weighed 36 pounds and was 54 inches long. It was the first muskallonge ever caught here.

The Y. M. C. A. of Michigan will hold their sixteenth annual convention at Jackson this week, beginning Thursday and continuing to Sunday, Oct. 20. An attractive program has been arranged.

Postmaster Dewey at Owosso has received word from the postoffice department ordering him to investigate a complaint made by rural delivery patrons, that the mail boxes have been shot full of holes and otherwise tampered with.

In the case of Chas. R. Mains vs. S. S. Hulbert et al., which has been pending for some time at Marshall, a judgment was rendered for the defendants, the plaintiff failing to appear in court. Mains entered suit for $100,000 to recompense him for imagined damages done to his character.

As She Saw It.

Mrs. Kleener—What is the matter with you this evening, John, that you ain't smoking?

Mr. Kleener—The doctor says I mustn't. He says I must stop smoking or die.

Mrs. Kleener—Oh, I'm so glad! You won't be scenting up my curtains any more, will you?—Boston Transcript.

PANAMA CANAL CO. READY.

Are Willing Now to Sell to United States.

Washington, Oct. 14.—An international dicker, compared with which the payment of $7,200,000 to Russia for Alaska, or of $20,000,000 to Spain for the Philippines are mere trifles, will be attempted in a very short time, when President Hutin of the Panama Canal Co. meets the isthmian canal commission probably for the last time.

Hutin is now on his way to this country, and it is understood he brings a proposition for the transfer to the United States of the Panama canal. This proposition is said to be the only thing for which the commission is waiting before making its report. The commission's force of 800 engineers and assistants have bored almost every square yard of the route of the Nicaragua canal and have gone over the Panama route thoroughly enough to verify the surveys and reports. The surveys, which are the basis of the reports, have cost the government over [illegible].

The work which the [illegible] company has done on the isthmus has been estimated at an actual value of $43,000,000, although $250,000,000 has been squandered. The sum the Panama company will ask the commission for the work done on the isthmus and its other interests is said to exceed $50,000,000.

Burglars Got $1,500.

Rantoul, I. T., Oct. 14.—The Bank of Marysville, at Potomas, a village 20 miles east of this city, was entered by robbers early Sunday morning and between $1,200 and $1,500 in currency and silver taken. To get into the safe two charges of nitro-glycerine were used. A young man by the name of Moorehouse heard both explosions and started to ascertain the cause. When he reached a point near the bank he was stopped by one of the robbers and held prisoner until the men escaped on a hand car.

Uneasy Feeling in Cabul.

London, Oct. 14.—"A large Afghan force has been assembled around Cabul and is maintaining order," says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Simla. "Habib Ullah Khan has appointed a special guard for each European in Cabul, directing that the guards shall answer with their lives for the safety of their charges.

"The Indian government has postponed the usual move to Calcutta and Lord Curzon has definitely postponed his projected tour."

Marvar is Active.

Manila, Oct. 14.—The military authorities have received word that Gen. Miguel Malvar, the insurgent leader, is believed to have left the province of Batangas, Luzon, and to be planning an operation in the province of Bulacan, where insurgent conscription has been progressing recently. The country there is mountainous and well adapted to guerilla warfare. Capt. Pitcher has practically stamped out insurrection in the island of Mindoro.

Prominent Philadelphia Woman Dead.

Philadelphia, Oct. 14.—Mrs. E. D. Gillespie, a great grand-daughter of Benjamin Franklin and one of the city's most prominent women, died at her home here yesterday, aged 80 years. Her father, Wm. John Duane, was secretary of the treasury under President Jackson and was summarily removed by the president for refusal to comply with his order to remove the public funds from the bank of the United States.

Another Football Fatality.

Philadelphia, Oct. 14.—Edwin Longenecker, aged 21 years, quarterback on the football team of the Brown preparatory school, this city, died late Saturday night in a hospital as a result of injuries received in a game Tuesday. Longenecker was heavily thrown and fractured his spinal column.

Turkey Must Do It.

Constantinople, Oct. 14.—M. Zinovieff, Russian ambassodar to Turkey, had an audience of the sultan Friday. The conversation dealt chiefly with the deplorable situation in the Mush district and the persecutions and murders of Armenians. The ambassador insisted that Turkey should punish the guilty parties.

He Didn't Complain.

Young Wife—This talk about men being so impatient when a woman is getting ready to go anywhere is all nonsense.

Friend—Doesn't your husband complain at all?

Young Wife—No, indeed! Why, last evening I couldn't find my gloves and had a long hunt for half a dozen other things, and yet when I was finally dressed and went down stairs to my husband there he was by the fire reading and smoking as calmly as if I wasn't half an hour late.

Friend—Well, I declare! Where were you going?

Young Wife—To prayer meeting.—New York Weekly.

WANTS FAIR TRIAL

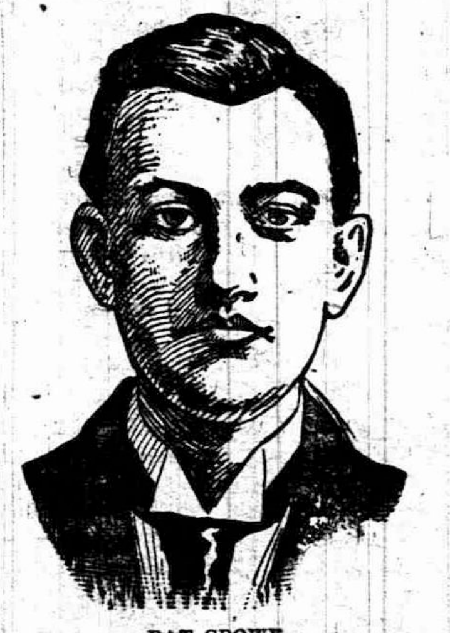
Pat Crowe Has Been Heard From Direct.

HE WANTS TO SURRENDER

Says That He Wants to Be Given a Fair Trial by a July Or Else He Won't Come In—Crowe Says He Is Feeling Fine.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 14.—Chief of Police John J. Donahue has received a letter from Pat Crowe, naming the terms on which he will surrender. The letter came in care of an Omaha newspaper, in which it is published, and covers 15 closely written pages of manuscript. The postmark is illegible, but the [illegible] was mailed at 8 o'clock in the morning and [illegible] this city at 8 o'clock in the evening of the same day, indicating that it had not traveled a long distance. In the letter Crowe agrees to give himself up at once and stand trial for the kidnaping of Eddie Cudahy, provided he shall not be locked up until a jury shall adjudge him guilty. He says he is unable to furnish bond in excess of $500, and demands that bail be fixed in that sum.

Chief Donahue, when asked his opinion of the genuineness of the letter, expressed himself as quite satisfied that it came from Crowe. Donahue has known Crowe for several years, is acquainted with his manner, handwriting and style of speech. The chief also received yesterday a letter from Crowe's uncle at Manchester, Ia., submitting similar terms for Crowe's surrender, which lead the police to believe that they are dealing with the right man.



PAT CROWE.

Crowe's letter to Chief Donahue begins:

"J. J. Donahue, Chief of Police, Omaha, Neb.: Dear Sir—Nearly a year has passed by since I was accused of the Cudahy kidnaping. A large reward was offered and plenty of time has been given for the police and detectives to have made me a prisoner. So far they have failed to do it.

"Now, Mr. Donahue, let me tell you all I want is justice, a fair trial by 12 men, citizens of Douglass county, Nebraska. Not by Herod or any of his kind. Their God is gold, and with that power they rule the world.

"Donahue, all I ask is a square deal. Grant my request and I will give myself up.

"Mr. Cudahy has known me for 13 years. He now believes me guilty, nevertheless I think he will give me a fair trial, as all he wants is the public to know the truth."

He then expresses confidence that the county attorney and sheriff will give him a fair trial, and says he has known Gov. Savage ever since he was a barefooted boy on a farm in Iowa, and says the governor has identified him at the banks in South Omaha when Crowe was in business there. The letter expresses regret that he has fallen into ill-repute and then lays down the conditions of his surrender as follows:

"Now, Mr. Donahue, I will give myself up to you if you will promise me, upon your word of honor, that I will not be locked up until the jury says guilty. And if the jury says that, I will take my punishment like a man, without a murmur.

"I can give a bond of $500, and that is all. If the court will not accept that I am a fugitive from injustice.

"Your answer to this must bear the signatures of Edward Cudahy, Gov. Savage, Sheriff John Power, Attorney Shields, Chief J. J. Donahue and the judge that fixes that bond.

"Mr. Donahue, I want you to understand that I am not afraid of the combined wealth of all the Cudahys on earth and the united efforts of all the scrub detectives that their money can hire. The man that tries to pinch me will bite the dust, for I am ready to die in the mix. I will not be kangarooed."

The letter then states that the chief would not know him; that he weighs 200 pounds and is looking fine.

Chief Donahue said today he was requested by the city and Mr. Cudahy to withdraw the rewards which have been offered for Crowe's arrest and conviction on the condition that Crowe surrender himself. He said if Crowe shall give himself up he will be given all the advantages the law provides and be afforded time and every facility for securing such witnesses as his attorneys may deem necessary. He said the fight which the attorneys of James Callahan, now held in connection with the kidnaping are making, does not anticipate the return of Crowe and that Callahan knows no more of Crowe's whereabouts than anybody else.

Ransom is All Ready.

Constantinople, Oct. 14.—Thus far there have been no fresh developments in the case of Miss Helen M. Stone, the abducted American missionary. Spencer Eddy, secretary of the United States legation in Constantinople, has received a notification from Washington that the funds for ransom have been forwarded.

Indiana Bank Robbers.

Morristown, Ind., Oct. 14.—Early Sunday morning the postoffice safe was blown with nitro-glycerine, the robbers securing $700 in notes of Postmaster Phillips and $300 [illegible] postage. The explosion alarmed [illegible]zens, but the robbers escaped in a [illegible] that they had previously stolen.

TRUE BILLS RETURNED.

Court Indict Salsbury and MacLeod—Bail $7,500 Each.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 12.—Indictments were yesterday returned by the federal grand jury against City Attorney Lant K. Salsbury and Stilson V. MacLeod, former paying teller of the Old National bank and manager of the local clearing house. MacLeod was indicted on several counts charging violation of the United States banking law, and in connection with the issuing of a worthless certificate of deposit, and Salsbury is charged with being an accomplice.

An indictment was also returned against C. Alfred Scharch, former assistant cashier of the Fourth National bank, and prominent in this city, who is charged with violating the banking law in misappropriating funds.

Bail in the cases of Salsbury and MacLeod was fixed at $7,500 each.

Sue for $10,000 Damages.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 12.—Suit has been commenced against the Pere Marquette Railway Co. for $10,000 by John W. Thompson and Kate V. Calder. They allege that the company entered upon two lots owned by them and held possession for several years. After suit was commenced, the company vacated the property but did not make any restitution for the time they had occupied it.

Assaulted at Her Home.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 19.—Mrs. Thomas Lynn of 2119 Stone street is in a precarious condition as a result of an assault made by two men, who came to the house selling spectacles, and crowded their way in. One of them choked and held Mrs. Lynn while the other man ransacked the place, securing $35 in money and other articles.

He is Married Now.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Oct. 12.—John Reidinger, whose desertion by his Detroit fiance just before the wedding day last summer, won him considerable attention from the Detroit newspapers, has found a more constant flame and was married this week by Rev. Fr. Kennedy, his bride being Miss Dora Frank of Detroit.

In One Small Coffin.

Turner, Mich., Oct. 12.—The remains of the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Peters of Santiago, who were burned to death, were placed in one small coffin yesterday and, accompanied by the grandfather and grandmother, were taken to their old home near Argyle Center, Sanilac county, where the funeral will be held.

Stole Everything Handy.

Romulus, Mich., Oct. 12.—Thieves broke into Kingsbury & Co.'s store and took a gun. They also broke into the freight house at the depot and took nine boxes of plug tobacco, two bags of cloverseed and one box of soap.

Wine Cost Him $100.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 12.—Willard Murray of Webberville was fined $100 or 60 days in the Detroit house of correction in the circuit court for furnishing a young girl with a glass of wine.

Owosso Preacher Called.

Owosso, Mich., Oct. 12.—Rev. Paul Kionka, pastor of Salem's Evangelical church, goes to Coopertown, Wis., soon, having accepted a call there. The church has extended a call to Rev. J. Harsch of Hillsdale.

Burned in a Vat.

Alpena, Mich., Oct. 12.—Friday morning Joseph Adams fell into a vat of acid at the Moench tannery and was frightfully burned. His condition is serious.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

A club of well-known Coldwater ladies have begun the work of securing a hospital for Coldwater.

As a result of freight discrimination, the Montgomery Ward & Co. carriage plant will be removed to Chicago. From 40 to 80 hands are employed.

The officers of the Berrien and Cass County Medical societies have decided to hold the next annual meeting in Niles on Dec. 12.

Thieves entered the postoffice at Worden and made off with $25 in stamps and $20 in cash. The goods were not in the safe, so Postmaster Rorabacher will have to stand the loss.

Committees are in Lansing arranging for the annual meeting of the State Grange and State Association of Farmers' clubs, to be held during the week of Dec. 10.

Bishop Foley confirmed a class of 65 at St. John's church, Ypsilanti, assisted by Rev. Frs. Kennedy of Ypsilanti, Kelley of Ann Arbor, Cahalan of Hillsdale, Ryan of Dexter and Goldrich of Northfield.

Postmaster Doan, at Lutz, is said to have remarked at the time of the shooting of McKinley that he was glad of it, and that he hoped Roosevelt would get it, too. Someone carried the story to Washington, and Doan is now looking for another job.

Catherine Tucker of Grand Rapids and Jay M. Lawrence of Lenawee county were paroled by Gov. Bliss. The sentence of C. J. Thompson, who was paroled early in September, was commuted so that he may go out of the state.

After a drouth lasting almost four weeks it began raining Wednesday night at Coldwater, and continued all next day. Farmers had not dared to sow much wheat for fear the wheat would not sprout. The rain will put the ground in good condition for seeding.

Through the efforts of the Women's Relief Corps, flags will be placed in each room of the Port Huron public schools for the purpose of assisting to instill patriotism into the hearts of the pupils. The flags will be frunished by the women.

Mrs. F. Cady, who has been a missionary among the Chinese, in an address at Flint, asked those present not to send pictures of American women in evening costume to China, as the Chinese have very positive ideas about this "undress costume." She also said dolls should not be sent unless fully dressed.

A Tall Smoke Column.

During the burning of the Standard Oil company's tanks at Bayonne, N. J., in July, 1900, an immense column of smoke, shaped at the top like an umbrella, rose into the air, where very little wind was stirring, to an elevation, measured by triangulation, of 13,411 feet, or more than two miles and a half. Above the column white clouds formed in an otherwise cloudless sky and remained visible for two days, the fire continuing to burn and the smoke to rise. After the explosion of an oil tank flames shot up to a height of 3,000 feet, and the heat radiated from them was felt at a distance of a mile and three-quarters, where it was more noticeable than close to the fire.—Youth's Companion.

WORE HIS CLOTHES

Young Woman Called on Prisoner and Exchanged Clothes.

BUNCOED THE JAIL OFFICIALS

After a While the Jailor Found Out He Had a Woman in the Cell—She Planned the Escape and Is Exempt Under the Law.

Bassett, Neb., Oct. 12.—A story that would form a first rate plot to a novel is that of Miss Josie Mayher of Springview, Neb., who recently disappeared. Miss Mayher has long had an admirer named Bert Martin. Martin was sentenced to prison recently for numerous crimes. A few weeks after Martin's imprisonment Miss Mayher, who is Martin's first cousin, left home and has not been seen since. The jail officials discovered a few days ago that the occupants of cell 7,889 is a woman, and the woman Miss Mayher.

Miss Mayher visited Martin in his cell several times, and being treated as the guest of the employes of the prison, it was very easy for Miss Mayher to exchange apparel with Martin and so allow him to escape.

Miss Mayher cannot be punished, as under the Nebraska law a blood cousin cannot be held liable for shielding a prisoner or conniving at his escape. Miss Mayher will probably be released. Martin is still at large.

The Duke Was Pleased.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—Thousands of the loyal Canadians joined in the reception to the Duke of York yesterday. The events of the day began with a grand review of 10,000 troops, which was highly commended by English army experts present. The day, though very gloomy in the morning, cleared during the military evolutions, and before the great crowd of many thousand spectators had left the grounds the weather was all that could be desired. Both infantry and cavalry evolutions proved features with the spectators and critics, and the duke seemed fairly pleased with the work of the colonial troops.

Will Build a Model City.

New York, Oct. 12.—Hon. John DeWitt Warner, Charles C, Haight, Charles R. Lamb and William S. Crandall of New York and Albert Kelsey of Philadelphia will visit St. Louis within the next ten days for the purpose of laying before the commissioners of the St. Louis purchase committee the details for a model city to be created in the confines of the exposition, worked out by the Municipal Art society of New York, and other kindred organizations. The committee was appointed at a conference of these organizations held at the Arts National hall last night.

Women Strikers Fight.

New York, Oct. 12.—A number of women and girls employed by the Cooper Wrapper Co., Williamsburg, Brooklyn, where a strike is in progress, were attacked on their way to work yesterday and many of them were badly hurt. A dozen policemen who had been detailed to keep order near the wrapper company's factory, had hard work to quell the disturbance, and it was necessary to use their clubs to restore order. Roscoe Solomon, said to be the leader of the attacking party, was arrested.

Railroad Will Abolish Passes.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Railway passes will not be abolished Dec. 31 next. The plan to wipe them out of existence was killed at a meeting here today of the executive officials of western roads. They will meet again Nov. 5. The plan to abolish passes, in all probability, will be resurrected about a year hence, as E. H. Harriman and other railway magnates are firmly embued with the idea that the officers and employes of the railroad and members of their families should pay regular rates when they travel, the same as others.

GREAT DAYS
...AT THE...
PAN-AMERICAN

The postponement of some of the special days has crowded many great events into the month of October. Toronto day opened the month with many thousand visitors from Canada on the 3d. Pennsylvania day, on Oct. 4, with Governor William A. Stone, his staff and several regiments of the national guard, made a splendid showing. New York day comes Oct. 9, following Brooklyn day. These two days will be the occasion for reunions of people west and east, as New Yorkers are found all over the Union.

The Citizens' Committee of Brooklyn has been hard at work for several months preparing for Oct. 8, and the programme which has been arranged promises a rare treat for those who are fortunate enough to gain admission to the Temple of Music during the time of its presentation. The special oration of the day will be delivered by the Hon. St. Clair McKelway, editor of the Brooklyn Eagle. The Hon. Ludwig Nissen will preside at the gathering, and other addresses will be delivered by Mayor Diehl of Buffalo, William C. Bryant, chairman of the Brooklyn Citizens' Committee, and Hon. W. I. Buchanan, director general of the Exposition. The music incidental to the occasion will be furnished by the Innes band of New York city. Elaborate fireworks have been planned for the evening.

On New York day Governor Odell will be escorted to the Temple of Music by sixteen out of town organizations in addition to the three located in Buffalo. Over 3,000 men will be in line. composing one of the largest and most imposing parades which has ever taken place in times of peace. All branches of service will be represented—infantry, cavalry, artillery, naval and signal. An elaborate programme has been arranged for the Temple of Music and a reception in the New York State building with magnificent fireworks in the evening.

Illinois day, on Oct. 7, is to be one of the great days of the Exposition. While the death of President McKinley made it necessary to postpone the day from Sept. 16, Governor Yates and the State commission have determined that the day shall be an event of great importance at the Exposition. Thousands of Illinois people are coming. The great middle west, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, with Michigan, have sent great crowds already to the Pan-American, and there is every indication that the attendance from that section will be greater than ever during the month of October.

Buffalo will have a great day on Oct. 19. At the Chicago fair Chicago day was the crowning event of the Exposition. So Buffalo people are laboring hard to make Buffalo day the climax in point of attendance.

Many nearby cities will have special days in October, notably Erie, Pa., on Oct. 10 and Dunkirk, N. Y., on Oct. 10. The list is constantly being added to. National Grange day, Oct. 10, will bring Patrons of Husbandry from every part of the nation. Atlantic City people and New Jersey people will visit the Exposition on Oct. 11, Atlantic City day.

Alaska day, on the 28th, will bring into prominence the products and people of that great golden land of the midnight sun, ice, snow and wealth. Every day from Oct. 1 to the 31st will be replete with interest, from Carnival week, which opens the month with the gorgeous floats of King Rex and the replica of Mardi Gras pageantry, to the magnificent pyrotechnic display on the night of the last day of the month.

No exposition ever held in the United States so appealed to the American public as has the Pan-American Exposition in its architectural beauty and symmetry, its gorgeous flowers, now in the fine beauty of fall bloom; its gardens and fountains and its special amusements, music and carnival features. "No person," said Secretary of Agriculture Wilson during a visit on Sept. 10, "should miss seeing the Exposition. It is magnificent beyond compare." Never again will the world see such an illumination. Not every city has the wonderful electric plant driven by Niagara Falls, and without some such plant it will be impossible to reproduce the solemn grandeur, the glorious beauty, the impressive radiance of this City of Light.

There are yet a few more weeks in which to see this vision with all its attendant beauties.

Conventions at Buffalo.

October will be a great convention month at Buffalo. Thousands of members of organizations will take this opportunity of visiting the Exposition at that time. Beginning with the International Cremation congress from Oct. 1 to 3, the month closes with the American Langshan club on Oct. 26.

National Grange Day.

Thursday, Oct. 10, will be National Grange day at the Pan-American Exposition. At a meeting in the city of Washington held in 1900 the National Grangers adopted resolutions setting aside this day, and a great assemblage of Patrons of Husbandry and farmers generally is expected.

OCTOBER FLOWERS.

There Is a Beautiful Display of Them at the Pan-American—The Gardens of the City of Light Are One of Its Most Attractive Features. Artistic Scenes Which the Lover of Beauty Should Not Fail to See.

The Pan-American is one of the greatest flower shows that ever was, but there are so many other things in which it is great that the rarity and beauty of its floral features are perhaps apt to be overlooked. If people would take more time to allow the artistic and beautiful features of the Exposition to impress their senses and permeate their inmost being instead of racing from one part of the grounds to another, trying to see every exhibit and every show on the Midway, they would go home feeling greater benefit from their stay in the Rainbow City.

The Pan-American is full of gardens which tempt the visitor to rest awhile and drink in the beauties of nature. It may seem surprising that in the month of October there are flowers worth looking at, but such is the fact. The rains of the past few weeks have kept the landscape as fresh and beautiful as in May and June, and as one flower goes out of the scene another takes its place. On opening day the hyacinths filled the air with their dainty fragrance, in June tulips lifted their proud heads, later in the month of brides and sweet girl graduates came roses, with their rich perfume, and as the summer passed the other flowers in their season sprang up as if by magic to take the place of those which had done their blossoming and served their turn in the entertainment of the visitors to the City of Light. And now one sees the tall canna, the gay geranium and such old fashioned flowers as grandmother's garden had—the phlox, the pink, the begonia, the petunia and other posies which are no less beautiful because they do not happen to be novel.

In entering the grounds by the Elmwood gate visitors pass two tall and curious looking trees, which perhaps few in their anxiety to reach the heart of the Exposition stop to notice. If they realized that they were century plants just budding, a thing which, as all know, century plants only do once in a long, long time, they would doubtless stop and look with open mouths and wondering gaze. It is a sight which one cannot see very often anywhere else. One of these century plants is nearly forty feet in height.

The Rose Gardens around the Woman's building, having for their background the outlines of the Spanish renaissance buildings about the main court and the Electric Tower looming up at its north end, with the Mirror Lakes and the Triumphal Bridge and the groups of statuary abounding, form a scene whose artistic aspect must appeal to even the least æsthetic visitor. The cannas are very effective decorative plants, with their tall leaves in green and red and brown. A rich canna one sees here is named Governor Roosevelt. It would seem appropriate now to change its name to President Roosevelt.

On the opposite side of the Triumphal Bridge is the Wooded Island, and here one roams amid old fashioned flowers, growing as though they had sprung up there all by themselves without any assistance from the landscape gardener and his corps of assistants. But of course that is not the case. The studied carelessness of the gardening of this island is only one of the pretty deceits employed to produce the impression that it is all the work of Mother Nature herself.

Have you seen the fairylike effects in the garden about the Fountain of Abundance at night? It is one of the new things. This small garden is very beautiful by day, and at night electric lights of different colors have been hidden among the flowers and planks, so that one sees the surface of the ground dotted with these little spots of light, bringing out the beauty of the flowers, and all forming a scene impossible to describe, but very charming indeed to witness. It is quite a pretty surprise even to old Pan-American visitors.

Did you ever notice in crossing the Court of Lilies, south of the Machinery building, a heavy vapor arising from the basin in the center of that court? Sometimes it has so much the appearance of smoke that people think something must be afire in the garden, but it is only the steam or vapor created by the heating of the water in that basin for the benefit of the tropical lilies which grow therein. These lilies, which are known as the Victoria Regia, have enormous leaves, some of them three feet in diameter.

Other gardens where there are flowers in bloom during this month of October are those in front of the United States Government building and the Horticulture group, where the gay geraniums and sweet petunias contrast their colors with the green flags growing in the basin and with the white statuary disposed along their slopes.

There was a floral fete at the Exposition during the first week of October, and this in its way, of course, was an affair of much beauty and magnificence; but, as a matter of fact, there have been floral fetes at the Pan-American since opening day.

The Water [illegible]

The great carnivorous water beetle, the dytiscus, after catching and eating other creatures all day, with two minute intervals to come up, poke the tips of its wings out of the water and jam some air against its spiracles before descending once more to its subaqueous hunting grounds, will rise by night from the surface of the Thames, lift again those horny wing cases, unfold a broad and beautiful pair of gauzy wings and whirl off on a visit of love and adventure to some distant pond, on to which it descends like a bullet from the air above.

When people are sitting in a greenhouse at night with no lamp lighted, talking or smoking, they sometimes hear a smash as if a pebble had been dropped on the glass from above. It is a dysticus beetle whose compound eyes have mistaken the shine of the glass in the moonlight for the gleam of a pond.

At night some of the whirligig beetles, the shiny beanlike creatures seen whirling in incessant circles in corners by the bank, make a quite audible and almost musical sound upon the water.—Spectator.

She Started Early.

A martinet of a sergeant deciding to get married, some of his men decided that when the happy event came off it would be a fitting occasion to pay back with interest old scores, especially as their friends decided to keep up the time honored custom of throwing rice and old shoes at the happy couple.

On the eventful day when the happy pair emerged from their quarters they were greeted with a perfect shower of rice and old shoes, but one Tommy had slily substituted a big pair of regulation Bluchers, which he threw with such unerring aim that the missile caught the sergeant just above the eye, inflicting a nasty cut.

Directly the ceremony was over the sergeant immediately went to the hospital to have the wound dressed. The doctor, after examining the swollen and discolored optic, inquired how it was done.

"Well, sir," replied the sergeant, "I got married today, and"—

But was cut short by the doctor (a married man) exclaiming:

"Oh, I see! That explains it; but, by Jove, she's started early!"—London Answers.

A Joke on a Professor.

Among some intensely amusing college scrapes told by "A Graduate" in The Ladies' Home Journal is the story of a certain professor not much liked by his pupils who was to be married. The lady lived in Cleveland. And the students that loved (?) him were not of course invited. But they determined that in some way he should hear from them. And he did. On the day appointed the professor took the train at 10 a. m., due to arrive at Cleveland at 12:30 p. m. About 11 o'clock Jim Townsend rushed to the telegraph office and sent off this dispatch:

"Chief of Police, Cleveland: Man coming on train No. 6, tall, well dressed, frock coat, silk hat, side whiskers. Escaped lunatic. Hold. Shrewd, therefore beware. Strange case. Will say name Finalli. Mistake. Thinks he is professor in a college. Delusion. Escort to home of friends at No. —— Euclid avenue."

This message reached its destination long before train No. 6 reached Cleveland, so that when Professor Finalli alighted it was to walk straight into the custody of three detectives. They would listen to no words of reason, but escorted him out to the house on Euclid avenue, the home of his intended bride.

The Earth's Bendings.

Little bendings are in progress all the time the world over. The "immovable" hills are bowing and scraping to each other constantly. Every evening, as the dew settles in the valleys between them, they nod to one another. So likewise do the mountains, even to a greater extent. Gravity is tugging all the time.

And in London, too, where earthquake sensations are practically unknown, the earth bends daily, and the buildings, like the hills and the mountains, nod to their friends opposite when the morning traffic begins. On Sunday usually their manners take a rest excepting in such places as Petticoat lane, where business flourishes in as lively a fashion as in Paris.

Heine said that even the trees made obeisance to Napoleon I when he entered Berlin. This was imaginative, yet truthful, for the weight of the crowd along Unter den Linden made a tilting sufficient for Professor Milne's pendulums to have recorded distinctly. One might say the crust of the earth acts like a steel spring, it bends so easily.—Everybody's Magazine.

How to Learn to Like Pictures.

The following suggestions, if you please, are not from an artist nor even from a connoisseur, the writer being nothing more than an ordinary picture lover. In general the principle to be followed is to get as much in an atmosphere of pictures as possible. Always go to the museums when you are traveling, and if you live near enough make occasional picture visits to Boston, Chicago or New York. Do not make the mistake of staying too long in a gallery. You only tire yourself. Half an hour is quite long enough. But do not endeavor to look at every picture in the gallery in that time. Look long at a few good ones and let those you look at be those you like or at least those which you prefer above the others. Also ask yourself why you prefer them. Always get a catalogue. Sometimes the pictures are not marked, and you as a student want always to know the painter of your picture.—Frederic M. Smith in Woman's Home Companion.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at C. A. Wright's.

It is not the drop in the wages that hurts, but the drop that is taken after the wages.

The Hawaiian woman's club at Honolula debated the question: "Is it better to take Rocky Mountain Tea hot or cold?" Either way it magnifies your pleasure. J. J. Orr.

Opportunities make brief calls, and if you are out they seldom return.

Stepped Into Live Coals.

"When a child I burned my foot frightfully," writes W. H. Eads, of Jonesville, Va., "which caused horrible leg sores for 30 years, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured me after everything else failed." Infallible for Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Sores, Bruises and Piles. Sold by C. A. Wright.

A scrub race—Washerwomen.

J. Odgers of Frostburg, Md., writes "I had a very bad attack of kidney complaint and tried Foley's Kidney Cure which gave me immediate relief and was perfectly cured after taking two bottles. Be sure you take Foley's. J. J Orr.

The Gospel has not lost its effect, but much of the so-called "effect" has lost the Gospel.

After exposure or when you feel a cold coming on take a dose of Foley's Honey and Tar. It never fails to stop a cold if taken in time. J. J. Orr.

When a man jumps at a conclusion he often alights on confusion.

S. A. Ingalls, Crown Point, N. Y., writes: "My wife suffered from kidney trouble for years. She was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure and in less than a week after she began using it she was greatly improved and three bottles cured her." J. J. Orr.

Curiosities of the Cacao Tree.

The cultivation of cacao, says a writer in The Scientific American, is an inviting agricultural pursuit in Trinidad and parts of Venezuela. The cacao tree cannot withstand strong sunshine, and the young plants have to be shaded by banana or plantain trees and later, when they attain their growth, by tall trees known as "immortelles," or the "mother of the cacao." These make a kind of canopy over the entire plantation. The fruit of the cacao tree is a pod resembling a cucumber and growing on the trunk or large branches, where it "looks as though it were artificially attached." The seeds are like large, thick lima beans imbedded in pulp. These form the cacao beans of commerce. The processes of curing and drying require much attention.

Handy Things to Carry.

Few people carry pocket scissors of the folding sort. Those that do never part with them. Convenient for manicure use, to cut a clipping from a paper at a moment's notice, a string, etc., they answer almost every purpose of the pocketknife and are much more convenient to handle. Give a person accustomed to their use a knife and the pocket scissors, and he will part with the former first.—Hardware.

So They Do, Some of Them.

The teacher had been giving a class of youngsters some ideas of adages and how to make them, and to test her training she put a few questions:

"Birds of a feather—do what?"

"Lay eggs," piped a small boy before anybody else had a chance to speak.

Unappreciative.

"You find spring water a very great advantage in dairying, I presume?"

"Oh, I don't know," said the milkman. "The average person buying milk doesn't know the difference between spring water and any other kind."—Detroit Journal.

ROUND ABOUT US.

The Tecumseh News says: "Miss Lillian Pomeroy, of Hudson, is the Century Post Company's new typewriter." She is one of Hudson's brightest young ladies, and many friends here are interested in her welfare.—Hudson Post

Who in the world can they mean? Geo. Feild is no longer with the News, and Hawkins cannot even get along with the girls in the Rebeckah lodge.

Gil. Sewald this week sailed for Cuba, where he will work in the interests of the Morgan-Wright tire manufacturers, with which house he has been connected for several years. He is one of their trusted representatives, and is often given preferred work.—Hudson Post.

"Gil." is an alright man for selling tires if he can get along with the Cuban girls. If not, better send him back to Hudson at once.

A "Baby Social" will be held at Mrs. A. B. McLachlin's, Friday evening, Oct. 18 for the benefit of the Christian Endeavor. Each person is requested to bring his or her own baby picture. A cordial invitation is extended to all.—Deerfield Times.

Hard luck that everyone is required to bring their own baby's picture. A matter of Christian Endeavor would say bring "any old" baby's picture.

The ladies of the Tecumseh Research Circle, met last week at the home of Mrs. Geo. Tiffany, and spent the evening in "progressive anagrams" What,s an anagram? Oh, just a change. Frinstance you say, "change Toga to an animal," and get "goat." But when they requested that from the word Beal, they give a bible name, and some one wrote "Able" they allowed it was O K in spirit but not in the letter.—Adrian Press.

Hudson will have a new band with the following membership: Earl Scranton, Ernest Baldwin, Vern Kelley, Heber Rockwell, Hartley Porter, Leland Beal, Leland Phelps, Oscar Schuman, Claude Mott, Gage Wyckoff, Rex Whitney, George Daniels, Will Montgomery, Earl Thurber, Harry Boies, Marion Abbey, Clarence Owen. But what has become of Ed. Frensdorf and Grant Fellows. A Hudson band without at least one of these chaps would amount to nothing.

It is generally supposed that printers wait longer than any other class for their pay; but an incident happened here recently which goes to show that doctors are a close second.

Recently Thomas Cliff of Carson City Mich., rode from Brooklyn, where he is visiting in Palmyra, and from thence came to this village in search of Dr. Peters, who came up to see him once, while he was living in Brooklyn 43 years ago. Cliff was then a poor man and unable to pay; he afterward removed to Montcalm county, only recently while here on a visit did it occur to him to settle that doctor's bill. He was directed to A. D. Ellis to whom he paid $5 to forward to the old doctor in Cleveland.—Blissfield Advance.

Dr. Peters used to live in Tecumseh and no doubt has some old accounts here that should be paid.

Early Monday morning a streamer was discovered attached to the pole on top of the new hotel, and painted "The Clintonian," the name the hotel will be known by in the future.

Mr. Clark had kept the matter a secret, not even letting Mr. Gilmore, the new landlord, know what it was to be called until that morning, when he was handed the banner. Even the register did not arrive till the last minute, so Mr. Clark had the satisfaction of keeping the name a secret till the morning the house was opened for business.

Landlord Gilmore had no special opening, but says he did a good business the first day and that it is steadily improving. Later on, we understand, he will give a party. The hall over the new store goes with the hotel, and we are informed that it is expected several dancing parties will be held there during the coming winter.

F. D. Lancaster has opened a livery in the rear of the hotel and makes all trains for the management.—Clinton Local.

Lake Shore Railway Makes Big Reduction in Rates to Buffalo and Return.

These tickets will be good five days after date for return.

"CUB" BERDAN DIED

At Detroit last Friday

MISS FANNIE WHITNEY

Daughter of the Late Abel Whitney of Adrian his Wife.

Cub Berdan, of Detroit, is dead. For the last few years he has been an invalid and unable to transact any kind of business. He was well known in Tecumseh, having played violin here years and years ago. In fact, O. F. Berdan was a native of this Neck-o-the-woods, and I think was born at Lake Ridge. He was an uncle of Will Whiting, of Tecumseh, and a brother of Mrs. John C. Mills.

His wife, who survives him, was Miss Fanny Whitney, daughter of the late Abel Whitney, of Adrian. He will be best remembered in Tecumseh as an associate of W. W. Fowle, of Detroit, who conducted a dancing school here years ago. Both men became well off. Berdan dies well to do and Fowle is rich, owing to a large amount of real estate in Detroit and is now a leading city official, in fact has been connected with the city for years.

A GRAND VISIT

Of Clinton lodge No. 6140

MODERN WOODMEN

To Tecumseh Lodge. Three Members Initiated and a Bounteous Supper Served.

The Modern Woodmen people have a very nice lodge in Tecumseh. The members of this lodge are very friendly with their brothers in Clinton. Last night a large number of the fraternity visited Tecumseh and got our Tecumseh boys to assist them in the initiation of three men. The two lodges had such a good time and rode the goat so hard that they could not even tell the names of the three men initiated.

Among the lodge members present from Clinton were: Dr. J. L. Tuttle, Jr., Lenean Bailey, James Riley, Joe Alexander, Herman Halladay, Benj. Crane, A. B. Ward, Geo. Wilson, Wm. Stevenson, B. H. McCracken, M. Ward, Arthur Ogden, I. Sprowl, James McCook, Thos. Kirk, Griffin brothers, Jno. Hulett, A Gohen, E. Shaffer, W. L. Fink, Will Graves, L. W. Hunter, Otis Cole, O. Smith, F. L. Rogers, Sam Alexander, I. L. Hause, D. Gragg, D. Griffin.

After the ceremonies a nice banquet was served and after dinner speeches were made by Dr. J. L. Tuttle, Jr., Jas. Riley, Herman Halladay, Geo. Wilson, and Wm. Stevenson.

CLUB NOTES.

The clubs of the state are just now debating the eligibility of colored women to membership. The question is to come up at the meeting of the State Federation and many of the clubs are now settling it for themselves in order to instruct their delegates how to vote upon the question at the state meeting next week.

The Euterpean Fraternity is a new secret society whose object is the advancement of Poetry, Music and Art. The society is divided into three chapters which meet once a week at the home of some member. Once a month a meeting of all chapters is called. A supervising committee consisting of Mrs. John Orr, Mrs. Frost and Mrs. Chas. Kemp arrange the program and meetings for the season. This evening the chapter of elder members meet with Mrs. Orr for study. Friday evening the Juniors hold a meeting for initiations at he home of Mrs. Lyman on Pottawatamie street.

The Monday club held its first regular meeting at the Universalist church yesterday afternoon. With entire new officers and a full membership, the club begins its eighth year of existence under a very promising prospect for a successful winter. Program for next Monday October 21 as follows:

Wm. Pitt, "The Great Commoner"—Mrs. Heesen.

Charles Fox, "The Trial of Hastings"—Mrs. McCann.

Nollekins, "His Bust of Fox in National Gallery"—Miss Phelps.

Horace Walpole—Mrs. Rice.

John Paul Jones—Miss Ida Rector.

James Watt, "Invention of Steam Engines,—Mrs. Stacy.

Special train for "The Bostonians" at Adrian.

Lovers of music who enjoy high class presentations of comic opera by the greatest lyric organizations in America, will be delighted to learn that the long looked for engagement of the Bostonians is announced at the Croswell, Adrian, for Friday night of this week.

This great comedy needs no second introduction to theatre-goers; it is preeminent in the lyric field and presents a repertoire of successful operas on a scale of splendor and completeness not equaled by any other comic opera company. The organization numbers seventy people, including a large chorus of fresh young voices and a trained orchestra of ten selected musicians. For this engagement it has been arranged to give that sparkling comic opera "The Serenade" by Victor Herbert and Harry B. Smith and the management will postively run a special train from Tecumseh, leaving at six o'clock Friday and returning after the opera. Fare 40 cents round trip. Opera tickets may be secured of John J. Orr Wednesday.

Buffalo and Return $4.35 over Lake Shore Railway.

On each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday in October, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Ry. will sell Pan-American Excursion tickets from Tecumseh at above low rate. Equally low rates will be made from all Lake Shore stations. Tickets good five days after date for return. For particulars consult ticket agents, or write A. J. Smith, G. P. & T. A., Cleveland, O.

Value of Diamonds.

As to the value of diamonds, perfectly white stones or decided tints of red, rose, green or blue are most highly prized. Fine cinnamon and salmon or brown, black or yellow stones also are esteemed. If flawless and without tint of any kind, they are termed first water. If they possess a steely blue color, at times almost opalescent, they are called blue white. Such are usually Brazilian stones. Exceptionally perfect stones are termed gems, and for such there is no fixed value, the price depending on the purity and the brilliancy of the stone. The term first water varies in meaning, according to the class of goods carried by the dealer using it.

It is impossible to estimate the value of a diamond by its weight. Color, brilliancy, cut and general perfection of the stone all are to be taken into account. Of two stones, both flawless and weighing ten carats, one may be worth $600 and the other $12,000. Exceptional stones often bring special prices. Off color or imperfect stones sell at an average price per carat regardless of size.

How Fortress Monroe Was Built.

The manner of constructing the fort at Old Point Comfort is interesting and throws some light on customs and practices then in vogue. The work was almost wholly done by slaves who were brought to the place by their masters and leased to the engineers in charge. The slave owner received 50 cents a day for each slave, and the government furnished each "laborer," as the slave was called, with two suits of working clothes, a pair or two of shoes, rations, quarters and occasionally a little tobacco. The "laborers" worked with very little clothes and generally without shoes. They lived in barracks and were subject to a kind of military discipline. The owners were regular in coming in to collect the hire for their slaves, from which we may infer that the "constituents" of those days knew how to appreciate a good thing to a degree worthy of the present generation.—Leslie's Weekly.

Care In Making Axes.

An ax is subject to rigid tests before it is pronounced perfect. The steel must be of the required temper, the weight of all axes of the same size must be uniform, all must be ground alike and in various other ways conform to an established standard. The inspector who tests the quality of the steel does so by hammering the blade and striking the edge to ascertain whether it be too brittle or not. An ax that breaks during the test is thrown aside to be made over. Before the material of an ax is in the proper shape it has been heated five times, including the tempering process, and the ax when completed has passed through the hands of about 40 workmen, each of whom has done something toward perfecting it. After passing inspection the axes go to the grinding department and from that to the polishers, who finish them upon emery wheels.

KNOWING HOW PAYS.

The Moral of this old, old Anecdote Will save a Heap of Trouble And a Pile of Money.

Something has gone wrong with some simple part of a stationary engine and the stoker could not fix it. After spending a day or two on it, he was forced to ask the aid of a more competent workman. He failed also, and someone suggested the employment of a local celebrity, a sort of tinker at any mechanical job. There is generally one in every locality. He gave two or three raps with his hammer and touched up a rod or two, when the pounding or whatever ailed the machine, ceased. When asked to make out his bill, it read as follows:

Fixing engine............	$ .50
Knowing how............	10.00

This clearly demonstrates that it pays to know how. Engineer J. J. Jeffries of the Royal Cycle Works at Marshall Mich., residing in that city at No. 141 S. Marshall street tells in the following how he got rid of a troublesome companion, he says:

"My kidneys troubled me more or less for years and finally became so bad that I was compelled to give up locomotive engineering on account of the jarring of the train and seek employment as a stationary engineer. When the attacks of kidney complaint occurred I could not rest or lie comfortably in any position and often in the mornings after a restless night I was more tired and worn out than when I went to bed. When the attacks were at their height I was unable to stoop or lift anything and despite the use of every remedy that came to my notice, preparations recommended to me by my acquaintances, numerous plasters of all kinds worn day and night, I was unsuccessful in procuring anything to help me until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. The first box helped me. I steadily improved while taking the second and I stopped the treatment when I had finished the third, as I considered there was no more necessity for continuing the remedy.

Dyspepsia—bane of human existence. Burdock Blood Bitters cures it, promptly, permanently. Regulates and tones the stomach.

Crude Petroleum.

From crude petroleum are made kerosene, gasoline, naphtha, paraffin and vaseline. A still heavier oil, left as a residue, is used for axle grease, and the carbon is turned into sticks for electric lights. The sulphuric acid which is used for purifying the products of petroleum is recovered and turned into fertilizer for farms where there is too much phosphate rock, which is thus dissolved.

How to Catch the Polar Bear.

I listened attentively the other night to a gentleman who gave me a great deal of valuable information concerning these interesting regions. He knew I was a tenderfoot and a newspaper reporter and felt at liberty, therefore, to talk freely, so I got a lot of yarns about polar bears and walruses and other creatures, large and small, which are not related in natural histories. I believe it was one of the advisers of "Alice In Wonderland" who suggested that the best way to catch a rabbit is to get behind a stump and make a noise like a carrot, and I learned with great satisfaction that the easiest way to catch a polar bear is to hide behind an iceberg and make a noise like the aurora borealis. Polar bears are very tame and, like newspaper reporters and some other people, are gifted with inquiring minds. When a stranger comes out on the ice, they greet him cordially and show a justifiable curiosity as to his business and intentions, which causes them to fall an easy prey to the parlor rug trust.—Norway Letter in Chicago Herald.

To Cure Round Shoulders.

In the case of round shoulders the muscles of the back are likely to stiffen from disuse. A special exercise to get them into a limber condition seems to be necessary. Stretch out and down with the arms until they nearly touch the floor, bending back in like manner. To successfully accomplish the latter sit on a stool before an upright piano or heavy desk, plant your knees firmly against the furniture until you have a good support, then slowly bend backward with your hand pointed over your head. At first you think you will surely crack in half, so stiff are the muscles, but astonishingly soon comes the pliability, and as it is impossible to fall your progress is easy and rapid. This exercise if persisted in will straighten out a curved spine, but it must be done gently and with patience, because the tendons in the back are delicate and must not be coerced.

A Report from Supt. J. C. Gluck Reform School, Pruntytown, W. Va. Oct. 18th, 1900, "After trying all other advertised cough medicines we have decided to use Foley's Honey and Tar exclusively in the West Virginia Reform School. I find it the most effective, and absolutely harmless. J. J. Orr.

According to the London Vanity Fair, a celebrated surgeon met a young officer in Piccadilly one day and greeted him with surprise. "Well, I am pleased to see you! I am surprised! Do you know I have a portion of your brain in a jar at home?"

An Effort to Speak.

Dogs in a native or wild state never bark. They simply whine, howl and growl. The noise which we call barking is found only among those that are domesticated. Columbus found that to be the case with the dogs he first brought to America and left at large, for on his return he tells us that they had lost their propensity to bark. Scientific men say that barking is really an effort on the part of the dog to speak.

HE MEANT WELL.

An Obliging Man Who Made an Embarrassing Mistake.

A young editor took an apartment on South Twelfth street. The landlady said frankly to him: "I will tell you, sir, that my husband is a worthless fellow. I have to support him, and he sometimes comes home very late, drunk. There is no other objection to my house." The editor said this was no matter and thought no more of it until a few nights later, when a great uproar in the street awoke him. He looked out of the window and saw a man lying on the doorstep shouting ribald things. "The husband," thought the editor. "I'll go down and let him in."

He ran forth in his pyjamas, grabbed the husband by the neck and, jerking him into the hallway, proceeded to drag him up stairs. But the man made strong objections to this treatment. He howled oaths and abuse, kicked, struggled, even pulled out a handful of the young editor's hair, but this was in vain, for the youth is strong and of a determined mind, and he was bound that he would do his landlady a good turn.

He had got perhaps three parts of the way up stairs with his burden when two heads were poked in the dim light over the balustrade, and the landlady's voice said, "Why, Mr. Blank, what are you doing?"

The editor panted as he took a fresh hold and at the same time ducked a sharp uppercut: "I'm bringing your husband up, ma'am. He's drunk again, I'm sorry to say."

From the other head on the landing these words then issued in a deep bass voice: "What do you mean, young feller, by 'drunk again?' I'm this lady's husband. That man doesn't belong here."

Instantly realizing his mistake, the editor dumped his charge out into the street again. Then he returned and apologized lamely to the rightful husband for his strange words.—Philadelphia Record.

How "The Autocrat" Popped.

It was on the Common that we were walking. The mall, or boulevard, of our Common, you know, has various branches leading from it in different directions. One of these runs down from opposite Joy street southward across the whole length of the Common to Boylston street. We called it the long path and were fond of it.

I felt very weak indeed, though of a tolerably robust habit, as we came opposite the head of this path on that morning. I think I tried to speak twice without making myself distinctly audible.

At last I got out the question, "Will you take the long path with me?" "Certainly," said the schoolmistress; "with much pleasure." "Think," I said, "before you answer. If you take the long path with me now, I shall interpret it that we are to part no more." The schoolmistress stepped back, with a sudden movement, as if an arrow had struck her.

One of the granite blocks used as seats was hard by—the one you may still see close by the gingko tree. "Pray, sit down," I said. "No, no," she answered softly. "I will walk the long path with you."

The old gentleman who sits opposite met us walking arm in arm about the middle of the long path and said very charmingly, "Good morning, my dears."—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Turning the Tables.

"Turning the tables," in the sense of bringing a countercharge against an accuser, has a classic origin. In the days of Augustus Imperator a regular craze seized the men of Rome to compete with one another for the possession of the costliest specimens of a certain description of table made for the most part of Mauritana wood inlaid with ivory—"mensarum insania," or table mania, as Pliny called it. They were sold at most extravagant prices. When the men accused the ladies of sumptuary extravagance, the latter naturally retorted by reference to the money squandered by their lords on these tables and so "turned the tables on them" by throwing them, metaphorically in their teeth.

MISTAKES TO AVOID.

An English paper gives what it terms "thirteen mistakes of life:"

It is a great mistake to set up our own standard of right and wrong and judge people accordingly.

To measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.

To look for perfection in our own actions.

To worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied.

Not to yield in immaterial matters.

Not to alleviate all that needs alleviation as far as lies in our power.

Not to make allowances for the infirmities of others.

To consider everything impossible that we cannot perform.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

To expect to be able to understand everything.

The Evolution of Warships.

A man need not be a scholar to be an inventor. One of the most successful aeronauts of old times who had made a study of aerial currents and the management of balloons once delivered an address in which he referred to "the anaconda" as "the largest bird that ever flew," and he also remarked that "the mental faculties of a man's mind is so constructed as to bring things down to a pin's point." He also referred to the currents of air as stretchums, meaning strata, and yet he was one of the foremost balloonists of his time.

He was an inventor also of many useful things and was the first man in the country to suggest an ironclad man-of-war with slanting sides. He built a miniature vessel on this plan of sheet iron, placing it in the water and fired musket balls at it at short range. Every ball glanced off. The Merrimac was built on a similar plan, and from that humble beginning the evolution or revolution in naval architecture took its start.—Baltimore Sun.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

NEWSBOYS' CHARITY.

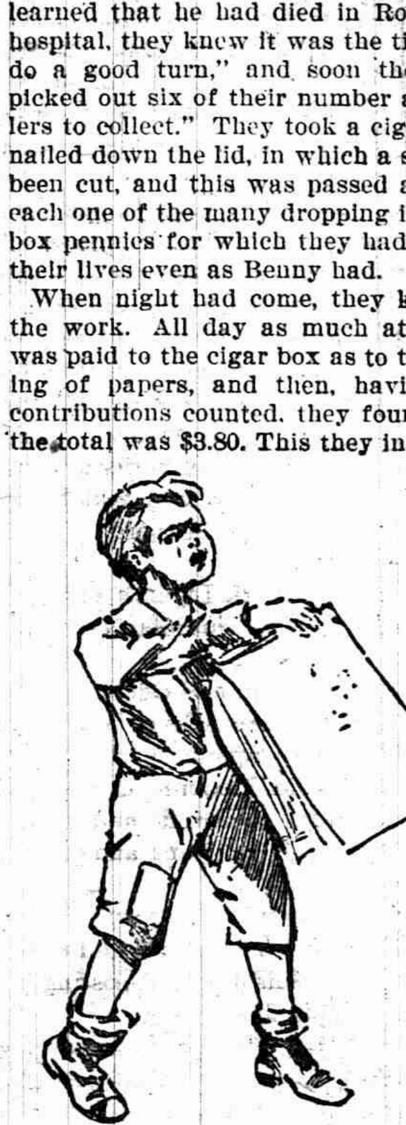
They "Chip In" to Aid the Mother of Benny, Who Was Killed by a Car.

Wet to the skin, a group of boys trooped into The Herald office. They didn't mind the drenching rain, for they are used to it; moreover, their mission was one which no storm might hinder.

They were the newsboys of Herald square, the friends of little Benny Levine, whose life was cut short by a Broadway car as he ran to a customer who wanted a paper. They knew of the woe of Benny's mother; they were aware that she could ill afford to bear the expenses of his funeral. With a generous impulse they had decided to give of their little that she might be enabled to keep her home, a difficult task now that she has been deprived of her mainstay. Hard as is their life, accustomed more to hard knocks than to caresses, their sturdy young hearts throbbed with kindness. Their undertaking was an object lesson to their elders.

Hardly had kindly hands lifted the wounded boy into the ambulance before his shocked companions, having heard him gasp the one word, "Mamma," determined they must do something for Mrs. Levine. When they learned that he had died in Roosevelt hospital, they knew it was the time "to do a good turn," and soon they had picked out six of their number as "fellers to collect." They took a cigar box, nailed down the lid, in which a slit had been cut, and this was passed around, each one of the many dropping into the box pennies for which they had risked their lives even as Benny had.

When night had come, they kept up the work. All day as much attention was paid to the cigar box as to the selling of papers, and then, having the contributions counted, they found that the total was $3.80. This they intrusted to The Herald, that they might be assured it would safely get to Mrs. Levine.



A HERALD SQUARE NEWSBOY.

Never did the lads work as they did the following morning. Their enthusiasm was unbounded, for they felt that the bigger their sales the more they could afford to contribute to the fund. With noon their workday ended, and the committee on finance, figuring up the pennies which had found their way into the box, had 75 cents more to swell the little fund. So when they walked into The Herald office all unmindful of their dripping clothing they were happy as Louis Schwartz, their leader, handed over three shining silver quarters.

"We'll keep it up," said Louis, "till we see that poor Benny's had his rights. We are going to send a letter to President Vreeland of the railroad company asking him to see that the company treats Benny's mother square. She can't do nothing now, for she is so afraid that she won't let Benny's brother Nathan sell any more papers."

Three of Benny's nine years had been spent selling papers in Herald square. He was a manly little fellow, and his chief care was to keep his younger brother out of harm's way. He was not at all quarrelsome, and many of the lads who were his keenest rivals in selling papers are foremost in collecting the fund for his mother.—New York Herald.

The Boy King.

On May 17 next Alfonso XIII will attain his majority, which in Spain is 16 years, and his mother, Maria Christina, will surrender to him the authority that she has exercised during his boyhood.

A recent picture of Alfonso shows a delicate, serious and intelligent face. It suggests a boy that has not had his proper share of outdoor pleasures and upon whom the responsibilities of life have fallen prematurely. The impression made by the picture is confirmed by what is known of his life. He is physically frail, and his time has been spent mainly with his mother and his tutors, although he has had some military instruction.

CHEERED THE CENSOR.

How a Gallant Irish Regiment Took an After Battle Scolding.

The leading regiment of our column was the Fifty-third, commanded that day by Major Payn, afterward General Sir William Payn, K. C. B., a very fine regiment, who, being mostly Irishmen, were eager to meet their enemy. Meanwhile I received orders to cross the river by a ford and get round the enemy's right flank, and I had gone for this purpose and was crossing about a quarter of a mile lower down, when suddenly I heard loud cheering and a heavy musketry fire, and then I saw our troops gallantly advancing across the bridge to the assault.

It turned out to be the Fifty-third, who, tired of the delay under fire and, it was whispered, hearing that Sir Colin had sent for his pet highlanders to take the bridge, took their bits between their teeth and without any further orders determined to rush the bridge themselves, which they accordingly did, and with great success. The enemy, once forced out of their position, showed but a poor, desultory fight and, as at Cawnpur, fell an easy prey to the cavalry, who, having crossed, some by the bridge and others, including myself, by the ford, fell on them and pursued them with such success that we captured every gun they had.

The Fifty-third were well pleased with themselves and the result of the fight they had so suddenly initiated, but we heard that Sir Colin was greatly annoyed with them and after the action rated them soundly for their insubordination. But little did these wild Irishmen care. They had had their fight, and a real good one, so far as they were concerned, and as Sir Colin concluded his speech of rebuke they gave him three cheers, and giving three cheers more for General Mansfield, Sir Colin's chief of staff, who had formerly commanded their regiment, they quite upset the chief's equanimity, but at the same time cleared away his wrath.—"Old Memories."

MICHIGAN FARMERS BITTEN.

Bought Fruit and Gave Checks for Payment.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—A young man, representing himself to be a member of the South Water street commission firm of Watson & Co., succeeded in swindling Michigan farmers out of thousands of dollars' worth of produce and fruits last week. Armed with stencils bearing the name of that commission firm and pretending to be George J. Watson, Sr., of the firm, he bought the fruit, shipped it to Chicago on the City of Milwaukee, sold it and disappeared. The checks with which he bought the fruit turned out to be worthless.

He made quick purchases and did not haggle on the prices. On the day of delivery he paid for the produce by checks drawn on the Prairie State bank of Chicago. He signed them Geo. J. Watson, Sr. The checks were accepted without question. When the fruit arrived at Chicago the fictitious Watson went to the firm of Watson & Co. and sold the entire consignment to them and was paid in cash. That is the last seen of him.

Now the Michigan banks are looking to the farmers for the payment of the check, for which they are liable.

The Mt. Clemens Casket Co., Mt. Clemens, filed notice of increase of capital stock from $10,000 to $15,000.

Lacey is Held.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 14.—Wm. K. Lacey, late president of the First National bank of Niles, who was brought here to answer an indictment in the United States court for violating the banking law, remained in the custody of the marshal yesterday, and refused to be seen by anybody or to discuss his case. Bondsmen have not yet appeared, but may be here today prepared to qualify to the amount of $10,000.

Hunter's Head Blown Off.

Climax, Mich., Oct. 14.—The quiet of an autumn Sunday was marred by the discovery of a shocking tragedy.

Friday afternoon Jack Hannon, who resided east of here, kissed his young wife farewell and went into the woods with his gun, supposedly for a hunting trip. Yesterday his body was found near the house with the head blown off. It is thought to have been a case of suicide. The deceased was 27 years of age.

Photographer Scorched.

Pontiac, Mich., Oct. 14.—Fire broke out Sunday in the dark room of Photographer Charles Schemild on the third floor of the Crofoot building. The department threw a large amount of water, causing considerable damages in offices on the floors below.

Postoffice Robber Captured.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 14.—Arthur Coleman was arrested Saturday night on a charge of robbing a postoffice at Buell, Sanilac county. Officers have been looking for him for some time. He confessed his crime. Several others are implicated with him.

Loss by Combustion.

South Lyons, Mich., Oct. 14.—A barn owned by Martin Callen, three miles northwest, was totally destroyed, with its contents, by fire. The cause is attributed to spontaneous combustion from baled straw. The loss is about $800, partly insured.

Flobert Rifle Again.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 14.—Mrs. Xavier Beachler of 214 Fort street was shot in the hand yesterday afternoon by some small boys who were practicing with a Flobert rifle. The wound is not serious.

Four Men Killed.

North Bay, Ont., Oct. 14.—Two miles east of Mackeys Station, Saturday night, an eastbound cattle train and a westbound freight collided while going 30 miles an hour. Both engines were demolished, 20 or more cars were reduced to kindling wood and four trainmen were killed.

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed four-year-old Bessie, looking up at the starry skies one evening, "what a pretty place heaven must be when it is so beautiful wrong side out!"

THE PROLIFIC FLY.

To Lessen the Pest All Organic Refuse Should Be Buried.

Flies multiply at a prodigious rate. Given a temperature sufficiently high to hatch eggs, their numbers are only limited by the amount of food available for them. Linnæus is credited with saying that three meat flies, by reason of their rapid multiplication, would consume a dead horse quicker than would a lion, and the fact that certain diptera having some outward semblance to the honeybee lay their eggs in the dead carcasses of animals probably led Samson and Virgil to make erroneous statements with regard to the genesis of honey and the manufacture of bees. The breeding of "gentles" for ground bait is an industry the practices of which could probably give much information as to the nicety of choice exercised by flies in selecting material for feeding and egg laying. According to Packard, the house fly makes selection of horse dung by preference for ovipositing, and as each female lays about 120 eggs and the cycle of changes from egg to fly is completed in less than three weeks it seems probable that a female fly might have some 25,000,000 descendants in the course of a hot summer. Other varieties of flies multiply, I believe, still more rapidly.

As flies multiply upon and in organic refuse of every kind, it is obvious that the sooner such refuse is placed where it cannot serve for the breeding and hatching of flies the more likely is the plague of flies to be lessened. The most commonly available method for the bestowal of organic refuse is burial. The egg laying of flies in dead carcasses commences at the very instant of death or even before death in the case of enfeebled animals.—Lancet.

Horses' Sunbonnets.

The wearing of sunbonnets by horses in hot weather is by no means a modern invention. In an old Italian print, dated 1542, a gentleman is shown riding on horseback with an umbrella fixed over his own head and another over that of his horse. In Mexico horses are often protected by a small parasol rising over the head, and a horse similarly accommodated has lately been seen in Regent street. Unfortunately this headdress annoyed the conventional "horse in the street," and it came very near causing more than one disaster on the way to Langham place.—London Chronicle.

Woman's Life Saved.

A rather curious case came to our attention of a woman in Detroit whose life was saved "several times," so she says, by Ath-lo-pho-ros. Once is a good record, but "several times" makes her a warm advocate of Ath-lo-pho-ros whenever rheumatism is mentioned—you can write to her if you want.—Kate Nauman, 590 12th St., Detroit, Mich. She says Ath-lo-pho-ros is the best and only medicine that will cure rheumatism, "because it has cured me," and she says "the swelling and intense pain ceased within five minutes after the first dose." She further says, "the disease has no more dread for me as long as Ath-lo-pho-ros can be obtained." What it has done for her it will do for anyone.

Brain-Food Nonsense

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain another for muscles and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or to prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthly action, purifies the blood and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. HIS WIFE'S RING

Sisters of Mrs. Huss Explain the Ring Mystery.

GIVEN TO HER BY AN ADMIRER

Mrs. Huss's Father Says Wiseman Did the Deed and Thinks Hale Hired Him to Do It—Gives No Reason For Decision.

St. Joseph, Mich., Oct. 17.—Yesterday afternoon Emyslie Rockstraw, father of Mrs. Huss, whose dead body was found in the woods near Royal Oak, was informed for the first time of his daughter's death. He was found at the home of another daughter, Mrs. Stewart, in Sodus township. He made the statement that he was satisfied that Robert Hale, the colored man who left this vicinity with Mrs. Huss on two different occasions, hired Henry Wiseman to do the deed. When asked why he made this statement, he would not answer. The old man gave it as his opinion that Hale returned to Sodus the second time to kill Christopher Huss, the husband of the woman.

Mrs. Milton Stewart, a sister of Mrs. Huss, cleared up the shoe mystery by stating that her sister purchased a new pair of tan shoes in Benton Harbor shortly before leaving this section.

The two sisters identified the gold band ring found upon the woman's body. The ring had a peculiar diamond design impressed on the rim. The two sisters also explained the mysterious engraving on the inside of the ring, which has been puzzling the detectives. The engraving was: "From W. to T." Before her marriage, Mrs. Huss received a ring from an admirer, William Fowler. The ring had been the property of Fowler's wife, and his wife's first initial was T. When his wife died, Fowler gave the ring to Mrs. Huss.

In a Hole With a Horse.

Muskegon, Mich., Oct. 17.—Frank Belanger, an employe of the water works department, met with a peculiar experience which almost resulted in his death from fright. Workmen had dug a hole eight feet deep and Belanger was at the bottom making a water connection. Someone tried to lead a horse past when it gave a spring and landed in the hole. Belanger saw it coming, but could do nothing to save himself. The man and horse were wedged in tight. Being near one of the hose houses, the department was called out and both were rescued unhurt.

Ex-Volunteers Must Wait.

Washington, Oct. 17.—The war department has decided that no more commissions in the regular army will be given to civilians or to volunteer officers who served in the Spanish-American war or the Philippines until after next year's graduating class at West Point has been provided for. This means that Col. R. J. Bates and some other Michigan ex-volunteer officers who have been looking for commissions are as good as left for a year at least.

Paid Smallpox Claim.

Coldwater, Mich., Oct. 17.—The Branch county bard of supervisors elected G. C. Clisbe chairman. The board will have to settle a claim of $1,000 for care of smallpox cases last winter. Dr. Wilson, the attending physician, was paid $500 last June on this claim, but asks for $500 more.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

The state pardon board will meet in Lansing Thursday to consider a number of cases.

Mrs. Minnie Sweet is in jail at Lansing charged with bigamy by George P. Sweet of Chicago.

While driving from Muir, Thomas Key of Lyons was thrown from his wagon and instantly killed. His neck was broken.

A class of 15 candidates is taking the law examination at Lansing before the state board of examiners. The examination will be completed Friday.

Charles C. Fenner, superintendent of Bethel township, Branch county, had 13 sheep killed by dogs and 20 more so badly mangled that the greater number will die.

The Review and Herald, the adventists' paper at Battle Creek, does not believe in paying a ransom for Miss Stone's release. The editor claims it is a question for God alone to decide.

Arthur Boucher, aged 11, fell off a shed, breaking his arm. David Williams dislocated his elbow and Ray Bennett, aged 9, fell off a barn and broke his left arm. All live at Muskegon.

David Ried of Port Huron, charged with starving his horse to death, was given 90 days in the Detroit house of correction. The court intimated that he was sorry the sentence could not be made heavier.

W. C. Hovey of Benton Harbor, who managed the Berrien county end for Justus S. Stearns during the last gubernatorial campaign, declares that if the Grand Rapids man enters the race again he can have the county without much opposition.

Ward has been received from Duluth that Thomas Groghan of Ypsilanti had been killed in a row with one Pat Rivers. Groghan was foreman of a tonnage gang of freight handlers and the stabbing grew out of some "joshing." Rivers was under the influence of liquor at the time.

The Farmers' Mutual Insurance Co. of Calhoun county since May 1 had 77 losses, amounting to $8,489.67. To cover this an assessment of from 1 to 14 cents on $100 was made. The Farmers' Mutual Co. has a record of 36 losses for the year ending Oct. 1, with a total loss of $4,188.18. The assessment per $100 has been from 6 to 36 cents.

A BOLD BURGLARY.

Two Elderly Women Robbed in Broad Daylight.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 16.—One of the boldest and withal most deliberate burglaries ever recorded in the history of the city was carried out with consummate skill and brutality at No. 136 Scio street yesterday afternoon. Two elderly women, Mrs. L. M. French and Mrs. A. A. Gardiner, both about 60 years of age, were the victims, and were relieved of personal property amounting to over $3,000.

At about 3:30 three men, ranging in ages from 22 to 25, beardless and dressed neatly, appeared at Mrs. French's house, and, presenting a paper which was alleged credentials that they were agents of a local gas company, said that they wished to examine the gas meters.

After completing their supposed duties the men went away, but returned "to turn on the gas," which they said they had forgotten to do. After 10 minutes in the cellar the men came upstairs and without warning fell upon the two helpless women, beating them into insensibility. They then looted the house and escaped.

BRITISH TOO COMPLACENT.

Lord Rosebery Says That We Are Hustlers.

London, Oct. 16.—Lord Rosebery, speaking yesterday at Birmingham on the necessity of Great Britain being better equipped in political and commercial education, dwelt upon "the dangers of British complacency."

He urged his countrymen to imitate the United States and referred to the "restless enterprise of the Americans, their devouring anxiety to improve existing machinery and methods and the apparent impossibility of accumulating any fortune, however gigantic, which shall satisfy or be sufficient to allow of leisure and repose."

Later in his address Lord Rosebery observed:

"A disdain of finality and an anxiety for improving on the best seems almost a disease in America; but in Great Britain we can afford to catch the complaint, at any rate in a mitigated form, and give in exchange some of our own self-complacency."

A DIFFERENT STORY.

Colombia Says Castro Was Brave Until Reverses Came.

Washington, Oct. 16.—In regard to the statement of President Castro, contained in the press dispatches, to the effect that if Colombia would notify Venezuela officially that she has accepted the United States as a mediator, Venezuela would willingly enter into negotiations with our government looking to a settlement of her difficulties with Colombia, it is pointed out at the Colombian legation here that the government of Colombia made known in the most emphatic terms her complete readiness to accept the friendly intervention of the United States immediately after the transmission of Secretary Hay's telegrams of Aug. 24th to both Colombia and Venezuela, conveying, in substance, an offer of such mediation. On the other hand, so the officials at the Colombian legation state, Venezuela, while not refusing the offer outright, evaded it at the time, and now President Castro's declaration comes only after the disastrous defeat of Venezuelan arms in the north of Colombia, and the failure of other hostile expeditions.

BANKS CONSOLIDATE.

Work Will Be Done By One Set of Clerks.

Cleveland, Oct. 16.—Five of the largest banks in this city contemplate consolidation as a means of economy. The banks are the Bankers' National, the Century National, the Cleveland National, the Metropolitan National and the American Exchange National. If the consolidation is effected, the business will be done by one set of clerks. It is not the intention to lump the combined capital of the five institutions, but to have one institution of a million and a half capitalization. If but three banks enter the deal the other banks will liquidate and will turn over $500,000 as their share of the capitalization and divide the remaining assets among the stockholders as dividends.

MISS KNOX INSANE.

She Wrote to the Treasury Department, Making Suggestions.

Denver, Oct. 16.—Miss Minnie E. Knox, daughter of a former wealthy business man of Denver, was declared insane in the county court, and ordered confined at the county hospital. The investigation as to her sanity was made at the request of the treasury department at Washington, on account of many abusive letters that had been received there from Miss Knox, demanding money and suggesting changes in the methods of the department. Miss Knox imagines herself the owner of vast wealth, and a few months ago created a sensation in Chicago by laying claim to millions of dollars worth of property in that city.

Railroad Telegraphers in Session.

St. Louis, Oct. 16.—At Tuesday's session of the grand lodge of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, H. B. Perham of St. Louis, grand secretary and treasurer, submitted his report. Although the meeting was secret, it was intimated by a number of delegates that some dissatisfaction exists regarding the financial condition of the order and the policy pursued which led to the Santa Fe strike.

French Budget Shows Deficit.

Paris, Oct. 16.—The French budget for 1902, as read to the budget committee of the chamber of deputies, shows a deficit of 50,000,000 francs, of which 20,000,000 francs are due to sugar bounties. The committee adopted a proposal giving to the state a monopoly of petroleum refining.

Tentative Interment.

A poor Scotchwoman lay dying, and her husband sat by her bedside. After a time the wife took her husband's hand and said:

"John, we're goin to part. I have been a gude wife to ye, haven't I?"

John thought a moment.

"Well, just middling like, Jenny, ye know," anxious not to say too much.

Again the wife spoke.

"John," she said faintly, "ye maun promise to bury me in the auld kirkyard at Str'avon beside my mither. I could na rest in peace among unco' folk in the dirt and smoke o' Glasgie."

"Weel, weel, Jenny, my woman," said John soothingly, "we'll just try ye in Glasgie first, an gin ye dinna be quiet we'll try ye in Str'avon."—Scare

THEY WANT PAT

Chief of Police Has Fixed Matters for Crowe.

COUNCIL REWARD WITHDRAWN

The Judge Before Whom Crowe Must Appear is Not Inclined to Bind Himself, But Thinks Voluntary Surrender is in Crowe's Favor.

Omaha, Oct. 16.—Chief of Police Donahue is making arrangements by which he hopes to be able to accept the conditions laid down in Pat Crowe's letter for the latter's surrender. He has most of them completed, his request for withdrawal of reward offered by the city came up before the city council last night.

Judge Vonsonhaler of the county court, before whom Crowe must appear, however, refuses to bind himself to the proposition of putting the alleged kidnaper under a $500 bond. Speaking of the matter yesterday, Judge Vonsonhaler explained his position as follows:

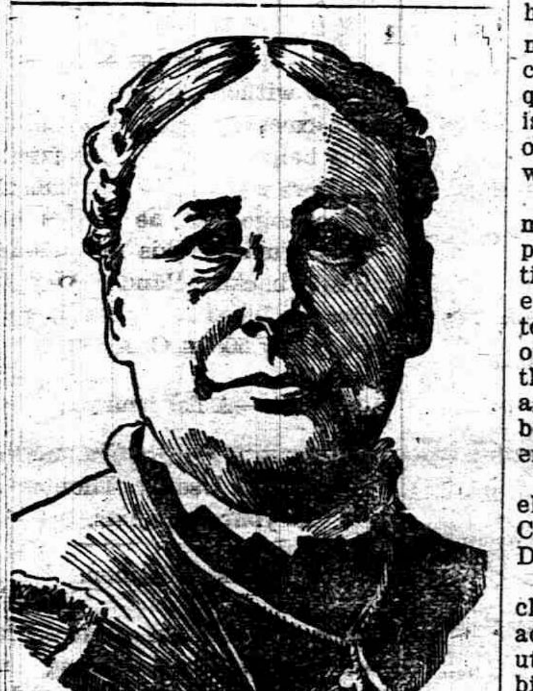
"If Pat Crowe appears before me I shall treat him just as I should treat any other criminal. I certainly shall not bind myself in advance to fix his bond at any certain amount. Of course, if he surrenders himself voluntarily, that will be a circumstance that will be taken into consideration in the fixing of the bond."

At last night's meeting of the city council the following resolution was adopted:

"That the resolution adopted by this council on Dec. 31, 1900, authorizing the mayor to offer a reward of $25,000 for the arrest and conviction of the kidnapers of Edward Cudahy, Jr., be, and the same is hereby recinded; and the reward so offered is hereby withdrawn and all action under said resolution is hereby revoked."

Bulgaria to Blame.

London, Oct. 16.—"The belief is growing here," says a dispatch to the Standard from Constantinople, "that the Bulgarian and not the Turkish government is responsible for the retention of Miss Stone, whose capture was committed with the connivance of Macedonian agitators, if not with that of the higher authorities."



MISS ELLEN M. STONE.

Reward for Capture of Deserters.

Berlin, Oct. 16.—Advices to the Tageblatt from Kiel say that when the United States training ship Buffalo sailed from there recently ten members of the crew failed to rejoin their ship in time and were left behind. The commander of the Buffalo offered a reward of $40 each for the capture of the deserters.

Cattle Loan Company Fails.

Kansas City, Oct. 16.—The Boston-Kansas City Cattle Loan Co., with offices at the local yards, went into voluntary liquidation yesterday. No statement is made. The firm loaned money to stockmen direct, and losses are said to have resulted from the dry weather last summer.

Only One in America.

Canton, S. D., Oct. 16.—The asylum for insane Indians here has been completed and accepted by Supt. Pierce on behalf of the government. The building cost $54,000. This is the only insane hospital for Indians in the United States.

On his 80th birthday he received the only medal for science presented by Emperor William.

Kruger is Seriously Ill.

Berlin, Oct. 16.—The Muenchener Zeitung prints a dispatch from Hilversum, which says that Mr. Kruger, in spite of all denials, is severely ill.

Don't Want Such Company.

Beaverton, Mich., Oct. 17.—The good citizens of this village have had enough of the Arnell family, and have given them a strong hint that they had better leave for other parts. The owner of the house in which they live has been instructed to put them out. It is thought the Arnells will move without causing any further trouble.

He Wonders Why.

Muskegon, Mich., Oct. 17.—John H. Cook of Slocum's Grove thinks this is a very queer world. In circuit court here his wife, Myrtle Cook, was granted a divorce and given their three children, and he had to pay the lawyer's fees and give her alimony of $5 per month. Within an hour she was the wife of John A. Newville.

SCHLEY COURT INQUIRY.

Witness Said Admiral Shouted, "Give 'Em Hell, Bullies."

Washington, Oct. 17.—The officers of Admiral Schley's flagship, the Brooklyn, occupied the attention of the Schley court of inquiry for the entire day. The proceedings began with the recall of Capt. Cook and Lieut.-Commander Sears, both of whom made material additions to their former testimony, and they were followed in succession by Commander N. E. Mason, who was the executive officer of the Brooklyn; Lieut. Edward McCauley, Jr., who was signal officer, and Lieut. Charles Webster, who had charge of the forward gun deck battery of the Brooklyn during the battle off Santiago and was a watch officer on board that ship.

Capt. Cook's new testimony related to the uncoupling of the Brooklyn's engines and to the voyage of the flying squadron from Cienfuegos to Santiago, explaining in some detail the cause of the slow progress made on that occasion.

Commander Sears spoke again of the conversation reported as having taken place between himself and officers of the Massachusetts in the ward room of that vessel on May 31, in which he was alleged to have said that it had been difficult to get Commodore Schley up to the point of undertaking the bombardment of the Colon, and he again denied that he had said anything reflecting upon his superior officer.

Commander Mason and Lieuts. McCauley and Webster all gave accounts of the engagement of July 3. Mr. McCauley recited in detail the signals made in connection with that historical event, at the instance of Commodore Schley. When asked if Commodore Schley had said anything during the battle for the encouragement of the men, this witness replied that he several times had said "Give 'em hell, bullies." All these witnesses testified that the conduct of the commodore when under fire was cool and courageous.

CHANGE OF NAME.

Proposition of House of Deputies Referred to Committee.

San Francisco, Oct. 17.—Considerable routine business was transacted at Wednesday's sessions of the triennial Episcopal convention, a new missionary bishop was elected, and in the house of deputies there was an animated debate on the proposition to change the name of the church. This question did not come up as a direct issue to concur with the house of bishops in creating a joint commission, to which the subject should be referred.

There was much division of sentiment in regard to the matter. A proposal to refuse to consider the question in any form was strongly supported, but this, it was argued, would fail to show proper respect to the house of bishops. Finally the reference of the subject to a joint committee was agreed upon. No further action will be taken until the meeting of the general convention in 1904.

The house of deputies unanimously elected Dr. Cameron Mann of Kansas City to be missionary bishop of North Dakota.

The Huntington amendment to article 10 of the constitution, which was adopted Tuesday by the house of deputies, was non-concurred in by the bishops. The rooms of the woman's auxiliary were closed last evening in respect to the memory of honorary secretary, Mrs. Mary A. E. Twing of New York, whose funeral was held from St. Luke's church.

INDIAN BUSINESS.

They Want to Spend Some of Their Money.

Omaha, Oct. 17.—A delegation of Indians from the Omaha reservation has made a request that Senator Millard have $100,000 of the half million dollars to their credit in the territory expended on buildings and improvements on the reservation. When the senator told them it could be done only by act of congress, they requested that the matter be laid before that body. They also asked that the system of licensed merchants be done away with on the reservation and that the Indians be permitted to buy of whom they see fit. Senator Millard agreed to take the matter up at the coming session of congress.

THREE ARE DEAD

Explosion of Gasoline Caused Loss of Life.

TWO WOMEN BURNED TO DEATH

Building Was Wrecked and Falling Floors Pin the Inmates Down—Fire Followed and Burned the Bodies Quickly.

Bangor, Me., Oct. 17.—A terrific explosion, probably of gasoline, in the second floor kitchen of Nathaniel Ladd's restaurant on Harlow street yesterday afternoon brought almost immediate death to Miss Haney, whose apartments adjoined, and Mrs. Mary F. Carrigan, the second cook, and serious burns to John Johnsbury, a waiter. The explosion wrecked two floors and falling debris caused minor injuries to a number of people. In the kitchen at the time were several employes, who got out safely. Mrs. Carrigan, however, rushed for the upper staircase, but was unable to reach it and was enveloped in flames. John Barry rushed after her, but meeting the fire, he had to jump from the window, having been burned. He died at the hospital. Miss Haney, who was in her room, evidently was buried under debris and then burned to death in a minute or two.

Roosevelt an Honorary Member.

Washington, Oct. 17.—President Roosevelt has accepted honorary membership in the William McKinley National Memorial Arch association, and gave his approval to its purpose of erecting, by national popular subscription, a memorial arch at the Washington approach to the memorial bridge. President Macfarland, Secretary Walsh, Chairman Bell and Vice-Chairman Edson, representing the memorial arch association, called to notify President Roosevelt of his election and to ask his approval of the project, which was explained to him. President Roosevelt expressed a cordial interest in the matter and indicated a desire to see the project succeed.

King Leopold May Come.

Brussels, Oct. 17.—In regard to King Leopold's proposed visit to the United States, it is understood here that his majesty has entertained the idea for some time, though absolutely nothing is known in court circles as to when he intends to carry out his purpose. There is no sign of preparations being made for his departure. Members of the royal household consider that, as the chambers have been convoked and as parliamentary life is in full swing, the present is not the time for a prolonged absence of the king from Belgium.

Duke Will Hurry Home.

St. Johns, N. F., Oct. 17.—The duke of Cornwall and York, by a telegram from Canada, makes large alterations in the program for his reception in St Johns next week, virtually compressing the whole affair into a few hours. The royal yacht Ophir will arrive Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 24, but the duke will not land until 11 o'clock the next morning, when the functions will be hurried through. The state banquet will be given in the evening, and the Ophir will sail for England Friday morning.

Strike at Singer Factory.

New York, Oct. 17.—Because they refused to work with a non-union man, 150 men employed in the assembling department of the Singer Sewing Machine Co.'s works at Elizabethport, N. J., went on strike yesterday. The strikers claimed that unless the man were discharged 2,700 other employes would follow them out of the works today. Six thousand persons, including many women, are employed by the company.

OCTOBER DAYS
...AT THE...
PAN=AMERICAN

At Chicago October was the great month in point of attendance at the World's fair. There is every reason to believe the same result will come to the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, where October is always a month of delightful weather. The Exposition in point of beauty and interest is at its climax, and the programme of special events is such as to attract and please. September started with great crowds, and only the tragedy in the Temple of Music, which stunned and shocked a world, halted an overwhelming success in that month. The Exposition management as a tribute of respect closed the gates for one day, Thursday, when the state funeral of the third martyred president took place. The crowds since then have poured to Buffalo. The Temple of Music, now hallowed and historic ground, has been the Mecca of thousands.

Buffalo has demonstrated her ability to care for great crowds satisfactorily, not only in hauling them to the Exposition by street car and steam railway at a fare of but 5 cents from any part of the city, but to house and feed them at prices in the reach of all. The stories of exorbitant prices were long ago shown to be fables, and every visitor who makes the slightest effort to get accommodation can do so wholly within his means.

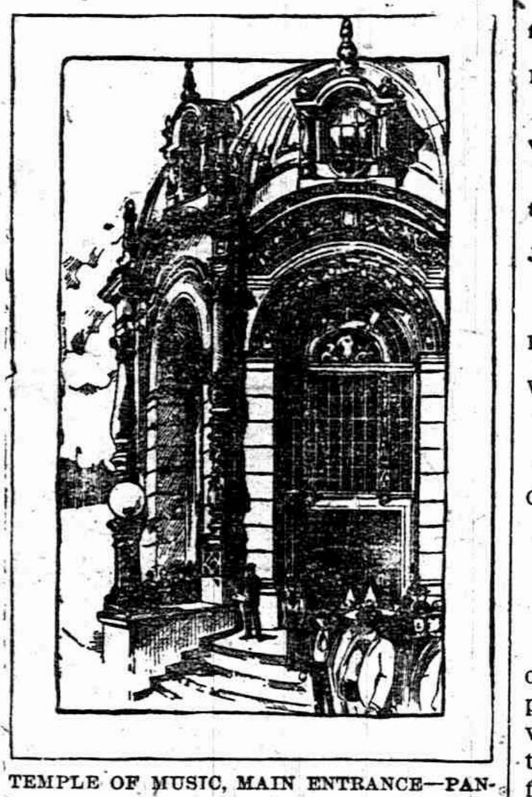
The Exposition itself, with its beautiful buildings, its coloring by day, its magic lighting at night, its walks and courts, its canals and lakes, its fountains and statuary, its exhibits and its amusements, has been a delight to the 5,000,000 visitors who have already been to the Pan-American.

The Exposition Company opened up the month of October, beginning Monday, Sept. 30, with a Carnival week of splendid events, including a baby coach parade, with 3,000 school children singing in the procession, a monster pageant with the floats used in the New Orleans Mardi Gras and allegorical parade and the feature of the beautiful floral parade at Saratoga. These will take place on Thursday and Saturday, Oct. 3 and 5, but every day from Sept. 30 to Oct. 5 will be replete with interest. Special fireworks on the lake, with decorated and illuminated launches in a procession of fiery grandeur, will afford new and wonderful sensations to the visitors.

Thus October will be ushered in with a programme so arranged as to give the American public a delightful week.

The life saving drill, daily, has become one of the great attractions of the Exposition. It tells the story of the work of the heroic men who guard the shores of ocean and great lakes, always on the alert to drag from death's brink the shipwrecked sailor or passengers. The model camp of United States marines, the seacoast guns, the ordnance and all the exhibits showing war's panoply and our defensive measures have been a great educator to thousands of visitors. Some military company is always encamped in the park, and that part of the grounds is never without interest.

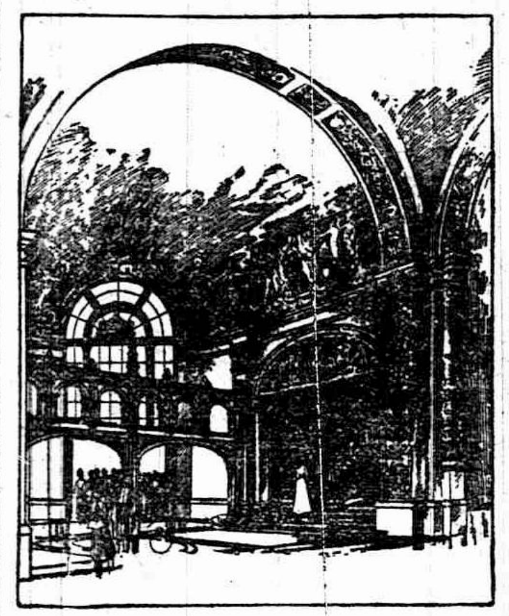
With the magnificent exhibit of the United States Government and the South and Central American States' buildings every visitor can spend a day. No exposition has ever provided in so compact a space, with such beauty of architecture and with so much care for the comfort of the visitor, so much. All exhibit buildings are free, including the Stadium, the great amphitheater, the art gallery, state buildings, and never was so much given for so little.



TEMPLE OF MUSIC, MAIN ENTRANCE—PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

The gorgeous pyrotechnics—and no exposition has ever been so lavish in the display of fireworks—are free to all Exposition visitors. The programme provided by Pain in October includes the magnificent water carnival with gorgeous ballet, wonderful figures in liquid fire, and aerial bombs and rockets of startling beauty and mystifying construction.

To the millions interested in agriculture, stock and poultry rearing, the Pan-American Exposition especially appeals. The cattle show was a tremendous success and the sheep show beginning Sept. 23 and continuing to Oct. 25, has proved an attraction for those interested, from every section from Maine to California and Canada. Among the states represented are Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Vermont, Ohio, New Jersey, Texas and Missouri. Of the total number of flocks on exhibition twenty-seven have been sent here from the Dominion of Canada, most of the exhibitors being located in the province of Ontario. The province of Quebec is also represented. During the course of the sheep show there will be held in the New York State building a series of meetings of prominent North and South American sheep breeders.



TEMPLE OF MUSIC, MAIN ENTRANCE FROM AUDITORIUM—PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

The Buffalo Review of Sept. 24 said that "this ought to be a great time for the farmers to visit the Pan-American. Every farmer in New York State, not to mention those in other parts of the country, ought to see the attractions of the Rainbow City during the next three or four weeks.

"The cattle show last week was a big feature of the Exposition, and this week there is a great sheep show in progress.

"The New York State farmers and the sheep raisers from other states will find it most interesting to compare the South American breeds with those of North America.

"It will surprise many to learn that the pavilions for animals at the Pan-American cover ten acres and are capable of housing 35,000 animals."

The programme for October so far as made up at this time is as follows:

1. Mexican day, fireworks, free organ recital, John P. Lawrence, Washington.
2, 3. Free organ recital, W. H. Donley, Indianapolis, Ind.
3. Nebraska day, Toronto day, fireworks.

Can Care For 250,000.

Director General Buchanan says the only problem now confronting the Exposition is how to find days enough within the closing weeks to adequately take care of the many attractions and features now being planned. He predicts a great attendance during the month of October and one far in excess of the highest estimates that have been made by the most sanguine. In answer to the inquiry as to whether or not Buffalo could take care of the crowds, he said there was no difficulty whatever in this regard; that Buffalo could easily care for 250,000 strangers every day comfortably and at reasonable prices.

In the Music Temple.

The organ recitals in the Temple of Music are daily features of the Pan-American Exposition. Many celebrated organists are on the programme for October. Victor Herbert's famous orchestra will be at the Temple of Music from Oct. 14 to the close of the Exposition.

A Retiary.

A retiary was the name of a Roman gladiator armed in a peculiar way. He was furnished with a trident and net, with no more covering than a short tunic, and with these implements he endeavored to entangle and dispatch his adversary, who was called a secutor (from sequi, to follow) and was armed with a helmet, a shield and a sword. The name of the first is pronounced as if spelled re-shi-a-ry, the accent on the first syllable.

Good Hearted.

Minnick—I thought you said Scribbel was a good hearted fellow.

Sinnick—Well?

Minnick—Well, I hinted pretty strongly that I'd like to have a copy of his latest book, but he studiously ignored the request.

Sinnick—That's where he proved his kindly nature.—Exchange.

A Big Shadow.

We are told that the "smallest hair throws a shadow." And so it does. It throws a shadow over your appetite when you find it in your food.—Exchange.

Combination Diving.

The Swedes delight in "combination diving," and two men will perform many clever feats together. One of the most grotesque of these is when one man stands upright on the springboard and tightly clasps another man's body round the waist, holding him head downward and putting his own head through the man's legs. When the upright man springs from the board, he throws his legs into the air so that the two men, clasping the other tightly round the waist, turn a somersault, and when they reach the water the man who started upside down arrives feet foremost.

The handspring dive is a very effective specialty of Swedish swimmers. The performer takes off from the diving board with hands instead of feet, turning his body in order to descend feet foremost or somersaulting to arrive head downward. Very graceful also is the back dive, in which the spring is made backward, the body turning toward the springboard. Double somersault dives are made from platforms 30 or 50 feet high, the diver making two turns in the air and entering the water feet foremost.—Peter-

Not the Same Wife.

The old gentleman had returned to the home of his boyhood for the first time in ten years or more and, as on the last occasions, he had written "and wife" after his name on the hotel register. Of course the keeper of the hotel was glad to see him and grasped him warmly by the hand.

"Ain't grown a day older than when you was here last," he said.

"No?" said the old gentleman half inquiringly.

"Not a day," returned the tavern keeper emphatically. "Your wife seems to have changed more'n you."

"Yes?"

"Oh, yes. Leastways she does to me. Looks thinner than when you was here last."

"Indeed?"

"Yes. She ain't near so fleshy as she was, accordin to my recollection. Seems like she's taller, too, an her hair don't look just the same to me, an—an"—

"And," put in the old gentleman softly, "she's not the same wife, you know." —Tit-Bits.

A Youthful Promoter.

A horseman had an amusing experience near the speedway a few days ago. He called to an idle newsboy to hold his horse while he made a call on a client. On leaving the house he was surprised to see another boy in charge of the horse. So he asked:

"How's this? You are not the boy I left my horse with."

"No, sir. I jist spekilated and bought him of the other boy for 10 cents. He said as how you were only worth a nickel, and I says you were good for a quarter. See?"

The boy got the quarter and went around the corner, where the first boy was waiting under an open window in the home of the horseman's friend.

"That's the way ter work the swells," said the young speculator to his companion. "Ef you had staid, he woulder coughed up a dime. The bluff made him ershamed to hand over less than the two bits. You gets 12 cents, and I keep the extry cent for permotin dis scheme. See?"—New York Times.

How to Treat a Cook.

"Into no department in life," says Yuan Mei, a Chinese authority on cooking, "should indifference be allowed to creep; into none less than into the domain of cookery. Cooks are but mean fellows, and if a day is passed without either rewarding or punishing them that day is surely marked by negligence or carelessness on their part. If badly cooked food is swallowed in silence, such neglect will speedily become a habit. Still, mere rewards and punishments are of no use. If a dish is good, attention should be called to the why and the wherefore. If bad, an effort should be made to discover the cause of the failure."

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at C. A. Wright's.

Stepped Into Live Coals.

"When a child I burned my foot frightfully," writes W. H. Eads, of Jonesville, Va., "which caused horrible leg sores for 30 years, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured me after everything else failed." Infallible for Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Sores, Bruises and Piles Sold by C. A. Wright.

A scrub race—Washerwomen.

J. Odgers of Frostburg, Md., writes "I had a very bad attack of kidney complaint and tried Foley's Kidney Cure which gave me immediate relief and I was perfectly cured after taking two bottles. Be sure you take Foley's. J. J Orr.

The Gospel has not lost its effect, but much of the so-called "effect" has lost the Gospel.

After exposure or when you feel a cold coming on take a dose of Foley's Honey and Tar. It never fails to stop a cold if taken in time. J. J. Orr.

When a man jumps at a conclusion he often alights on confusion.

S. A. Ingalls, Crown Point, N. Y., writes: "My wife suffered from kidney trouble for years. She was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure and in less than a week after she began using it she was greatly improved and three bottles cured her." J. J. Orr.

LINCOLN'S LOGIC.

How Old Abe Learned to Tell When a Thing Is Proved.

A man who heard Abraham Lincoln speak in Norwich, Conn., some time before he was nominated for president, was greatly impressed by the closely knit logic of the speech. Meeting him next day on a train he asked him how he acquired his wonderful logical powers and such acuteness in analysis.

Lincoln replied: "It was my terrible discouragement which did that for me. When I was a young man, I went into an office to study law. I saw that a lawyer's business is largely to prove things. I said to myself, 'Lincoln, when is a thing proved?' That was a poser. What constitutes proof? Not evidence: that was not the point. There may be evidence enough, but wherein consists the proof? I groaned over the question, and finally said to myself, 'Ah, Lincoln, you can't tell.' Then I thought what use is it for me to be in a law office if I can't tell when a thing is proved?

"So I gave it up and went back home. Soon after I returned to the old log cabin I fell in with a copy of Euclid. I had not the slightest notion of what Euclid was, and I thought I would find out. I therefore began at the beginning, and before spring I had gone through the old Euclid's geometry and could demonstrate every proposition in the book. Then in the spring, when I had got through with it, I said to myself one day, 'Ah, do you know when a thing is proved?' and I answered, 'Yes, sir, I do. Then you may go back to the law shop;' and I went." —Exchange.

What to Read.

Read the good old books that have lived and held their own by the vitality of matter and style that makes them standards. Don't read a lot of new books about the Bible. Read the Bible, and then you will understand what you may afterward read about the Bible. Read Shakespeare, not controversies on Shakespeare; read Scott and Thackeray and Dickens and George Eliot. Do not be content with a short history of literature that tells you their best works and makes a few disconnected extracts and tells you their standing and what you should think of them.

Read intelligently and with interest, and every book you read will guide you to the next that is good for you personally far better than a strange mentor can do, who is often full of theories and prejudices or perhaps has got up a course of study as a "pot boiler" and has no real love of his subject.

Stum-Ac-Oids possess a great deal of merit, and cure aggravated cases of sour stomach, heartburn, bad taste, foul breath, headache, irregular bowel movement, dyspepsia and indigestion. 50c. Coated tablets. For sale by Deathbed Flattery.

Almost every dying person is liable to be allured by the solemn attitude of the company and the restrained or flowing torrents of tears and emotions to an alternating conscious and unconscious comedy of conceitedness. The seriousness with which every dying person is treated has undoubtedly been the very finest enjoyment of his life to many a poor despised devil and a sort of indemnification and partial payment for much privation.—Works of Nietzsche.

Saluting With the Hat.

Before the invention of wigs the hat was rarely removed except to salute others, especially royal personages. It was worn at table when ladies or persons of rank were present. Except when saluting royalty it was the custom merely to raise the hand to the hat somewhat after the manner of a military salute. When it became the mode to wear a profusion of false hair, the hat was less needed as a protection for the head and was carried under the arm.

A Tart Retort.

The infant of a household was in its cradle. The head of the house was at home, peevish and fault finding. At length he became unendurable. "You have done nothing but make mistakes tonight," he growled.

"Yes," she answered meekly; "I began by putting the wrong baby to bed." —Chicago Journal.

ADRIAN STEALS

Tax Money of the other Townships In the County

EVERY YEAR

And this is one Reason why our State and County Taxes are So High

The following letter from Supervisor Lee Dean shows where the Adrian supervisor skipped the assessment of $500,000.00 worth of Page Fence stock and other taxpayers in this county have had to bear the burden in state and county taxes. State and county taxes are put in the county in a lump that is, so many dollars of county and state taxes have to be raised and if a matter of half a million dollars on a certain factory is skipped the amount has to be raised just the same and it is paid by those left.

For years Adrian has made arrangements with factories coming there that for a number of years they would have to pay no taxes. The Adrian supervisors would cut down their assessments and by other unfair means assist the factories of Adrian to the detriment of of property holders in other parts of the county.

For years the Adrian supervisors have with the aid of a few supervisors south of them, controlled the county on all important measures and the outside towns have been almost powerless to interfere. But the Page Fence stock steal is a little too large to go unnoticed.

EDITOR OF OBSERVOR: So many indefinite and misleading statements have been made relative to the assessment of Page fence stock that I desire to explain the situation to the public, through your columns. The Page Fence Co. is organized under the law of the state of Illinois, and under the Michigan law the stock of such a corporation is liable to assessment. The company is capitalized at $1,000,000, and is assessed in the city of Adrian, on plant and personal property, at $125,000, the bulk of the property being located in Pennsylvania. On May 8th, 1901, the state tax commission wrote me to assess the stock of the company; and in pursuance of the law and commission's letter, I assessed all persons in my township owning stock.

In the meantime in the city of Adrian, where the bulk of the stock was held, vigorous opposition to the assessment of this stock was manifest, and pressure was brought to bear on the state commission to let up on this stock. Finally the president of the commission wrote a letter to the 4th ward supervisor that if he made a light assessment on said stock, the state commission "would not have time to come and review it." Acting on this hint the city's supervisors refused to assess the stock at all, and their action was indorsed by the city board of review, the chairman of which, Mayor Reynolds, is a stockholder and an employe of the company. I did not learn this until nearly the first of July, when I could not take the stock off the roll; while no other ward or township assessed a single dollar of this stock.

On July 11th I wrote the state tax commission calling their attention to these facts and asking them if it were true as claimed, that they connived at the non-assessment of this stock. I waited eleven days and got no reply to my letter and on July 22d I wrote a similar letter to them, and had it registered. July 24th the commission wrote me it would not have time to look the matter up. I at once, on July 27, again wrote the commission and renewed my complaint, and the commission answered me on July 30th, by letter, that "they did not see how anything more can be done in the matter of assessing Page Fence stock." I again wrote the commission, making formal complaint and demanding action by it under the law.

Then the commission came down here and requested us to obtain the names of Page Fence stockholders. I got these names from the county clerk, had them typewritten, and sent them to the commission at Lansing. The commsssion then cited the owners of the stock to appear before them Sept. 26 for assessment. In getting out these citations the clerks at Lansing made numerous mistakes in the names and initals of the stockholders, and on the hearing Judge Watts objected because they were not properly summoned.

After a secret session between Judge Watts, the company's attorney, and the members of the commission, they announced that they would not put on any of the stock in the city of Adrian, and would take it off from the Seneca roll, although they admitted the stock was clearly assessable under the law. As a result $500,000 of taxable property is left off the rolls to be made up on the real estate of the county. It is claimed, with much justice, that the assessment would be double taxation; but the same can be said of mortage taxation. If one form of double taxation is enforced all should be. The sooner we enforce unjust laws the quicker they will be repealed. This stock was clearly assessable under the law, and in performing my sworn duty I could do nothing but assess it.

Supervisor of Seneca Twp.

A DREARY EXISTENCE

THE LONELINESS OF THE ENGLISH LIGHTHOUSE KEEPERS.

At the Bishop Station the Sentinel That Lights the Waves Lives In Almost Utter Isolation—A Service With Few Enticing Features.

During the storms that rage intermittently around the English coast in winter the landsman's mind turns in sympathy toward those who in ship or lifeboat are fighting the waves for dear life. But how often does he give one thought to the men who immure themselves in the lighthouses that stud the coast?

I would rather spend my life in a penal settlement than be a lighthouse keeper," declared a man to the writer after a visit to the Bishop lighthouse, off the Cornish coast. "A convict does see a little of the world he lives in, but a lighthouse keeper sees nothing but a dreary expanse of water. I am not surprised that many of them should lose their mental balance."

The visitor to the Bishop lighthouse did not overcolor the picture. It was only the other day that one read of the Longships lighthouse, also off the coast of Cornwall, having been completely isolated for many weeks in consequence of fearful storms. The keepers had been reduced to smoking coffee, hops and tea leaves, though, fortunately, they had not wanted for food.

The keepers of the famous Eddystone lighthouse not infrequently find themselves in a similar predicament. In a gale the waves that buffet themselves against this wonderful monument to the engineering skill of the country are of such stupendous magnitude that they rise to a height of 200 feet and sweep right over the lantern. To those cooped up inside the sound of these waves is like that of a battery of guns at close quarters. "At such times the house shakes like a tree with a man on the top of it," was the graphic description of one who spent many years of his life there.

The new Eddystone is the roomiest and most comfortable of all our rock lighthouses. A sectional view of it shows the various compartments, commencing at the bottom with the water tank; then the entrance, the two oil receptacles, the storeroom, the crane, the living apartment, the low light, the bedroom and the service room in the order named. Formerly only two keepers were employed in the lighthouse, but a grim incident resulted in their number being increased. One of the two men died. So fierce ran the seas that the remaining keeper could not get the body of his late comrade to the shore. For a month the tempestuous weather continued, and for a month the surviving keeper lived alone with the body as his only companion. He was afraid to cast it into the waves, for he might be accused of murder.

Keepers of rock lighthouses do not last long. The incessant pounding of the waves against the building, the loneliness, the want of fresh air and exercise reduce the men to a state of nervousness that is sometimes pitiful to behold. They require a fortnight's leave every six weeks, but this liberal allowance does little to improve their physical state. A medical man whose duty it is to pay periodical visits to one of these lighthouses confesses that there is no remedy for the ills peculiar to the keepers except retirement.

The utter isolation of the silent sentinels of our coast is well illustrated by the case of the Bishop lighthouse aforementioned, which stands right out in the Atlantic. Not once in a year is it calm enough for the superintendent to land his stores at the lighthouse steps. They have to be hauled up by means of a windlass from above. A visitor bold enough to visit the place is "admitted" in a similar way. He places one fot in a noose at the end of a rope, which is thrown down to his boat, and, gripping the rope firmly above his head, he is drawn up to the "see off," as the plinth around the lighthouse is called. Thence he climbs up a perpendicular ladder to the door of the house.

Superstition adds a terror to the life of the men in this lighthouse, for the first structure was washed away bodily, and the keepers believe that the rock is haunted. A fear of a different kind keeps the men of Muckle Flugga lighthouse, the most northern point of Scotland, on the tenterhooks of a terrible suspense. On three occasions the huge black rock on which the lighthouse stands has been shaken by an earthquake.

There is something comical, though characteristic of the stiff necked Scot, in a story which comes from a neighboring lighthouse which is the charge of two families. They live on a desert island. From year end to year end they never see a visitor except the man who brings their stores. Eighteen months ago the heads of the two families quarreled, and ever since they have ceased to speak.

At the shore lighthouse of Ushinish the keeper's family has to travel 40 miles to "kirk." It is no reflection on their piety to add that they are not regular attendants.

A lighthouse keeper receives a maximum wage of £75 a year, out of which he has to supply his own rations. These consist of such unappetizing edibles as tinned beef and hard biscuits, usually washed down with weak tea and condensed milk. No intoxicating liquors are allowed.—London Mail.

Tasmania is 4,000 miles less in area than Ireland. The names of its 18 counties are almost all taken from English counties.

LINES OF THE FACE.

THEIR RELATION TO THE BEARD AND THE MUSTACHE.

A Knowledge of Drawing on the Part of Men, Says a Woman Artist, Would Have the Effect of Enhancing Masculine Good Looks.

"A knowledge of drawing on the part of men would have the effect of increasing their good looks," said a lady teacher of that art recently, "and it would make presentable many a man whose appearance is not calculated to excite admiration. It sounds an odd combination, drawing and beauty, does it not? Nevertheless it is a fact."

To the natural request for an explanation she replied:

"The first principles of drawing are geometrical lines and curves. These lines and curves occur in everything. A potter in criticising an ugly shaped jug will most probably tell you that its 'lines' are bad. Most of those who dabble in drawing and gain certificates merely learn to make these lines and curves without acquiring the slightest knowledge of their effect.

"Here is an example. Just take this pencil and draw a face. Oh, anything will do! But be sure to make two straight lines over the eyes for eyebrows. That's it. See how serious that expression is?

"Now rub out those straight lines and in their places make two curves with the ends upward. That face has an expression of intense surprise, hasn't it? If you had made curved eyebrows with the ends down in the first instance, the difference between the two would have been more striking.

"Well, the human face has its 'lines,' and by studying them our men could improve their appearance. The most elementary expedient is to adapt the mustache and beard to the lines of the face, and I must here tell you that 'lines' in technical language include both straights and curves. Such an expedient is within the reach of all, and there is no need for me to remind you that the whiskers make a tremendous difference in a man's appearance.

"Take a man with an aquiline nose, clear cut features and broad brow, then imagine this individual with a long, drooping mustache; why, it accentuates the whole 'droop' of the face and spoils it. Such a man should have a small pointed beard and a mustache with ends pointing slightly upward.

"The exact opposite is also frequently met with. A man with features that have a distinct upward tendency will wear a mustache with ends that are turned up and so long that they seem to be thinking of joining the eyebrows. Men with mustaches that display an inclination to grow long ends think that these ends should be permitted to grow and that they must be trained upward. That strikes them as the only proper way. But to suit the lines of the face those ends should in many cases be cut off, and in others they ought to be trained downward.

"Whiskers, again, are allowed to grow whether they suit the face or not. Often a fine, vigorous, manly face is contradicted by an insipid little mustache worn over a firm, clear cut mouth, the expression of which it does much to alter. It is quite a pity to see such fine lines spoilt in that way. The wearer cultivates the hirsute appendage merely because it is the fashion for men to have a mustache. You talk about women being slaves to Dame Fashion, but in the matter of your whiskers you men are worse slaves than we are to dress!

"Now don't run away with the notion that I advocate general shaving. Some men who are clean shaved ought not to be. The lines of their faces simply demand that of which they are depriving their countenance every morning. It requires a strong, very intellectual face to do without beard or mustache. The latter is an absolute necessity for hiding the bad lines of some mouths that would if left totally uncovered spoil the whole face.

"Women as a rule are more careful of their lines and choose hats and other things to match. Men also study their dress more than the hair on their faces, but a knowledge of drawing would correct many mistakes in hats, collars and other masculine accessories.

"In the matter of color we rather pass from the domain of drawing and mere 'lines' and trespass into the realm of painting, but I cannot resist saying that both men and women, especially the former, would be all the better looking if they knew more about the blending of colors, because they would not then choose hues which do not harmonize with their complexions. I have known a man with red hair to wear a red tie because red ties were fashionable!

"We are all going in for art and the beautiful nowadays, and you men are not handsome as a body. You could make yourselves more handsome by attending to such easily managed details as I have pointed out. See that your sons learn drawing."—Pearson's Weekly.

KNOWING HOW PAYS.

The Moral of this old, old Anecdote Will save a Heap of Trouble And a Pile of Money.

Something has gone wrong with some simple part of a stationary engine and the stoker could not fix it. After spending a day or two on it, he was forced to ask the aid of a more competent workman. He failed also, and someone suggested the employment of a local celebrity, a sort of tinker at any mechanical job. There is generally one in every locality. He gave two or three raps with his hammer and touched up a rod or two, when the pounding or whatever ailed the machine, ceased. When asked to make out his bill, it read as follows:

Fixing engine............$ .50
Knowing how............ 10.00

This clearly demonstrates that it pays to know how. Engineer J. J. Jeffries of the Royal Cycle Works at Marshall Mich., residing in that city at No. 141 S. Marshall street tells in the following how he got rid of a troublesome companion, he says:

"My kidneys troubled me more or less for years and finally became so bad that I was compelled to give up locomotive engineering on account of the jarring of the train and seek employment as a stationary engineer. When the attacks of kidney complaint occurred I could not rest or lie comfortably in any position and often in the mornings after a restless night I was more tired and worn out than when I went to bed. When the attacks were at their height I was unable to stoop or lift anything and despite the use of every remedy that came to my notice, preparations recommended to me by my acquaintances, numerous plasters of all kinds worn day and night, I was unsuccessful in procuring anything to help me until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. The first box helped me. I steadily improved while taking the second and I stopped the treatment when I had finished the third, as I considered there was no more necessity for continuing the remedy.

GREYHOUNDS.

They Are the Fleetest of All Four Footed Animals.

Comparatively few people realize of what remarkable speed dogs are capable. Some remarkable statistics in regard to this have been gathered by M. Dusolier, a French scientist.

After pointing out the marvelous endurance shown by little fox terriers who follow their masters patiently for hours while the latter are riding on bicycles or in carriages, he says that even greater endurance is shown by certain wild animals that are akin to dogs.

Thus the wolf can run between 50 and 60 miles in one night, and an arctic fox can do quite as well, if not better.

Nansen met one of these foxes on the ice at a point more than 70 miles northwest of the Sannikow territory, which is 480 miles from the Asiatic coast. Eskimo and Siberian dogs can travel 45 miles on the ice in five hours, and there is one case on record in which a team of Eskimo dogs traveled 6½ miles in 28 minutes.

According to M. Dusolier, the speed of the shepherd dogs and those used in hunting ranges from 10 to 15 yards a second. English setters and pointers hunt at the rate of 18 to 19 miles an hour, and they can maintain this speed for at least two hours.

Foxhounds are extraordinarily swift, as is proved by the fact that a dog of this breed once beat a thoroughbred horse, covering four miles in 6½ minutes, which was at the rate of nearly 18 yards a second.

Greyhounds are the swiftest of all four footed creatures, and their speed may be regarded as equal to that of carrier pigeons. English greyhounds, which are carefully selected and which are used for coursing, are able to cover at full gallop a space between 18 and 23 yards every second.

How great an achievement this is may be judged from the fact that a thoroughbred horse rarely if ever exceeds 19 yards. Moreover, it is said that a hare at its greatest speed never goes faster than at the rate of 18 yards.

These interesting statistics are exciting much comment among sportsmen and other lovers of dogs, and the opinion is unanimous that M. Dusolier has fully proved the right of the greyhound to rank as the swiftest of the quadrupeds. Express engines only surpass them.—London Mail.

Insect Pests In Brazil.

I should take a small gang of practical coffee planters from Ceylon with good digestions to be not afraid of ghiggars, ticks and Berne flies, to say nothing of the dear little mosquito. The writer had extracted during four years in Brazil no less than 200 ghiggars from underneath every toe nail of both feet. The Portuguese, Brazilians, Italians and Spaniards called it a recreation on Sunday to dig them out of each other's feet.

Of all the vile insects on earth, the Berne fly is the worst. She lays her eggs inside your flesh and hatches three very ugly insects an inch long with three rings of bristles round the body and sharp nippers. They take about six weeks to develop under your skin, then commence to turn somersaults just when you want to go to sleep after a hard day's work in the sun. The natives of Brazil adopt a novel way of extracting the brute when full grown. They tie on a piece of raw pork, and the Berne comes out of your skin and takes a header into the piece of pigskin.—Ceylon Observer

An Afghan Trick.

During a shooting match in the presence of the governor of Kandahar the sirdar noticed to his astonishment that the heads of sparrows were the favorite butt of the marksmen, who but seldom missed their aim, whereupon he declared that it was far more difficult to hit an egg. Sir Peter laughed at the supposition, but the sirdar stood his ground, and the matter was put to the test. An egg was suspended on a wall, and the soldiers fired at it; but, strange to say, not one of them hit the egg.

The governor and his suit kept their countenances and excused the nonsuccess of the firing party on the ground of the difficulty of the thing. At last a ball happened to hit the thread to which the egg was fastened, and it fell to the ground without breaking. Now the mystery was solved. The cunning Afghan had used a blown egg, and the featherweight shell had been moved aside each time by the current of air in front of the ball and thus escaped being hit.

Remorse.

Law Notes tells of a trial in which the following remorseful letter appeared in evidence:

Mr. Bidwell:

Dear Sir—This is what I never expect to come to. But it is trouble, and no one to help mee out. So I want you to have this young woman Burried. But mee, let me lay top of ground, for the Turkey Buzards to eat; for I have did rong.

JOSEPH BRADLEY.

She Showed Him Her Work.

The woman had her arms in the tub and was fiercely scrubbing one dirty garment after another. Book agents don't often penetrate to that part of Chicago, but this one did. He knocked on the front door until he was tired, and then he went around to the back door. The woman was bobbing up and down over the washboard.

"Good morning, madam," said the book agent pleasantly.

"Good mornin," said the woman shortly.

"Pleasant day," observed the book agent, sparring for an opening.

"Good enough," answered the woman.

"Excuse me, madam," said the book agent, "but I have here a work that I would like to show you."

"Have you?" answered the woman. "Well, I've got a lot of work that I'd like to show you." She took one soapy hand out of the tub and waved it at a great pile of dirty clothes.

"That's my work," went on the woman. "If your work can beat that, all right; if it can't, why, skip out."

The book agent skipped.—Chicago Tribune.

Beavers' Teeth.

Of the cutting power of the beaver's teeth Frank H. Risteen says in Rod and Gun:

"The beaver is really a sort of portable pulp mill, grinding up most any kind of wood that comes his way. I once measured a white birch tree, 22 inches through, cut down by a beaver. A single beaver generally, if not always, amputates the tree, and when it comes down the whole family fall to and have a regular frolic with the bark and branches. A big beaver will bring down a fair sized sapling, say three inches through, in about two minutes and a large tree in about an hour.

"One of the queerest facts about the beaver is the rapidity with which his long, chisel shaped teeth will recover from an injury. I have known beavers to break their teeth in biting a trap, and when I caught them again ten days afterward you couldn't see a sign of the break. The teeth had grown out to their former perfection in that short period."

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the condition of payment of a certain mortgage(whereby the power of sale therein contained has become operative)made, executed and delivered by Chester J. Mapes to Harvey H. Wood, dated the 30th day of January A. D. 1899 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Lenawee and State of Michigan on the 30th day of January A. D. 1899 in Liber 148 of Mortgages on pages 29 and 299, upon which mortgage indebtedness there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the snm of three hundred twenty-three and ninety-three hundredths dollars, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted for the recovery of said indebtedness or any part thereof:

Notice is hereby given that, for the purpose of realizing said indebtedness and interest thereon and costs of this proceeding(including a lawful attorney fee), I will, by virtue of said power of sale, on the 13th day of January A. D. 1902 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the east front door of the the Court House in the City of Adrian, in said County of Lenewee(that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell, at public vendue to the highest bidder, subject to an installment of said mortgage not yet due, the following lands in said mortgage described and conveyed, viz: That parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, known and described as all that part of Block number six of Hewitt's addition to said village bounded by beginning at the intersection of the west line of Evans street with the south line of Logan street, and running thence south on west line of Evans street sixty-four feet to north line of land formerly occupied by C. L. Albaugh as a pump factory; thence west on north line of said Albaugh land seventy-six feet to the northwest corner thereof; thence north on east line of land formerly owned by Zillah Wood and deeded by her to said Harvey April 24th A. D. 1890, sixty-four feet to south line of Logan street thence east in that line to place of beginning.

Dated: October 14th A. D. 1901.

HARVEY H. WOOD, Mortgagee.

An East Indian Verdict.

In a case in one of our Indian courts a jury had before them evidence that could not be in any way shaken. When the concluding stage had been reached, the following interchange of conversation took place between the judge and his colleagues in the administration of justice:

"Gentlemen, are you ready to give your verdict?"

"Yes."

"What is your verdict?"

"Our answer is, sir, that you can do as you like with the men that have confessed, but we acquit all the rest."

"But is it possible that you have weighed the evidence?"

"Evidence like this can always be fabricated."

"Do you find that as regards these prisoners it has been fabricated?"

"Evidence can be fabricated."

"So the evidence is untrustworthy?"

"Unless a man confesses who can tell if he is guilty?"—Bombay Gazette.

Warning Signs

How is your heart? Does it flutter or palpitate, skip beats, or cause pain and tenderness in left side? Is the pulse too slow or too fast? Are you troubled with shortness of breath, choking sensation in the throat, or fainting, smothering or sinking spells? These are warning signs of a diseased heart. Why not make your heart strong and healthy?

"I was troubled with palpitation and weak heart for ten years, and at times was very bad. I tried many remedies without results, but a few doses of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure brought relief. It is the only cure for a weak heart."

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insiduous consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

Kindly take notice that Ely's Liquid Cream Balm is of great benefit to those sufferers from nasal catarrh who cannot inhale freely through the nose, but must treat themselves by spraying. Liquid Cream Balm differs in form, but not medicinally from the Cream Balm that has stood for years at the head of remedies for catarrh. It may be used in any nasal atomizer. The price, including a spraying tube, is 75cts. Sold by druggists and mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Johnson Got $500 Fee.

Flint, Mich., Oct. 17.—Charles H. Johnson, ex-prosecuting attorney, and a member of the alleged gang of black mailers now on trial, testified that he received $500 attorney fee from J. W. Stockwell on the day a settlement was effected with Brewer Raquet. He denied anyone demanding $15,000 of Raquet, and claimed he gave his note for the amount without being threatened. Prominent citizens testified to Johnson's reputation as for honesty and integrity. Judge Durand testified that he had not tried a criminal case in 20 years, and was not competent to judge whether $500 was an exorbitant fee to ask where only $3,000 was obtained. The people rested and a motion to dismiss Johnson was denied. The case will probably go to the jury this afternoon.

Preacher Commits Suicide.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 17.—Rev. S. M. Howland, pastor of the Congregational church at Allendale, Tuesday registered at the Morton house. He was seen to write and mail a letter and then went to his room. Yesterday afternoon Rev. Dan F. Bradley of the Park church received a letter on Morton house paper, written by Howland, asking that his family be notified but of what, was not stated. Dr. Bradley hastened to the hotel with a physician, and going to Howland's room found him unconscious from morphine poisoning. He will probably die. Howland was about 40 years old and has a family. Cause of the attempt at suicide is unknown.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, Oct. 17.—Michigan pensions were granted Wednesday as follows: Original—Joseph M. Weir, Chief, $6; Samuel H. Cass, Cheboygan, $10; Paul Long, Whitehall, $6; Justus F. St. Clair, Centerville, $8. War with Spain—George V. Hibner, Muskegon, $6. Increase, restoration, etc.—Robert Payne, South Haven, $8; John Dodge, Newaygo, $12; Egidius [illegible]

FLOWER AND TREE.

Plants cannot live if deprived of their leaves.

Tea plants at the age of 7 years yield 700 pounds of tea to the acre.

The date palm requires a hot, dry air, but moisture about the roots and plenty of it.

Palms never live more than 250 years. Ivy has been known to live 450, chestnut 860, oak 1,000 and yew 2,880.

An oak tree of average size, with 700,000 leaves, lifts from the earth about 123 tons of water during the five months it is in leaf.

Jasmine is an Indian shrub. Its starry, wax white blossoms are indescribably sweet. All the burning pain and passion and pathos and mystery of the Hindoo race seem to rise up to you in its breath.

There is a rose tree with a trunk 2 feet 9 inches in circumference in a Ventura garden in California. It is a Lamarque, has been growing a quarter of a century and yielded over 21,000 blooms in 1895.

Cents East and West.

"There is always a scarcity of pennies in the west," says an official of the Philadelphia mint, "and a superabundance of them in the east. Every little while the banks out there set up a hoot and cry for pennies, but our banks here are ever glad to rid themselves of their surplusage in these coins. It is difficult to see why such a state of things should be. I'm sure a penny is just as dear to the eastern-er's heart as to the westerner's. One would no more throw a penny away than would the other, yet here we always have too many pennies. There they never seem to have enough."

A Wife Says:

"We have four children. With the first three I suffered almost unbearable pains from 12 to 14 hours, and had to be placed under the influence of chloroform. I used three bottles of Mother's Friend before our last child came, which is a strong, fat and healthy boy, doing my housework up to within two hours of birth, and suffered but a few hard pains. This liniment is the grandest remedy ever made."

Mother's Friend

will do for every woman what it did for the Minnesota mother who writes the above letter. Not to use it during pregnancy is a mistake to be paid for in pain and suffering. Mother's Friend equips the patient with a strong body and clear intellect, which in turn are imparted to the child. It relaxes the muscles and allows them to expand. It relieves morning sickness and nervousness. It puts all the organs concerned in perfect condition for the final hour, so that the actual labor is short and practically painless. Danger of rising or hard breasts is altogether avoided, and recovery is merely a matter of a few days.

Druggists sell Mother's Friend for $1 a bottle.

SAVED A SLAUGHTER

Lieut. Bains Discovered Another Plot to Murder.

INSTIGATORS WERE ARRESTED

The Former Disaster Spread Like Wildfire and Natives Could Not Conceal Their Delight—Reinforcements Being Rushed to the Scene.

Manila, Oct. 21.—Owing to the vigilance of Lieut. Thomas M. Bains, Jr. of the Ninth United States infantry, another slaughter of American troops by insurgents has been averted. It seems that Lieut. Bains discovered a prisoner re-entering a cell at Carbiga, island of Samar, where several were confined, through a hole that had been let in the wall. An investigation showed a plan to fill the jail with bolo men and to call the guard, which would be necessary to get the door open, and then to attack the garrison. It also developed that the instigators were a priest and the presidente, both of whom have been arrested, together with several other prominent persons.

Other attempts have been discovered, but fortunately frustrated, at Pambujan and other points in Samar. Several persons have been arrested in connection with these.

Reinforcements are being rushed to Samara. Three hundred and thirty marines under Lieut.-Col. Mancil C. Goodrell have gone there on board the United States cruiser New York; and two battalions of the Twelfth infantry will start immediately for the same destination.

United States officers from other provinces that were supposed to be pacified have recently arrived in Manila, and they say that news of American disasters spreads like wildfire among the natives, who scarcely attempt to conceal their delight.

The Manila constabulary discovered a large quantity of steel wagon springs which were being shipped to various districts. Investigation showed that these were to be used in manufacturing boloes.

The troops in Samar anticipate hard fighting. Brigadier-General Jacob H. Smith, who is in command, has visited most of the ports and instructed the commanders that the insurrection must be hammered out and Gen. Lukban, the insurgent leader, captured. Already the movement of troops has begun.

General Lucuna, who surrendered last May, has complained to General Chaffee that the terms upon which he and his force surrendered have not been respected by the Americans. He exhibits a document signed by himself and General Frederick Funston in which he and his force are granted immunity in respect of all acts committed contrary to the laws of war. Since this document was executed several of Lucuna's officers and men have been tried, condemned and sentenced to death for killing American prisoners. General Funston says that when it was signed he gave Lucuna orally to understand that the killing of American prisoners was excepted. Lucuna admits that something was said on the subject, but says no thorough understanding was reached; and he considers the written agreement binding.

Rev. Black Suicided.

St. Johns, N. F., Oct. 21.—The body of the Rev. Henry Black, for some time chaplain of the British second-class cruiser Charybdis, who mysteriously disappeared from St. Johns last Wednesday, was found Sunday morning near St. Johns shot through the head. In the right hand of the dead man was a revolver. He had evidently committed suicide in consequence of dementia, attributed to the excitement growing out of the arrangements for the forthcoming visit of the duke and duchess of Cornwall and York.

Play With American League.

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.—It was officially announced last night that seven players of the Philadelphia National League Baseball club will play with the American league next season. Delehanty, Wolverton, Orth and Townsend will play in Washington, and Flick, Duggleby and Monte Cross will play with Connie Mark's Philadelphia club. The others, it is said, will be found with the American league, but it has notyet been determined with what clubs they will be connected.

Judge Fuller Is Dead.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 21.—Judge Thos. C. Fuller, aged 70, a native of North Carolina, and associate justice of the United States court of private land claims, to which he was appointed by President Harrison in 1890, is died. He was a member of the confederate congress and was elected to the United States house of representatives immediately after the civil war, but was not seated.

Marquis Ito at Washington.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Marquis Ito, the Japanese statesman who is visiting the United States, has arrived in Washington. He was met at the railroad station by the Japanese minister, Mr. Takahira, and the entire legation staff and escorted to the Arlington hotel, where he will remain during his stay in this city. Last night the marquis was entertained at dinner at the legation.

Christian Church Conference.

Piqua, O., Oct. 21.—The sessions of the international missionary conference of the Christian church Sunday were most interesting and instructive. The services began at sunrise with a prayer service. Missionary addresses were made by Rev. McD. Howsare of Maple Rapids, Mich., and Rev. Frank H. Peters of Yellow Springs, O.

A Tour of the Escurial.

Healthy Trees.

The time in the summer at which the leaves begin to turn is a tolerably sure indication of the soundness of the tree. Some trees will keep their foliage green until September, while the leaves of unhealthy trees will begin to show signs of turning brown or yellow in August.

CHECK A FORGERY.

Four New York Men Are Held For Examination.

New York, Oct. 19.—A. Henry Chamberlyn, theatrical manager, has caused the arrest of Henry Gotlieb, M. Knobloch, Adolph Schreiber and H. J. Beaudet on charges of grand larceny. Chamberlyn claimed that Gotlieb, who is a lawyer, represented himself as the attorney for the Fidelity & Deposit Company of Maryland and offered to obtain for him an indemnity bond of $25,000, which Chamberlyn required to obtain the lease of the Park theater in Boston. The complainant alleged that he paid Gotlieb $1,800 and that the latter put up as indemnification for the Fidelity company stocks to the value of $20,000, which he said were owned by the defendant, Schreiber, and a certified check signed by H. J. Beaudet. Mr. Chamberlyn further alleged that the check was not honored at the Mutual bank, on which it was drawn, on the ground that it was a forgery, and that the indemnity bond was never executed. Repeated demands for the return of his money, he said, had been in vain. In court yesterday attorney for Beaudet declared the check was a forgery. All the defendants were held for examination.

THE CANAL TREATY.

Lord Pauncefote Will Be Here November 1.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Lord Pauncefote will sail for the United States on the 26th instant before the British cabinet council has had an opportunity to review the protocals which embody in principle the proposed new Hay-Pauncefote canal treaty. It is thought here, however, that that fact will not delay sensibly the final negotiations which will take place here between Secretary Hay and Lord Pauncefote, for it is the intention that the new treaty like that which it will replace on the docket of the senate shall be finally drafted and signed in the city of Washington. It is said that when the new document is framed the "fortifications" clause will have been found to have dropped out, leaving the United States at liberty to fortify the canal, but it is distinctly stated that it is not obligated to do so, and in fact there is no present intention of erecting fortifications, which, it is stated, would be much more expensive than a fleet of battleships.

GENERAL REORGANZATION.

Iron and Steelworkers Know More Now.

Pittsburg, Oct. 19.—The Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tinworkers of America is planning a general reorganization, tending to strengthen itself after the losses accruing in membership due to the settlement. The national officers have come to the conclusion that the recent strike was lost largely by reason of the fact that the men of the inferior positions in the mills were able to take up the skilled work and fill the positions of the Amalgamated men. The new policy of the association will be to take in all the mill workers and make them part and parcel of the organization, so that the interests of all will be identical.

Did Miss Stone Agree?

London, Oct. 19.—"An extraordinary version of the Stone abduction comes today from Constantinople," says a dispatch from Vienna to the Daily Telegraph. "It is declared in Turkish official circles that Miss Stone sympathizes with the Macedonian committee and herself agreed to the kidnaping so the ransom would be paid to the committee. Comment upon this story is quite superfluous."

Russia and England Agree.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 19.—The British and Russian governments have come to a complete agreement regarding the Afghan situation. It is asserted in high diplomatic circles here that even should complications arise in Afghanistan in consequence of the death of Abdur Rhaman and the accession of Habig Ullah, these would not lead to concurrent intervention.

Restoring the Polish.

Says a housekeeper: "My piano, which had been covered with a cambric cover, was loaded with dust that had sifted through the sleazy cloth. The dust was too thick to be wiped off. It should have been blown and lightly whisked off first, but this my maid did not do, and in consequence the grime was wiped in for all I know with a damp cloth. At all events the highly polished surface was clouded over almost to a gray, and I was in despair until a friend suggested a remedy. She advised me to wring as dry as I could a piece of chamois from out a basin of water and rub the piano until the chamois was bone dry. This I have done and completely restored the polish."

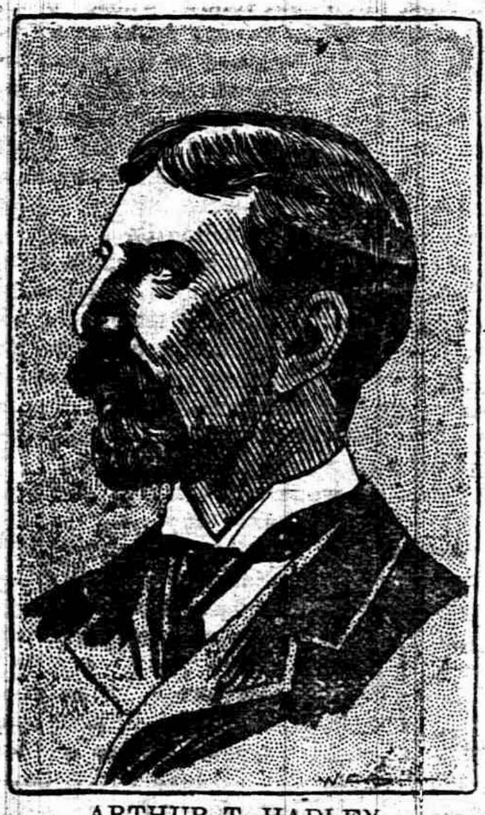
OLD HYMNS SUNG

Yale Began Ceremonies Yesterday of Its Bicentennial.

POWERFUL SERMONS UTTERED

The Principal Streets Are Archways of Blue—President Roosevelt Will Attend on Wednesday—A Wonderful Record.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 21.—Yale university began Sunday the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the founding of Yale college. The bicentennial of the great institution of learning was ushered in with ceremonies essentially religious. The services were performed in accord with the devout and reverent traditions of the good old New England days when the little handful of clergymen gathered together and with prayerful supplications asked divine blessing upon the institution which they had conceived and brought forth. The old hymns were sung and powerful sermons were uttered.



ARTHUR T. HADLEY,
President of Yale University.

The city, proud in its function as a seat of learning, had bedecked itself in Yale's colors and presented a splendid spectacle. Blue draperies were intertwined with new-cut evergreen, and this general scheme of color was broken only by the graceful folds of the stars and stripes.

The principal streets had become archways of blue, adorned at intervals with pictures of President Roosevelt, who, on Wednesday, is to be Yale's guest, and who on that day will become a son of Yale when the university's honorary degree is conferred upon him.

From the simple school of 1701, today Yale found herself a great university, developed through the years from a one-building institution down through her brick row to a campus, thence to a second campus, and now to a third, and stretching out in her departmental buildings to territory as great again.

Within Battle chapel, where the bicentennial was inaugurated, the services were participated in by as assemblage as imposing as the exercises were simple.

On the rostrum sat President Arthur Twining Hadley. At his right was Rev. Joseph Twichell, D. D., of Hartford, the preacher of the bicentennial sermon. To his left was Thomas G. Bennett of the Yale corporation. Next to Dr. Twitchell sat former President Timothy Dwight. On one end was Hon. Henry Henry Howland of New York; on the other Rev. Charles Ray Palmer, both fellows of the university corporation. All wore the gowns of their office. Below in the choir stalls sat a picked choir of students. The body of the chapel was occupied in the center aisle by distinguished delegates and guests, who wore academic gowns with hoods of many colors.

The seats of the side aisles were filled with Yale graduates, while the three galleries were reserved for ladies.

The services began at 10:30 a. m. A chant by the choir was followed by the Lord's prayer. President Hadley read a lesson from the scriptures and after the "Te Deum" the vast congregation sang psalm LXV.

Rev. Joseph Hopkins Twitchell of Hartford, the senior fellow of the corporation, preached the sermon.

THE ROBBERS ARRESTED.

One Woman in the Gang, and She Escaped With the Money.

Middlesboro, Ky., Oct. 21.—George Gray was yesterday arrested as principal and George Eaton as an accomplice in the shooting and robbery of P. T. Colgan, paymaster of the Virginia Coal & Coke Co., last Thursday at Middlesboro. Colgan was robbed while on his way to the furnaces from the Manufacturers' bank. Eaton made a partial confession implicating three other men and a woman. It is said the woman has fled into Harlan county with the money. Eaton and Gray were placed in jail at Pineville.

The Manchester is Afloat.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 21.—The steamer Manchester Shipper, which was ashore on Petries ledge, Low Point, C. B., was successfully floated on at high water Saturday night without the aid of tugs. She steamed up to the government wharf at North Sydney Sunday morning. The chief officer reports that she is making water slowly. This morning a diver was sent down to ascertain the extent of damage.

Wound Proved Fatal.

Ravenna, Mich., Oct. 21.—Raphael Sherwood, who accidentally shot himself near Sullivan last week, is dead. There was no hope of his recovery at any time, and the wonder was that he lived even five minutes after the accident. The shot was with a 44-calibre ball from a rifle capable of killing game at 100 yards. He will be buried here today.

From Albion to Concord.

Albion, Mich., Oct. 21.—The announcement is made on authority of Mr. Frisbee, Boland's representative, that the Boland people expect to build an electric line next summer from this city to the village of Concord, eight miles east of here.

The Same Old Story.

Flint, Mich., Oct. 19.—In 1896 Myron Butler and his wife, of Thetford township, gave a deed of their 40-acre farm to their son Miles, on condition that he support them during their lifetime. They now claim that he has failed to carry out the agreement and furthermore that he is about to sell their effects. The old couple filed a bill to have the deed set aside, and when the papers were served on the son he became so enraged that he choked his father until he was black in the face. His arrest followed and a justice fined him $10.

Steamer State of Michigan Lost.

Muskegon, Mich., Oct. 19.—The Barry line steamer, State of Michigan, sank at 3 o'clock yesterday morning about four miles northwest of White Lake harbor. The crew all reached the shore safely. The boat is now lying in 60 feet of water in the beaten path of east coast steamers. The crew escaped in boats with the assistance of the White Lake life-saving crew. The Michigan left this port at 8:30 o'clock Thursday night, bound for Manistee, to ply in the salt trade between that port and Chicago.

Midland County's Books Mixed.

Midland, Mich., Oct. 19.—The discovery that four pages of journal B, and four pages of ledger B had been cut out of the books of the county treasurer caused something of a sensation. The missing pages cover the years from 1895 to 1898. An expert accountant who is at work on the books says there is a discrepancy of between $500 and $700. B. V. Walton, now of Onaway, was bookkeeper at the time, and has been sent for to explain. The treasurer during part of the time was S. D. Shaffner.

A New Electric Line.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 19.—The Flint, Saginaw & Bay City Railway Co. has been organized to build an interurban electric railway between the cities mentioned. Robert Oakman, formerly state tax commissioner, is secretary of the company and Alexander Munro is treasurer. Most of the right of way has been secured and it is said that work will be commenced on building the road immediately. It is understood that Detroit capital is largely behind the new company, although the names of the backers are kept secret.

Play Was Too Realistic.

Dowagiac, Mich., Oct. 19.—There was a scene in the production of the "Will of Iron" at the Beckwith Memorial theater Thursday night not down on the bills. While the villain's accomplice was cowering before the muzzle of the hero's gun the weapon was discharged, and it happened to be loaded with real bullets. The actor fell seriously wounded, and the audience, thinking it a fine bit of acting, applauded him to the echo. The wounded man will recover.

Capital for Constantine.

Constantine, Mich., Oct. 19.—A syndicate of New York and Chicago capitalists have purchased Constantine Hydraulic Co.'s stock, which includes the water power, Empire Furniture Co.'s plant, Mayflower flouring mills and 40 acres of land. They will expend $100,000 on improvements and plant. The dam on the St. Joseph river will be raised two feet higher, giving 3,000 horse-power. Big buildings are to be erected at once for manufacturing purposes. It will be a great boom for Constantine.

Bank Will Pay 100 Cents.

Niles, Mich., Oct. 19.—The principals in the $10,000 suit which the receiver of the suspended Citizens' National bank was about to commence against the trustees of the bank have reached an agreement and the matter will be settled out of court. Receiver Rhode says he now expects to pay depositors 100 cents on the dollar.

Jury Disagreed.

Flint, Mich., Oct. 19.—The jury in the case against C. H. Johnson, for criminal conspiracy, reported that they were unable to agree. Judge Smith sent them back, and after 13 hours' deliberation they still disagreed and were released. They stood eight for acquittal and four for conviction.

Home for Old Oddfellows.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 19.—The grand lodge of Oddfellows decided to levy a per capita tax of 10 cents a year for a few years to aid in building a home for old Oddfellows and orphans of Oddfellows. The choice of a grand warden finally fell upon F. H. Daley of Kalamazoo.

Two Miners Killed.

Calumet, Mich., Oct. 19.—Two miners in the Calumet and Hecla mine, John Henry Glenvalle and Joseph Seele, were killed by a premature explosion of a blast.

Died of Heart Disease.

Hudson, Mich., Oct. 19.—Mrs. Filinda Pettit, aged 63, pioneer of Hudson, dropped dead from heart disease. This is the fourth death from heart disease here in the past two weeks. The victims were all old residents.

MUST BE CONVINCED.

Pat Crowe Won't Surrender Unless Things Suit Him.

Omaha, Oct. 19.—John J. Crowe, who conducts a saloon in Council Bluffs, says that his brother, Pat Crowe, will not surrender until he shall be convinced that his bond will be placed at $500. "If such a pledge is made he may be in Omaha within a week," declares the brother.

"Pat has been all over the world," said John, "and while the Omaha police were looking for him I saw him in Omaha.

"Pat has been in Council Bluffs within three months, and he has been in Omaha also. Since then he has been in Canada, but he did not like it there, and he is now within easy reaching of Omaha."

Crowe admitted that he was in communication with Pat and stated that his brother was fully advised as to everything that was going on in Omaha.

Close to a Fool.

A farmer was working in his field when a sewing machine man came along.

"Good morning," said the sewing machine barker.

"Mornin."

"Your corn seems to be pretty yellow."

"Yaas; I planted yellow cawn."

"You don't seem to have more than half a crop."

"Waal, I planted it on the halves."

"You seem pretty close to a fool."

"Yaas; there's only a fence between us."

When the sewing machine man came to, it required the services of two doctors to get him into such shape that he was able to make the next town.—New

BIG STEAMER SANK

City of Cleveland Lies on the Bottom.

SPLIT OPEN ON A ROCK

A Dense Fog Hung Over the River at the Time—Over One Hundred Passengers on Board—All Were Landed at Detroit Safely.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 21.—The big D. & C. sidewheeler City of Cleveland rests in 12 feet of water off the upper end of Grosse Isle, where she struck a rock Sunday morning about 6:30 o'clock, and sank. The Cleveland was bound up and had about 176 passengers aboard and 500 tons of freight. Just after getting in the river a heavy fog came up and after picking his way through the narrow channels for about five miles, Capt. McLachlan, who was on the bridge himself, decided to get out of the channel and anchor. He took the boat in well to the Canadian shore and dropped the anchors. This was at 5:30, and after lying at anchor for an hour the fog lifted enough to enable the captain to see the channel, and he decided to come on up the river. He gave the signal to back and almost immediately there was a grating sound and the boat stopped. At first it was not thought the boat had hit anything, but as soon as an effort was made to move her it was seen that she had hit and was fast. By this time the water had commenced to come up through the dining-room floor and word was at once sent to the captain that the boat was sinking.

Capt. McLachlan, deciding to keep her where she was, ordered the anchors out again and the big sidewheeler slowly settled to the bottom in 12 feet of water. Up to this time the passengers, except those who were awake, knew nothing of the trouble the boat was in, and it was a very surprised crowd that piled out of the staterooms in hurry-up costumes when they were called by the crew of the boat. There was no excitement whatever. The passengers coolly stood on the deck and watched the big boat settle to the bottom.

Passengers Landed Safely.

Ward was at once sent to Amherstburg and the little steamer Newsboy, Capt. George King, came up and got alongside the Cleveland. The Newsboy took the passengers off and brought them to Detroit, reaching here about 10 o'clock. The wrecker Saginaw, with two steam pumps, was sent down and reached the stranded boat about noon. When the Saginaw reached her the Cleveland was lying on the bottom, with a decided list to port and her stern compartments full of water. The dining-room and galley were filled so that everything was floating, but outside of these two compartments no water was taken in until later, when the bulkhead doors between the galley and engine room were opened with the aim of giving the wreckers a better chance to free the boat of water.

High Livers in Shiawassee.

Owosso, Mich., Oct. 21.—The Shiawassee county supervisors considered $2,000 worth of smallpox bills and slashed them right and left. Fathers and mothers presented heavy accounts for nursing their own children, and bills for cigars, lobsters, choice roasts and oysters, while families were quarantined. Many people lived higher than ever before, fondly imagining that the county paid freight, but the cruel supervisors declare that only bills of indigent families shall be paid.

Cheaper Than Buying.

Albion, Mich., Oct. 21.—Thomas Roe of Jackson and Orta Ely of Kalamazoo, suspected of complicity in the theft of an overcoat and a pair of boots from the front of stores in this city, were caught in Homer by Constable Austin. These two and Peter Smith of Chicago and Mike Morrand of Jackson, principals in the scrape, were arraigned before a justice, but all pleaded not guilty.

Agent Missing, Also Rig.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 21.—Bernard Ropert, a traveling representative of a Detroit publishing house, is missing and a rig which he hired from James D. Austin is also missing. Ropert called at the livery stable and rented the rig, promising to return the same night. He has not been heard from since and the hotel people have no knowledge of his whereabouts.

New Science Building.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Oct. 21.—The council at their meeting tonight will consider the proposition to give $12,000 to the Normal for a site for the new science building. An election will probably be called. The proposed site for the science hall is on Forest avenue across the street from the athletic field, which occupies the west end of

A Pound of Swallows.

How many live swallows go to a pound? This question lately formed the subject of a bet in the little town of N——, in Baden. A swallow was caught and its legs and wings tied up with a piece of silk thread and placed on the scales. To everybody's surprise it was found to weigh only ten grams, so that it takes 50 of them to make up a pound.—Karlsruher Nachrichten.

"One night my brother's baby was taken with croup," writes Mrs. J. C. Snider, of Crittenden, Ky., "it seemed it would strangle before we could get a doctor, so we gave it Dr King's New Discovery, which gave quick relief and permanently cured it. We always keep it in the house to protect our children from Croup and Whooping cough. It cured me of a chronic bronchial trouble that no other remedy would relieve." THE BACKGROUND GROUP.

The crowd huzzas, the music madly plays;
'Tis meet, for, lo, it is the day of days;
The home returning heroes come; a cry
Of welcome should be lifted to the sky
And flowers strew the people trampled ways.

The drums beat martially; with rhythmic beat
The steps resound along the gaping street.
Hark! What acclaims! And how the folk do press
To see, to touch, may be, the very dress
Of those who dared the death when life is sweet!

But stay! Where joy is general, where the sound
Of jubilant voices rends the air around,
Why is yon group so silent in its place,
With war's impassioned image face to face?
Wherefore those eyes cast nunlike on the ground?

Who are these hangers back, these dark robed ones?
They are the mothers who are reft of sons,
The wives whose dearest lie all uncaressed
Afar with vital stains on brow or breast,
The children orphaned at the mouths of guns.

A Sentimental Journey ✿

And Its Results.

By GILBERT DAYLE.

It was about 4 o'clock one afternoon in February, and Hippesley was sitting on the veranda of the Cafe de Paris at Monte Carlo. He sat deep in thought, his ears mechanically listening to the strains of the little Hungarian band a few yards away from him. He was thinking of the reason that had brought him to the place. He had been abroad for 12 years, yet within a month of his return he had left again and hurried to spend a few days on the Riviera before taking steamer at Marseilles.

It was absurd, he knew it, but the longing to see her face again was irresistible. He would not seek an opportunity of speaking with her. The scheme on which their lives had been worked out made this impossible. He simply had an overwhelming desire to see her. Then he could go back to his lonely life, not happy; he could never be that, but with a fresh picture of the one woman he had ever loved.

He noticed a smart carriage draw up before the broad steps of the Casino, and almost simultaneously a man and a woman came out of the building. The man was middle aged, a trifle heavy in build and faultlessly dressed. He handed the lady into the carriage. Hippesley, as he caught sight of her face, gave a start and clutched hold of the table. She was a young English woman, magnificently beautiful.

The color left his face, and he riveted his eyes on her. He watched her smilingly say "goodby" to the man on the steps; then the carriage turned and drove rapidly away. As it vanished from sight he sank back in his chair, his mouth twitching. His throat seemed dry and parched; he stretched forward and drank some tea at a gulp. Then the voices of two men talking just behind him reached his ears.

"That was the Princess Zandra. She is living at the Villa Erondel, at Beaulieu."

"Enormously rich?"

"She was till a day or so ago." The man lowered his voice. Hippesley found himself straining for the next words. "I happen to know," came in almost a whisper, "that the late prince was sufficiently ill advised to invest nearly all his money in an enterprise that has recently come to the ground with a crash, and the princess, who never had the slightest suspicion of her affairs not being in a satisfactory state, has suddenly been told that another year at her present rate of expenditure will leave her penniless."

"What will she do?"

"Go on living as she has done and marry again. Women with such beauty can pick and choose. There are no hard places for them. Rumor says it will be the man who has just left her. He is not a good man, but he is passionately in love with her and a millionaire twice over."

Hippesley rose from his seat and, making his way round to the terrace, sank into a seat. He felt he could hear no more. It was all so curious, so startlingly strange. To think that the girl he had left living with her father on the outskirts of a quiet English country town should have developed into this wonderful Princess Zandra, whose beauty was known throughout Europe. And they had loved one another! He had gone abroad with the hope of making a name for himself, of being able to claim her. But ill luck had dogged him, and the time had never come when he could write to her. He had left her free, and as the years went by, bringing nothing but persistent failure, he knew that it was not for him to possess the only thing he counted worth having. Occasionally scraps of intelligence as to the course her life had taken drifted to him. Her father had died, and she had gone to live with a wealthy aunt in London. From stray papers that reached him he learned that her beauty had caused quite a sensation in society. Then at last came the news that she had married a foreigner of great position, Prince Zandra.

He wondered if she ever thought of him—remembered the night he had confessed his love to her. Not a day had passed in those long years of failure but her image had been before him. Now, at length, when he had achieved some slight success, it was too late. All that was left for him was to take the absurd little journey of sentiment.

Early next morning he traveled to Beaulieu. He got out at the railway station and, following the path that led round to St. Jean, passed the fishing village and gained the Point. There he sank down on the ground and gave himself up to his reflections. It was a perfect morning, a cloudless sky, the air soft and pregnant with the perfume of the roses that grew right to the edge of the tiny cliff. Some 30 feet below him was the sea, not a ripple on its smooth surface, the clear blue tints gleaming in the sunshine.

Presently he was aware of a woman gazing curiously at him. The next moment they had recognized one another. She went suddenly pale, and her lips parted in wonder.

"Ralph!" she gasped.

He looked at her mutely. He was face to face with her at last, and the blood went throbbing through his veins.

"Yes, just Ralph," he said mechanically.

She held out her hand, and he took it awkwardly.

"And to think it is you after all these years!" she said softly.

Hippesley did not speak. His thoughts had flown back a dozen years to the night when he had left her. An indefinable idea came to him that she, too, was thinking of the same thing.

"I won't lie," he said abruptly. "I am not here by chance. I heard you were on the Riviera, and after all these years I wanted to see you again—just to see you; I had no notion of speaking."

She gazed at him steadily, as if trying to read his thoughts.

"You have loved me all this time?" she asked slowly.

He bowed his head. She turned away with a little sob.

"And you never wrote!" she cried. "Oh, why didn't you write?"

"I was a failure—such an utter failure I could not write to claim you," he said hoarsely. "You did well. I wasn't worth waiting for."

She looked at him, the tears glistening in her eyes.

"What a jumble fate made of our lives!" she sighed.

"It did not matter. You are the Princess Zandra."

"Oh, I am tired—tired to death of it all!" she cried in a tone of utter weariness. "To have to live in an artificial world, among people who are not my people—there is no one left to me now—and to have to begin it all over again," she added in a half sorrowful, musing tone.

He understood. He remembered the words he had overheard at the cafe. It was all true, then. She looked up at him quickly, with a smile.

"But you, Ralph; what have you done?" she asked gently.

"For years nothing. Now, at last, I've got a small estate in Ceylon. It's a fair living, while I work hard—not a bad life, too, for a man who has lost his ambitions."

"No, not a bad life," she repeated. "A lonely one, though." She gave a little laugh. There was an infinite note of sadness in it. "As lonely as mine has been!"

She lifted her head, and their eyes met. He read something in her gaze—a something that sent him trembling from head to foot.

"My God, Esme!" he cried. "If—if you were not the Princess Zandra!"

He saw her eyes suddenly shine, the color rush to her cheeks.

"Remember only that I am a poor woman again," she whispered; "that I've never forgotten, never could forget"— Her voice died away.

His brain was in a whirl. It seemed hardly possible.

"But the life!" he cried. "Think, after all, you've"—

"I only loved once. It was you I thought had forgotten"—

The low, soft voice came to a stop. They stood looking into one another's eyes.

"Don't send me back to the old life again, Ralph," she murmured.—Mainly About People.

Still Readable.

Mr. Hawley looked down at his wife with pitying indulgence as she sat busily writing in a small book the day after Christmas. "Copying that old list of names and presents, my dear, I suppose," he said lightly. "Now, how much better it would be if you would just exercise your memory as I do mine and save all this writing year after year. Why, I sent 40 presents," repeated Mr. Hawley, rising on his toes and falling on his heels to emphasize his statement, "and yet I make no note of them save in my mind, my dear."

"I know you're wonderful in that way, Henry," said little Mrs. Hawley meekly, "but I'm sure I should make mistakes if I didn't keep a list. Oh, here's a letter that came for you from Jack in the last mail this afternoon."

The indulgent smile lingered on Mr. Hawley's face as he opened his letter, but it faded and his color heightened as he read his nephew's communication:

Dear Uncle—Thank you very much for the handsome copy of "Vanity Fair." I am sure, as father says, that I shall enjoy reading it just as much as I did when you gave it to me last year and the year before and the year before that. Your affectionate nephew, JACK.

She Stopped the Car.

When a Fourth avenue car bound down town approached Eighteenth street the other morning a determined looking woman asked the conductor to stop the car at the corner. He nodded and evidently forgot all about it. The car rolled past Eighteenth street without stopping. The woman arose and with an angry glance at the conductor began ringing up fares. She evidently had tried that method of stopping a car before, for when the conductor gave the motorman a sharp signal to stop and the car did stop abruptly she said triumphantly:

"I thought that would remind you."

"But you have rung up five fares," said the conductor.

"Then why didn't you stop at Eighteenth street?" asked the woman. "It serves you just right;" and off she flounced. The other passengers smiled appreciatively, and the conductor made a careful count of the money in his pockets.—New York Sun.

In the School of Work.

Charles A. Dana of the New York Sun was a man of extensive learning and attached great importance to college training, but was quick to recognize the value of the practical education that a man of good parts may pick up in this workaday world outside of university walls.

A young man went to The Sun office one day and asked to see the editor in chief. He would not be rebuffed by the subordinates and after some delay was admitted. He stated his business without a moment's loss of time.

"Mr. Dana," he said, "I believe I could be of some use on this paper, and I want you to give me a trial. If you don't find me of any use, you needn't pay me any salary, and if you do I shall want a good salary. If I don't find my proper groove in a month, you can drop me out."

Mr. Dana looked him over.

"Young man," he said, "I like your looks. Have you ever attended any institution of learning?"

"Yes, sir. I am a graduate of two newspaper offices, one a country weekly and the other a daily paper in a city of 100,000 inhabitants."

"I'll take you. Go and report to the managing editor."

And Mr. Dana turned again to his work.—Youth's Companion.

Tennessee's Wealth of Oak Timber.

One of Tennessee's richest fields of natural resources is in its forests. Most of her timbered land is as yet virgin, and at the top of the list of the varieties to be found is oak. That tree is one of the most valuable that ever grew, and this state is more than usually rich in it.

Oak timber is practically indestructible when not exposed to the elements of the atmosphere. I mean that oak timber can be submerged in the ground or buried in the water, where the atmosphere does not affect it, and it will last for so many years that the man who had put it there is dead and forgotten by the time it has decayed.

It is a growing favorite, and deservedly so, in many ways of manufacturing furniture and in finishing fine houses. The price on it is always firm, and every now and then it makes a spurt and climbs up a point from which it never will fall. If the forests of this tree to be found in Tennessee today are here 90 years from now, this will be one of the richest states in the Union.—Knoxville Sentinel.

DRIVEN TO MADNESS.

TIMES WHEN AN EXCESS OF JOY IS LINKED WITH INSANITY.

Some of the Saddest Cases of Lunacy Are Those Where the Mind Is Unable to Stand the Shock of Sudden Good Tidings.

It is no exaggeration to assert, said an asylum doctor of long and varied experience, that there are scores of men and women in our asylums who have literally been sent there through excess of joy. Many of these cases which are, in my opinion, the saddest of all have come under my own observation.

I remember in the very first asylum with which I was connected one of the patients was a strikingly handsome and very well educated man, who was as sane as you or I except on one point. He was really a man of considerable wealth, but his delusion was that he was a pauper, and he would tell the most pitiful tales of his destitution, begging, with tears in his eyes, for a few coppers with which to buy bread.

According to the story told me, he was the only son of a wealthy merchant. In his youth he had fallen among evil companions and had led such a dissolute life that his father not only threatened to disinherit him, but forbade him ever to enter his house again. After that he seems to have sunk into the lowest depths of poverty until he was glad to earn a few coppers by selling papers or matches in the streets.

It was at this last and lowest stage that news came to him that his father had died intestate and that he was heir to all his vast fortune. The sudden news completely turned the man's brain and brought on such a condition of excitement that he had to be sent to an asylum, and when he calmed down again he had lost all recollection of his good fortune, and nothing can shake his delusion that he is on the verge of starvation.

Another patient in the same asylum was a young and in his lucid moments a most intelligent fellow, whose "brain was turned," as the saying is, on learning that he had passed an examination. He had sat for the matriculation examination at the University of London, on passing which he had set his heart and had asked a friend in London to wire the result as soon as the names were screened at Burlington House.

About three weeks later came a fatal telegram, "Failed—sorry," which sent the young man into the lowest depths of despair, for he was too old to sit again. Not many hours later, however, came another telegram, "Passed honors—very sorry crush so great did not see name this morning." The revulsion of feeling was so great that the student's reason gave way, and he became so violent in his excitement that he had to be confined. Fortunately he was not with us long and is now, I am glad to know, doing very well as a solicitor.

Disappointed love sends many people to asylums, but it is very seldom that success in wooing drives a man mad. It had this strange effect, however, on one of my late patients. The girl he loved had gone out to India to keep house for her brother before he had screwed up his courage to the point of proposing to her, but an offer followed by mail very quickly after her.

Weeks and months passed, and no answer came to the impatient lover until, after waiting two years in despair, he became engaged to a girl who had nothing but her money bags to recommend her and for whom he had not a particle of love. Scarcely, however, was his fate sealed than he received the long despaired of letter from India, accepting his offer and explaining that the girl's brother had received and mislaid the letter, which had only just been found and had come into her hands.

Within an hour of the receipt of this letter the man was a raving maniac, and although his condition is improved I doubt whether he will ever recover his reason.

In another remarkable case it was the joy at seeing her husband again that robbed a lady patient of her reason. Her husband was the captain of a merchant ship which was reported to have gone down with all hands. The widow had deeply mourned her husband for nearly a year, when one day on returning from a walk she found him sitting in the drawing room as hale and robust as ever.

With a shriek she fell unconscious on the floor, and when she recovered her reason was gone. It seems that her husband, after floating for some time, had been picked up by a passing "tramp" and had been landed on the west coast of Africa, from which he had returned home by the first available vessel.—London Tit-Bits.

'Tis Different In England.

"I suppose it's all right for Americans who visit Europe to talk with an English accent when they come home," reflected Uncle Allen Sparks, "but you never hear of any Englishmen talking through their noses and saying 'I guess' after they have spent a season in the United States and gone back home."—Chicago Tribune.

Hope.

"Say, pop, I've got to write a composition on 'Hope.' What is 'Hope,' anyway?"

"Hope, my boy, is the joyous expectation of being able to dodge our just deserts."—Life.

Hyde park, the Green park and St. James' park cost London between them £32,976 a year to keep up.

First Silver Wedding.

According to a historian, this is the way the first silver wedding came about. It was in the time of Hugues Caput. Two of his most faithful servants, a man and a woman, had grown gray in his employ. How could he reward them?

Calling the woman, he said: "Your service is great, greater than the man's, whose service is great enough, for the woman always finds work harder than a man, and therefore I will give you a reward. At your age I know of none better than a dowry and a husband. The dowry is here. This farm from this time forth belongs to you. If this man who has worked with you for five and twenty years is willing to marry you, then the husband is ready."

"Your majesty," said the old peasant, "how is it possible that we should marry, having already silver hairs?"

"Then it shall be a silver wedding." And the king gave the couple silver enough to keep them in plenty.

Such was the origin of the silver wedding, a custom which, spreading all through France, subsequently became known to the world.

Points on a Lobster.

A lobster is found in the water, but not always—in fact, some of the most successful lobsters that ever lobstered were born and raised on dry land.

One can usually tell a lobster by its actions. For instance, if a young man enters a crowded drawing room and walks all over the feet of the assembled guests without their consent or approval the young man at once becomes a lobster.

The fathers of lobsters usually have money. In fact, it is difficult to be a real stand up and fall down lobster unless the lobster's father has money.

It is an odd fact that many girls seem to admire lobsters. It would seem that a girl ought to know better, but she doesn't until she marries a lobster. Then she tumbles.

Lobsters have no brains. If you don't believe it, split a lobster's head open with an ax if you don't care anything about the ax.

This world would be a much more desirable abiding place if there were no lobsters in it.—Ohio State Journal.

Hodge, the Single Minded.

An election petition was being tried, and a witness was called to prove "bribery."

"One of the gentlemen says to me, 'Hodge, you must vote for the Tories,'" said the witness.

"And what did you answer to that?" asked the counsel.

"'Well,' says I, 'How much?'"

"And what did the agent say?"

"He didn't say nothing. The other gentleman comes to me and says, 'You must vote for the Liberals, Hodge.'"

"And what did you answer?"

"I said, 'How much?' so he arst me what t'other gentleman offered me, and I told him 5 shillings."

"And what did the Liberal agent do?"

"He gave me 10 shillings."

Counsel sits down triumphant, and up starts the other side.

"Did you vote for the Liberals?"

"No."

"Did you vote for the Tories?"

"No. I ain't got a vote!"—Spare Moments.

H. E. Howd, who runs a clothing store in Addison, on entering his store Saturday morning discovered that it had been visited by burglars the night before. They entered by cutting a hole in the lower panels of the door in the rear of the building and reached in and unlocked it. On looking around Mr. Howd found that they had stolen an overcoat, and other clothing and some jewelry.

Miss Jennie Chase

Miss Nancy J. Chase was born in the township of Raisin, Lenawee county, Michigan, Feb. 11, 1846, and died at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. A. Burlingame in the village of Tecumseh, Oct. 18, 1901. Miss Chase spent most of her life in the school room. She began teaching when she was but eighteen years old, and continued her work in the school room until failing health compelled her to give way to others. She taught school in Plymouth, Quincy, Coldwater and other places in this state, twenty years in Cairo, Ill., and for four years she was a tutor in a private family in Old Mexico. A teacher's infiuence is limitless. What shall we say of one, who during all these years came in contact with so many hearts and minds. The teacher has passed away, but the impression made upon the mind and heart of the pupil remains to be transmitted to others.

Miss Chase united with the Baptist church of Tecumseh about thirty-two years ago, and while teaching school in and about Tecumseh she was one of the active members of the church. She looked into the future without a fear, and in her last moments she thought she had a vision of heaven During her long illness she was a great sufferer but with all very patient. She has finished her work, she has entered into rest.

The funeral services were held at the home of W. A. Burlingame at 1:30 this afternoon conducted by Pastor Bower.

Railroad Wrecks

The papers report serious freight train wrecks on the Detroit Southern two of the latter part of last week. It would seem of late the Detroit Southern has had more than its share of railroad wrecks due to bad luck or mismanagement and perhaps a little of both.

The fact is that since the new management of the Detroit Southern very little work has been done on the track nothing at all toward keeping the rolling stock in repair and like the "One Hoss Shay" it is only a question of time when every thing will go to pieces A few wrecks like they have had in the last month would more than pay for keeping things in good shape

ROUND ABOUT US.

There is nothing "girlish" about Editor Stearns, of the Adrian Press. He admits to being a trifle over 63.—Hudson Post.

The Hastings Industrial Co., who have secured stock for the erection of a canning factory in Manchester have commenced the work of laying a foundation for the large factory on the Henson lot near the Ypsilanti branch.

An exchange tells about a visit to friends by Miss Sweetman. She ought to be of the masculine gender and come to Hudson, where half the girls are constantly on the lookout for a sweet man, and are often compelled to put up with some fellow of a more acrimonious nature.—Hudson Post.

Ed. Laberdie lost three loads of clover hay, which he had cut for seed and expected to hull yesterday or Wednesday. He drew it close to the barns, letting it stand on the wagons until hulling time, but in some way it caught fire after he and his men had gone home and burned together with three wagons. Loss about $200.—Deerfield Journal.

The squirrel season opened Tuesday, and a number of our sportsmen took advantage of the fact that this class of game is now unprotected by law, and went out and bagged a good lot of it. Squirrels in this section have been kept on the run at a lively gait since sunrise Monday morning, and the hunters are having all the fun they can attend to. The quail and partridge season opens October 20.—Adrian Press.

A young clerk was somewhat knocked out by a question of a farmer who came into the store to buy a pair of hip pads for his daughter. Now it happened that this young clerk was particularly sweet on the daughter and was paying her marked attention, so his feelings can hardly be expressed when the old gentleman in no quiet tones asked if he "thought those pads would fit and if they were about the proper thing."—Ex.

The two Georges—DePuy and Wilson went up to Evan's lake Wednesday afternoon to put their boat in winter quarters. George the 1st proposed to George the 2nd that they go out for a little while for a final fishing trip, not expecting to catch anything. When they started for home at 4 o'clock they had an extra cargo of 26 nice black bass, the result of an hour and a half's skipping. It is reported that Evans lake is the lowest it has been in years, but this is easily accounted for when one takes into consideration the large number of fish George Depuy has taken out of it.—Clinton Local.

The society for the prevention of cruelty to animals ought to do a little business in this neck of the woods, if the story we heard about one of our young men is true. According to his own testimony, he oiled his buggy last Sunday afternoon. In the evening he took his girl out for a little spin, and arrived home some time that night. The next day his father drove the same rig to Dundee, but before starting for home was obliged to have the buggy oiled again. This buggy is one of those patent kind that is supposed to run at least a thousand miles with one oiling, so the question naturally arises, didn't the aforesaid young man do some pretty hard driving?—Petersburg Sun.

Tecumseh has something new: it is an Interpean Fraternity; Hudson has an old fashioned cornet band, just launched; Adrian has a new orchestra; other places have choral unions, mandolin clubs etc; but none of these could satisfy the longings of Tecumseh's musical devotees. They must have something otherwise and much more so, and so they have organized an Inter Pean fraternity. Inter means between and we don't know what Pean is unless it is a general name for all kinds of musical gymnastics, but taken together it may indicate that the club members will drink between songs or sing between drinks as the case may be.—Blissfield Advance.

The Best Business College.

In selecting a business training school the best is not only the cheapest, but it is the only one to be considered. Business colleges are a feature of modern life, as business is now a science which is studied as it never was before. The best business college in America, in every point of age, efficiency, enterprise and proved results, is the Detroit Business University, Detroit, Mich. It points to fifty years of success, and has educated more students and found more positions for them than all other business colleges in Michigan combined. This is preeminently the college which fully meets the requirements of our ambitious young people, and it invites the strictest investigation of its claims. All interested should write for its illustrated catalogue, mailed free.

FINICKY TURKISH LADIES.

They Are Very Careful About What They Take In Their Hands.

Our Constantinople correspondent writes: It is not generally known that there exists among Turkish ladies of high class a kind of caste feeling similar to that prevailing among Hindoos. It takes the form of a fear of contamination from the outer world and is only observed, as far as I know, by those who cannot afford to keep servants in sufficient numbers. Before meals ladies always wash their hands at a tap from which the water runs into a marble basin. They will turn on the tap when they are just going to wash, but when they have finished they let the water run till somebody shuts it off, as to do it themselves would make them unclean. They cannot open or shut a door, as the handle would be unclean, so a slave is generally kept handy for the purpose.

One of these fastidious ladies was talking to a small niece the other day who had just received a present of a beautiful doll from Paris. The child presently laid the doll on the lady's lap, who was horrified and ordered the child to take it away. As the little girl would not move it and no servant was near, and the lady would be defiled by touching a doll that was brought from abroad, the only thing she could think of was to jump up and let the doll fall, which broke to pieces. The same lady will not open a letter coming by post, but a servant opens it and holds it near her for her to read. If her handkerchief falls to the ground, it is immediately destroyed or given away, so that she should not use it again. This curious state of exclusiveness or fanaticism exists, I am told, in many of the large harems. Among men it is not practiced.—London Telegraph.

ANIMAL LIFE.

In Maryland sparrows have been known to raise six broods in one year. In England there are seldom more than three broods.

Ostrich farms are profitable. Birds are worth $100 apiece, and a good specimen yields about $25 worth of feathers at a plucking.

Cats evince, as is well known, a curious emotional disturbance when in the neighborhood of valerian plant, of which they are very fond. It apparently produces in them a species of intoxication.

There are records of elephants that have lived for 200 years, and an age of 150 years is not regarded as so very old for an elephant. It takes about a quarter of a century to get the elephant to full maturity.

A French anatomist has analyzed the skeletons of 86 chimpanzees, gorillas and orang outangs and asserts that he has found in them bone diseases like those which afflict mankind and in about the same proportion.

He Was Satisfied.

A farmer entered an office in central New York and sent this message to a woman in Canada: "Will you be my wife? Please answer quick by telegraph." Although he waited the rest of the day, he got no answer, but the next morning he got a night dispatch, sent collect, but favorable. The operator in expressing his sympathy said, "Little rough to keep you in suspense so long."

"Look a-here, sonny," the farmer remarked, "I'll stand all the suspense. Any woman that'll hold back her answer all day to a proposal of marriage, jest so thet she kin send it half rate at night, is economical enough to make up after I git her for all the loss of time and injury to feelin's I've suffered waitin!"—Exchange.

Icebergs.

The captain of an ocean steamer is often warned of the proximity of icebergs by the men in the engine room. When a ship enters water considerably colder than that through which it has been going its propeller runs faster, and as such water surrounds the vicinity of icebergs for many miles the engineers know when the propeller's action is greatly accelerated without any increase of the steam power icebergs may be expected. Of course the thermometer is the most useful indicator of icebergs.

Two Calamitous Fires.

The two most calamitous fires ever known anywhere in the world occurred in the United States within 13 months of each other. In the first of these, in Chicago, on Oct. 8, 9, 1871, the property loss was $200,000,000, and in the second, in Boston, Nov. 9, 1872, $80,000,000 of property was consumed. In Chicago 100,000 persons were left without homes and 200 were killed. Chicago's heads the list of the world's destructive conflagrations.

Relieved.

"That must be a pretty bad toothache to swell your face like that. Why don't you see a dentist?"

"I did call on your friend, Dr. Pullem, yesterday, and experienced great relief."

"You must be mistaken. Pullem has been out of town for a week."

"I know. I felt relieved when I found that out."—Philadelphia Press.

ANN ARBOR SPEAKS.

Contractor Wooley, of Ann Arbor, Makes a Public Statement.

Mr. Edwin Wooley, contractor and carpenter of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence, No. 618 Fountain St. Mr. Wooley appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and he does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word througout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among the people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills." "little enemies to backache," modern wonder-workers," etc.

Mr. Wooley says: "I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains through the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull, heavy aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold which, as a rule, settled in my loins. I tried various remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At the time my back was troubling me a great deal but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This is months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-MilburnCo., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.. Remember the name Doan and take no substitute.

There is nothing a man does so unwillingly as to acknowledge himself in the wrong.

Scald head is an eczema of the scalp very severe sometimes, but it can be cured. Doan's Ointment, quick and permanent in its results. At any drug store, 50 cents.

Domestic Difference.

Mrs. Enpeck—James, you are good on language. What is the difference between exported and transported?

Mr. Enpeck—Why, my dear, if you should go to England, you would be exported, and I—well, I would be transported.—Sunny South.

The Kongo is one of the widest waterways on the globe, if not the finest. In some parts it is so wide that vessels may pass one another and yet be out of sight.

Brain-Food Nonsense.

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain another for muscles and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or to prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthly action, purifies the blood and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

How Pepper Is Prepared.

The pepper plant is propagated by cuttings, comes into bearing three or four years after it is set and yields two crops annually for about 12 years. When a few of the berries change from green to red, all of them are gathered, because if they were allowed to ripen any longer they would be less pungent. To fit them for market they are dried, separated by rubbing with the hands and cleaned by winnowing. The black pepper of commerce consists of the berries thus prepared.

The Right Handling of Books.

A book should not be bent back till the binding is cracked and loosened nor laid face downward on a chair or table nor left out over night in the rain, nor should its leaves be turned down to mark the place. Cultivate a good memory as to the page where you leave off and be independent of external aids.—Ladies' Home Journal.

General Lee's Answer.

After the surrender of Appomattox, General Wise came riding down the road furiously to where General Lee and his staff were grouped. He was splashed with mud from head to heels, and there were great splotches of mud dried and caked upon his face. Addressing General Lee, he asked in a theatrical voice, "Is it true, General Lee, that you have surrendered?"

"Yes, General Wise, it is true."

"I wish, then, to ask you one question. What is going to become of my brigade, General Lee, and what is going to become of me?"

General Lee looked at the splashed warrior for a full minute and then said calmly and in a low tone, "General Wise, go and wash your face."

THEY TWO.

They are left alone in the dear old home,
After so many years,
When the house was full of frolic and fun,
Of childish laughter and tears.
They are left alone, they two—once more
Beginning life over again,
Just as they did in the days of yore,
Before they were nine or ten.

And the table is set for two these days;
The children went one by one
Away from home on their separate ways
When the childhood days were done.
How healthily hungry they used to be!
What romping they used to do!
And mother—for weeping—can hardly see
To set the table for two.

They used to gather around the fire
While some one would read aloud,
But whether at study or work or play
'Twas a loving and merry crowd,
And now they are two that gather there
At evening to read or sew,
And it seems almost too much to bear
When they think of the long ago.

Ah, well—ah, well, 'tis the way of the world!
Children stay but a little while
And then into other scenes are whirled,
Where other homes beguile;
But it matters not how far they roam
Their hearts are fond and true,
And there's never a home like the dear old home,
Where the table is set for two.

A FIND ON THE BEACH

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.

The Palawan islands, in the China sea, are to the north of Borneo and form a part of the Philippine group. They stretch out for a distance of 700 miles and number nearly a thousand. In the year 1882 I was landed on one of the Palawans from a Singapore trader to get up and run a copra plant. I had with me four Chinese, and the trader landed provisions for a year. After I had the shed up and the work going I had plenty of time for fishing, hunting and visiting the other islands.

Nothing of special interest occurred until I had been on the island three months. Then one morning as I went down to the boat to put out on a fishing trip I was amazed to find tracks of a woman's bare feet on the wet sands. The tide was out, and she had wandered along the beach for half a mile, probably just before daylight. It needed only a glance to tell me that the person who had left the tracks was a white woman, but to make sure of it I called to the Chinamen. They at once agreed with me. There was a trail leading out of the water at one spot and another trail leading back at another spot, but none to show that the strange visitor to the island had scouted inland at all. We were on one of the outer, or seaward, islands, with nothing between us and the Cochin China coast. There was a small and almost barren island three miles to the north and a similar one about the same distance to the south, but I had visited both and found no people.

Whoever had visited our island in the darkness had come up out of the depths of the sea. No boat or raft had landed on the shore. The footprints were as plain as a plaster cast, and we were immediately interested and more or less excited. After thinking the matter over I decided that the woman must have come from one of the islands in some way and determined to give both a close search. I set off to the north and in the course of an hour made a landing. This island had an area of not more than five acres. Here and there a patch of soil covered the rocks, and young cocoanut trees were struggling for life, but the ground was easy of search. I went over it carefully and made the circuit of the island in my boat, but not a living thing did I see aside from the birds. There were no wild fruits to sustain life, nor was I able to find any fresh water.

It was noon when I got back to my own island, and after dinner I set out to search the other. As this one had more vegetation I took with me the boy, who was about 15 years of age and named Whang. As the wind was light and a current against us we were two hours in gaining the island. I was strong in the belief that some woman had been cast away and was shifting for herself, and that she had not made herself known to us simply proved that she had lost her reason under the strain of the hardships or took us for natives who would molest her. It was near sunset when we put off after a vain search, and when we reached the reef surrounding our island and half a mile out from the beach the evening breeze died out to a flat calm, and we lay like a log. Before taking to the oar to scull us in to the shore I sat quiet for a minute listening to the whispers of the sea. Whang leaned over the rail of the boat and watched the sharks darting to and fro and leaving trails of fire behind them, and things were so still that I could hear the ticking of my watch, when there came a strange interruption. It was the voice of a woman in laughter, and it sounded close by. We both sprang up at the sound, wondering if our ears had deceived us, and as we stood listening the sounds came again. When they had died away, the boy turned to me and whispered:

"Master, for God's sake let us get ashore at once! There is a witch of the sea close by, and she will drag us down!"

I waited ten minutes, and, hearing nothing more, I picked up the oar and sculled in to the landing. There I found the three Chinamen waiting for me, and they were in a state of great excitement. They had heard the laughter, and they believed with the boy that a witch of the sea was hanging about and meant to do us harm. Chinese life is made up of legends and superstitions, and it is useless to combat them. While I argued that there was a woman castaway about, and they could not dispute the fact of the tracks in the sand, I could not explain away the laughter. I simply contented myself with saying that we would leave some provisions on the beach that night and see if they were missing in the morning and with sleeping with one eye open to see that the frightened fellows did not steal the boat and make off to some other island.

We were down on the beach when daylight came, and there were fresh tracks again. The woman had circled about the heap of provisions, but had touched nothing. There was a trail leading out of the sea and another leading back, and there were 200 imprints of feet to look at. The Chinese were absolutely knocked out with consternation, and only my promise to watch the beach that night and capture or shoot the witch calmed them down. I remained with them all that day to prevent them from plotting, and it was not until midnight that I took up my watch on the shore. I had two revolvers as weapons, but I had no idea of shooting. I proposed to capture the thing, witch or woman, if it lay in my power. It was low tide at 2 o'clock. I was concealed behind a heap of brush and it was a starlight night. At that hour a figure which looked like a human being came out of the gentle surf and began to walk up and down the beach. As it walked away from me I rose up and went forward on tiptoe and was within 30 feet of it when it caught the alarm and fled back to the water like a shadow. I heard an exclamation of alarm and splashes in the water and saw the wake as the "it" swam away. I had meant to keep cool, but the sight of the figure excited me, and its escape when I figured on capture added to it, and so, hardly knowing what I did, I drew one of my revolvers and began firing as the swimmer moved away. I fired six shots, but I heard no cry of pain or other sound.

I went back to the Chinamen and found them chattering in terror, and if they had not been afraid of the witch they would have made a rush for the boat and left me alone on the island. I sat watching them till daylight came, and then we all went down to the beach. The tide was coming in, but we found tracks, as before. While we were hurrying about, arguing and discussing, the tide brought in the naked limb and foot of a woman, a white woman. It had been torn from the body by the sharks, and it was the foot which had made the tracks in the sand. One of my shots had struck and killed her as she swam away, and the blood had brought the savage sharks to the attack. There lay the limb before us, with the flesh hard and firm, though showing a bruise here and there, but no other part of the body came ashore. To whom the limb had belonged, how she was cast away there, where she was hiding, why she did not seek our protection—none of these questions can I answer. We buried the limb in the sands and heard no more of the nymph of the sea.

A Wonderful Shot.

"I remember," says Uncle Zekiel, "when a boy that Uncle Josie Johnson, while out gunning one day, got tired and sat down by a large pine tree in the Big Cove and fell asleep, but was awakened by a noise and on looking down at his feet saw a large rattlesnake. Putting up his gun he was about to shoot when he saw a fine deer about eight feet in front of him. He then took aim at the deer, when suddenly he heard a great fluttering overhead, and, looking up, he saw a large flock of wild turkeys. He no sooner saw them than he heard another noise in the bushes at his right, and, looking round, he saw a big bear gazing at him. Fearing that he was about to be devoured, he shot at the deer, when the gun busted.

"The bullet killed the deer, the lock fell down the rattler's throat and choked him to death, the barrels shot up into the air and killed the wild turkeys, the stock killed the bear by striking him between the eyes, and the concussion threw Uncle Josie backward.

"When he landed on his back in the middle of a brush heap, he found he had killed 40 rabbits. It took a two horse team to cart the game home."—Exchange.

Managing a Drawer.

A woman will take the smallest drawer in a dressing table for her own private use and will pack away in it bright bits of boxes of all shades and sizes, dainty fragments of ribbons, scraps of lace, foamy ruffles, velvet things for the neck, bundles of old love letters, pieces of jewelry, handkerchiefs, fans, things that no man knows the name of, all sorts of fresh, bright looking knickknacks that you couldn't catalogue in a column, and she can go to that drawer any hour of the day or night and pick out any article she may happen to want without disturbing anything else.

And a man, having the biggest and deepest and widest drawer assigned him, will throw into it three socks, a collar box, an old necktie, two handkerchiefs, a pipe and a pair of braces, and to save his life he can't shut that drawer without leaving more ends sticking out than there are things in it, and it always looks as though it had been packed with a hydraulic press.

The Man and the Lion.

"When I was once in danger from a lion," said an old African explorer, "I tried sitting down and staring at him, as I had no weapons."

"How did it work?" asked his companion.

"Perfectly. The lion didn't even offer to touch me."

"Strange. How do you account for it?"

"Well, sometimes I've thought it was because I sat down on a branch of a very tall tree."—Pearson's Weekly.

Church People Helped.

Owosso, Mich., Oct. 21.—Fire in a large double house occupied by the families of Wm. Horn and Wm. Greenwalt, did considerable damage last evening. Crowds going to church turned in to help the firemen save furniture, strewing the street for half a block with bedticks, chairs and tables. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

Changed His Plea.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 21.—Johnson Price, who was charged with horse stealing, pleaded guilty, but when the judge sent for him to impose a sentence he changed his plea. Price has been in Ionia prison before charged with entering a residence.

BRICKS WITHOUT STRAW.

More than a thousand years ago—
Shadows of time, how the days go by—
There was a man I used to know—
May seem strange, but you'll see it's so
After I tell you the reason why—
Worked in a brickyard, same as you
And all of us have to do;
Mixed in the trouble and worry and strife,
The mirth and the other things of life;
Stirred in the hopes and the pains and fears,
Kneaded the mud with his sweat and his tears,
Humanest mass that ever you saw.
"Poor brick!" said the man, "but I have no straw!"

Up to his knees in the miry pit,
A pygmy's way, but a giant's grit;
His back was a chain of throbbing aches,
Lifting the mold with its earthen cakes;
Elbows rusty as hinges of steel,
Knees so lame he could hardly kneel;
Mud so stiff it would clog a plow
And couldn't be stirred with a wheel nohow;
Nights as short as the days were long;
Nothing seemed right, but everything wrong.
"Best I can do," said the man; "but, pshaw,
You can't make brick when you have no straw!"

Taskmasters pitiless lashed the man.
"Can't!" sobbed Weakness, but Courage cried,
"Can!"
"Don't!" said Despair, but Duty cried, "Do!"
"All right," said the man, "I'll worry her through!
Can't do much, and I reckon you'll see
Brick won't be just what they ought to be;
Ain't nigh so good as I know I could make
If I just had straw; but you'll have to take
The best I can do for the work's own sake."

He finished his tale of brick and then Went home to rest, and the sons of men
Looked on his perfect work and saw
He'd have spoiled the brick had he put in straw.

Whale Houses.

At one time not very long ago there was on the Lancashire coast, near Lytham, England, a cottage and boathouse that were made almost entirely from the remains of a score or so of whales that had been driven ashore some years before. The framework of the edifice consisted wholly of whalebone, and the dried skins of the huge creatures were neatly and strongly fastened as a covering for walls and roof. There is another building of exactly the same kind at Peterhead, in Scotland, and in this case the skulls of the whales and some of the heavier bones are used with great effect as outside ornaments.

THE GREAT TONIC LAXATIVE

If you have sour stomach, indigestion, biliousness, constipation, bad breath, dizziness, inactive liver, heartburn, kidney troubles, backache, loss of appetite, insomnia, lack of energy, bad blood, blotched or muddy skin, or any symptoms and disorders which tell the story of bad bowels and an impaired digestive system, Laxakola Will Cure You.

It will clean out the bowels, stimulate the liver and kidneys, strengthen the mucous membranes of the stomach, purify your blood and put you "on your feet" again. Your appetite will return, your bowels move regularly, your liver and kidneys cease to trouble you, your skin will clear and freshen and you will feel the old time energy and buoyancy.

Mothers seeking the proper medicine to give their little ones for constipation, diarrhea, colic and similar troubles, will find Laxakola an ideal medicine for children. It keeps their bowels regular without pain or griping, acts as a general tonic, assists nature, aids digestion, relieves restlessness, clears the coated tongue, reduces fever, causes refreshing, restful sleep and makes them well, happy and hearty. ☞ Children like it and ask for it.

For Sale by All Druggists

Laxakola is not only the most efficient of family remedies, but the most economical, because it combines two medicines, viz: laxative and tonic, and at one price, 25c. or 50c. At druggists. Send for free sample to THE LAXAKOLA CO., 132 Nassau Street, N. Y., and mention the name of your druggist. ☞ We will express to any address on receipt of 50c. in stamps or post note, all charges prepaid, a large Family size bottle of Laxakola, sufficient to last for a long time.

TRAIN HELD UP

Robbers Held Up Express Train on Southern Pacific.

THE MESSENGER WAS GAME

Car Doors Were Blown Off and Bullets Fired, But the Man Inside Held His Own and Used His Shotgun Vigorously.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 24.—The northbound Southern Pacific overland express train, which was held up near Eugene yesterday morning, arrived here in the afternoon. The express car is badly shattered, but it was brought in with the train.

"The first intimation I had of anything wrong," said C. F. Charles, the express messenger, "was when the train began to slow up near Walkers Station. It was 2:45 o'clock, as near as I remember. Shortly after that the train came to a standstill, and I was ordered to open the door. I refused to move. 'Open up this car or we will blow you to hell,' commanded one of the robbers. I made no response and was given a salute with dynamite. The first charge blew open one of the doors and knocked me down. My overalls were blown into shreds and my legs scratched somewhat, but otherwise I was unhurt. Further commands to open up and threats followed, but without avail. I made no reply, knowing that the object of the robbers was to locate me in the car and then try to put me out of the way, either by dynamite or bullets. I changed my station to the other end of the car. A second shot blew open the door at the other end of the car. The third shot failed to go off, as I had removed my shoes and quietly walked over to the dynamite and detached the fuse. Two more shots exploded, each of them blowing a hole in the floor of the car. All told, four shots went off in the car, two failed to explode and one I prevented from exploding by removing the fuse. All efforts to compel me to open up or leave the car failing, the engineer was sent in through the opening blown in the side. I ordered him to get out and fired a shot over his head with my shotgun. The entire affair lasted about 40 minutes. The engineer retired after I fired the shot and ordered him to leave, and I was not molested further."

San Francisco, Oct. 24.—The Southern Pacific company has offered a reward of $250 for the arrest of each of the robbers implicated in the Eugene, Ore., hold-up.

Eugene, Ore., Oct. 24.—Officers who have been searching for the train robbers have been unable to secure any trace of the men. Their tracks show that they started toward Eugene after leaving the engine. There is absolutely no clue to their identity.

PROSPERITY IN SPOTS.

Spinners Want Increase In Wages; Iron Workers Got It.

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 24.—Secretary O'Donnell of the cotton spinners' union said that nothing now could prevent a strike of the cotton mill operatives of this city unless the manufacturers receded from their determination not to advance the rate of wages. The excitement which followed the announcement of an advance of 5 per cent at the iron works mills Tuesday has subsided, but the operatives, who were conservative in their strike attitude when the manufacturers' association refused to meet the previous raise given by Mr. Borden, owner of the iron works mills, of whom the spinners were among the most careful, now seem to be unanimous in favor of forcing a general increase if it cannot be obtained otherwise.

NO CHARGE MADE.

Messenger Armitage Was Liberal With the Bank's Money.

New York, Oct. 24.—Marie Forrest, Seymour Kahn and Leona Kahn, who surrendered to the police and gave up $485 of the money taken from the New Amsterdam bank by Messenger Geo. Armitage, were discharged from custody by Magistrate Crane yesterday. They claimed in court that Armitage had told them that he hal fallen into a legacy and that they had no idea the money was stolen. No charge had been made against them and the court declined to give the district attorney and the bank 24 hours further time in which to do so.

Both Parties Open Campaign.

Bucyrus, O., Oct. 24.—The peculiar situation is presented in Ohio of the two parties not only differing on issues, but also as to what are the issues. At the republican opening at Delaware last Saturday, none of the five speakers referred to state issues. At the democratic opening of the campaign here yesterday, state issues were paramount in all of the six speeches of the afternoon, and of the same number at the night meeting. Nearly all the speakers denounced yesterday what they called "firing from behind the tomb of McKinley."

Booker T. Dined Again.

New Haven, Oct. 24.—Booker T. Washington, who is attending the Yale bicentennial celebration, was a guest of Morris F. Tyler, treasurer of the university, at a dinner at Mr. Tyler's residence on Monday evening. Former Postmaster-General Bissell also accepted an invitation to dine with Mr. Tyler that evening, and met Mr. Washington. Mr. Tyler said that the invitations were sent and accepted about ten days before Mr. Washington dined with President Roosevelt in Washington.

Highwayman Arrested.

Monroe, Mich., Oct. 24.—Olin Clark, Edward Laboe and Alfred Ducio, who held up Edward Donnelly Monday night, have been arrested and will have a hearing today on a charge of highway robbery.

SCOTTISH RITE OFFICERS.

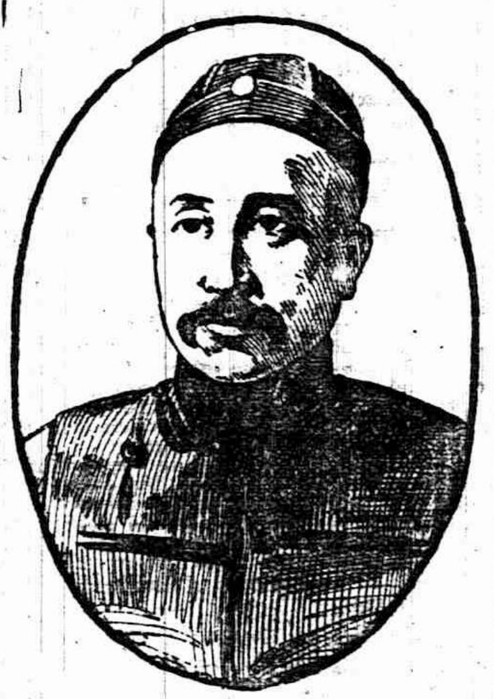
The Annual Session Has Elected Officers for the Ensuing Year.

New York, Oct. 24.—The supreme council of sovereign inspectors general, 33d degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Free Masonry, gathered here in annual session, has elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

H. W. Bayliff, Washington, D. C., sovereign grand commander; Willard C. Vanderlip, Boston, lieutenant grand commander; Calvin W. Edwards, Albany, minister of state; Edward P. Metcalf, Providence, R. I., treasurer general; Arthur L. Hamilton, Columbus, O., secretary general; James H. Curtin, New York city, keeper of seals dence, grand master of ceremonies; John J. Stoddard, Columbus, O., grand marshal general; John A. Glidden, Dover, N. H., standard bearer; Wm. F. Butler, Boston, captain of the guard; Rev. J. B. Wright, Washington, grand prior.

Wu Ting Fang Too Popular.

Pekin, Oct. 24.—There is strong opposition among conservative Chinese officials to Wu Ting Fang, Chinese minister at Washington, retaining a foreign mission. Those who take this view consider that his popularity abroad is a proof that he is not sufficiently loyal to the interests of China.



WU TING FANG.

It is probable that he will be recalled and given a position on the new board of foreign affairs, where his linguistic and legal attainments may be utilized under the eye of the government.

MAY DRIVE THEM OUT.

Heavy Cold Rains Are Falling in the Brigands' Retreat.

Constantinople, Oct. 24.—Cold rains are falling in the district where the brigands who abducted Miss Ellen M. Stone are concealed, and a prolonged stay in the mountains is believed to be almost impossible, even for the brigands. Hence it is considered likely that they will hasten to release their captive as soon as they can secure the ransom, and then disperse to their homes.

No word has come from the missionaries today, though W. W. Peet, treasurer of the mission here, to whom they would communicate, is still hopeful. Mr. Peet is not expecting news until he is asked to forward the gold, which, it is estimated, will weigh between 300 and 400 pounds.

INDIAN POW WOW.

The Cherokees Want Secretary Hitchcock Restrained From Selling Land.

Washington, Oct. 24.—The Cherokee Indian nation, through its principal chief, Thomas M. Buffington, and Treasurer J. M. La Hay, also J. R. McIntosh and Henry C. Meigs, Cherokee citizens, all claiming to represent 35,000 Cherokee Indians, have instituted equity proceedings against Secretary Hitchcock and other officials to enjoin them from granting leases of Cherokee lands for mining purposes. The court issued a rule against Secretary Hitchcock to show cause by Oct. 31 why the injunction should not be granted.

The Erin Has Sailed.

New York, Oct. 24.—The yacht Erin, belonging to Sir Thomas Lipton, and tender to the yacht Shamrock II., sailed for Southampton yesterday. She left Erie basin early in the afternoon and at 3:10 passed quarantine.

The Suspension Bridge.

There is no doubt that the first idea of a suspension bridge was suggested to primitive man by the interlacing of tree branches and parasitical plants across rivers. Probably monkeys used them before men did. In very mountainous countries, such as Tibet and Peru, they have apparently been used since the dawn of history, possibly earlier.

Saving Requires Character.

WISEMAN'S STORY

The Convict Says He Saw Hale Do the Deed.

HE STRANGLED MRS. HUSS

The Story Is Considered By the Prosecutor to Be Evidence Enough to Convict Wiseman — Hale Was Stunned by the Confession.

Jackson, Mich., Oct. 24.—Convict Henry Wiseman, charged with the murder of Mrs. Christopher Huss near Royal Oak, on Sept. 20, 1890, yesterday made the startling statement that he saw the woman killed, but did not do the job. Hitherto Wiseman has made conflicting statements. At first he said he could not remember the incident when Mrs. Huss called at his house to ask where she could buy some wood. Later, he admitted he saw here and gave a minute description of her wearing apparel. Then he said he merely pointed out the way for her and did not enter the patch of woods in which the woman's body was found on Oct. 6, 1901. Now he says he saw her killed and declares that Robert Hale, the mulatto, strangled her to death in his presence.

Yesterday morning, when informed that Hale had been taken to Detroit and that his story corroborated the evidence already unearthed against him, Wiseman finally told the story implicating Hale.

"Mrs. Huss inquired where an old German lived," said Wiseman, "and I offered to show her the way. The woman told me Hale was at the Pontiac fair; that he was very jealous and that she was afraid of him. Just then we passed a big elm tree. Hale jumped out, covering us with two revolvers. He forced me to my knees, and, pointing one revolver at me, he tripped Mrs. Huss up, put his foot on her neck and strangled her. He took the ring from his pocket and threw it at me, telling me to go home. He threatened to shoot me and my wife and to burn the house and barn if I ever told anyone about the murder. I was terribly frightened and ran for home. The whole affair occurred in about 20 minutes."

Pontiac, Mich., Oct. 24.—Prosecutor Rockwell admitted yesterday afternoon that Wiseman had told him the story implicating Hale substantially as related in the Jackson dispatch, with the exception that the convict entered into the details of the death struggle. The prosecutor declared the story is so absurd and improbable that it alone is sufficient to convict the man.

When Robert Hale was informed of Wiseman's story implicating him, he was stunned, but exclaimed that he returned voluntarily and is ready to answer all questions and explain his conduct as well as he can.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Michigan pensions were granted Wednesday as follows: Increase—Jacob Mowrey, Bloomingdale, $24; Marshall Warner, Dundee, $17; John Y. Hatfield, Eaton Rapids, $24; Krusenperry, Oxford, $12; Frank Dutcher, Otsego, $12; Jacob Jarschenski, Isadore, $10; Oliver H. Greenfield, Lansing, $10; Sylvanous Soles, Dundee, $17; Burt Carr, Vassar, $12; Enos N. Burt, Martin, $24; Winfield S. Plumb, Lawton, $17; Wm. Ellis, dead, Lansing, $21; Wm. H. Holden, Battle Creek, $12; Ruby C. Savage, Dildine, $8; Annette Shively, Hastings, $12.

Sentenced at Bay City.

Bay City, Mich., Oct. 24.—In the United States court yesterday afternoon, Harvey U. Boyle, ex-postmaster at Breckenridge, was fined $100 and costs by Judge Swan for embezzlement. When Boyle retired from office his accounts were found nearly $1,000 short. He was arrested and made good nearly all of the amount. The cases against Charles Holden for violation of the postal laws, Isaac Smith and Alfred Devereaux for passing counterfeit money, and John Butcher, for making molds for counterfeiting, were nolle prossed.

Sickness in Michigan.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 24.—Reports to the state board of health by representative physicians in active general practice in different parts of the state indicate that rheumatism, bronchitis, neuralgia, diarrhoea and tonsilitis, in the order named, caused most sickness in Michigan during the past week. Cerebrospinal meningitis was reported present at 2 places, measles at 12, whooping cough at 21, smallpox at 29, diphtheria at 42, scarlet fever at 88, typhoid fever at 113 and consumption at 178.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

A 150-barrel flour mill is being constructed at Prescott by a joint stock company.

Mrs. John Miller of Pokagon, through an error, burned $100 in a heating stove.

The Jackson Novelty Co.'s plant was scorched to the extent of $3,000 by a fire which started in the blacksmith shop.

Ransom Richards, a farmer living two miles west of Willow, lost his barn and contents by fire. Two horses were also burned. Loss $1,500; small insurance.

John Hamilton, who had lived at Alpena 20 years, went violently insane and was put in a straightjacket. He died in agony at the county jail.

The cigarmakers' strike at Flint, which has been on since July, is ended, the men going back to work at the same scale they were receiving when the strike was ordered.

Perry, the 15-year-old son of Ralph Moore of West Branch, was accidentally shot near Rose City by a rifle in the hands of Mrs. Ed Moore, who was trying to load it. Not dangerous.

Statue of Albert Pike.

Washington, Oct. 24.—The heroic bronze statue of Gen. Albert Pike, for many years the grand commander of the Ancient and Accepted Order of Scottish Rite Masons for the southern jurisdiction, was unveiled Wednesday. General Pike died in 1891. The statue stands at the corner of Third and D streets, Northwest. The exercises were conducted by the grand lodge.

Dr. G. S. Burroughs Dead.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Oct. 24.—Dr. George Stockton Burroughs, professor of Old Testament literature in Oberlin college, and from 1892 to 1899 president of Wabash college, died last night at Clifton Springs, N. Y. The funeral will take place today at Fairfield, Conn. Some time ago Dr. Burroughs fell and broke one of his arms.

SCHLEY COURT INQUIRY.

Testimony of Boastwain Hill Brought Forth Cheers From Spectators.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Admiral Schley is expected to take the witness stand in the naval court of inquiry, which is investigating his conduct in the Spanish war, some time during today. This announcement is justified by the progress made yesterday in the examination of witnesses called to testify in the admiral's behalf. Eight witnesses were heard yesterday, and there are only three more names on the list preceding the name of the admiral himself. Of these three, only Captain Clark of the Oregon is expected to testify at any length. It is not probable that the admiral will be called before the afternoon session. He will be the last of the witnesses to be heard in support of his side of the controversy. It is now considered probable that he will be on the stand for two or three days.

It is not yet possible to say whether any witnesses will be called in rebuttal by the court, but it seems probable that a few persons may be summoned for this purpose. The testimony yesterday led Judge Advocate Lemly and Mr. Hanna to decide upon the calling of at least one rebutting witness if he can be found.

While Boatswain Hill was giving his testimony, which was very complimentary to Admiral Schley, there were two outbursts of applause. These were promptly suppressed by Admiral Dewey.

BANK WILL RESUME.

National of Boyertown Will Open Today by Order of Comptroller.

Washington, Oct. 24.—The comptroller of the currency has authorized the temporary receiver of the National Bank of Boyertown, Pa., to turn over the assets of the bank to the directors and to permit the bank to resume business on Thursday morning, the 24th instant.

The suspension of this bank was due to the abstraction of about $165,000 of the securities by the late cashier, M. A. Mory. The receiver reports that the bank recovered all of these securities except 400 shares of the American Smelting company stock, which were hypothecated by the late cashier. The bank will sustain a loss through the cashier's transactions of about $20,000, which amount may be recovered from his bondsmen. In all other respects, the receiver reports the transactions of the bank to have been regular and that it is now in a solvent condition and prepared to resume business.

Contractors After Business.

Havana, Oct. 24.—Bids for the Havana sewering and paving contract were opened yesterday. They were as follows:

The Pan-American Constructing Co., $11,485,896.06; the McArthur Co. of New Jersey, $11,480,964.41; the Havana Construction Co., $11,214,506.46; S. P. McGivney and R. T. Rockeby of Jersey City, $10,393,015.99. The municipal council has taken the bids under consideration. As yet no provision has been made to pay for sewer construction, and it is doubtful whether the contract will be awarded.

Shaffer Will Consult.

Pittsburg, Oct. 24.—President T. J. Shaffer of the Amalgamated association has arranged to go to New York Friday night to consult with the officials of the American Tinplate Co. in regard to some minor scale complications which have arisen in several of the out-of-town plants. The conference, it is intimated, will renew the friendly relations that existed between the tinplate officials and the Amalgamated association previous to the recent strike.

Brigands Still at It.

London, Oct. 24.—"Seven brigands held up a diligence that was proceeding to Sassari, in Sardinia, with a registered mail bag," says a dispatch from Rome to the Daily Express. "Shots were exchanged and two carbineers who were escorting the diligence were wounded, while a lady passenger was killed. The robbers looted the diligence, but in the scuffle the postal clerk escaped with the registered letters."

Road Lined With Pilgrims.

Pueblo, Colo., Oct. 24.—The road to Buelah, in the southwest end of this county, is lined with pilgrims on the way to the new gold field. Ore brought in today is said to assay $1,200 per ton. The locality is not over five miles from Buelah, a well-known summer resort.

VERY FIERCE FIRE

G. H. Hammond & Co. Visited by a Disastrous Fire.

IMMENSE PLANT DESTROYED

Chicago Was Asked for Help and Sent Four Engines to the Burning District—Local Fire Company Were Unable to Cope With Flames.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—Fire attacked the packing houses of the G. H. Hammond company at Hammond, Ind., last night and within an hour gained such headway that the destruction of the plant was feared. The Hammond fire department and the private fire fighting company of the packing company were unable to cope with the flames, and an emergency call was sent to Chicago and South Chicago. Four engines from the Chicago department were loaded upon a special train on the Fort Wayne road and hurried over cleared tracks to the burning district. Aid was also sent from South Chicago.

The fire began at the south end of the plant in an old frame house, used as the beef killing department. In an hour the car shops, oiling rooms, beef killing department and blacksmith shops were destroyed. It then seemed that the fire had burned itself out, but in a few minutes the four-story brick building containing the cooling rooms, one of the company's largest buildings of the plant, was burning. At 10 p. m. the fire was burning fiercely, and the loss up to that time was estimated at $400,000.

The packing company's plant covers 15 acres. Eighteen hundred men are employed in the cooling department. The company has branches in South Omaha, St. Joseph, Mo., and Kansas City, Mo.

REDMOND'S HOT TALK.

He Says That England Must Fight All the Irishmen.

Cork, Oct. 24.—John Redmond, M. P., in the course of the general reply which he made here Tuesday to the numerous addresses presented to him, previous to his departure for the United States, laid particular stress on his contention that his mission to America could be taken as proof that the reunion which had occurred in Ireland had also occurred in the United States, and that England, hereafter, would have to fight the world-wide Irish race, of twenty millions, "whose action is only limited to one consideration, namely, that all means were honorable and just in the sight of God, and who preferred to be linked to the meanest free country on earth than to the British empire."

CHANG AND CHING

Revived the Old Treaty Which Will Hit Missionaries.

Pekin, Oct. 24.—Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching continue to deal jointly with the questions currently submitted by the ministers of the powers. They will sign themselves as plenipotentiaries, although it was supposed by the foreign envoys that their duties in that capacity ended with the delivery of the indemnity bond.

They are holding the ministers of the powers to a more strict enforcement of the treaty stipulations, requiring foreigners to give notice of an intention to go into the interior in order to afford opportunity for making protective arrangements. This stipulation has been largely ignored of late years, and its revival and vigorous enforcement would chiefly hamper the missionaries.

UNVEILED GLADSTONE'S STATUE.

John Morley Lauded England's Great Man at Manchester.

London, Oct. 24.—John Morley, unveiling a statue of Gladstone at Manchester yesterday, said in the course of an eloquent eulogy:

"Gladstone misread the civil war in America, but he misread it in common with nearly all the leading statesmen of the time. Let us remember, however, that no man was more ready to admit how grievously he had erred and that he made the noblest reparation ever made for rash word by healing deed in the Geneva arbitration, while the Alabama arbitration inaugurated the first substantial precedent for the substitution of reason for force."

G. A. R. Asked to Help.

Minneapolis, Oct. 24.—Commander-in-Chief Eli Torrance has issued a circular letter asking contributions for the purpose of erecting, at Canton, O., a memorial to Comrade William McKinley. Members of the G. A. R. are urged to contribute to the fund. Contributions should be forwarded to Ryerson Ritchie, secretary, Cleveland, O. In due time souvenir certificates will be issued to all donors.

Thinks We Are Hustlers.

London, Oct. 24.—The Daily Mail today publishes an interview with Chas. B. Elliott, former manager of the Cape government railways, on the result of his recent visit to the United States.

"American industrial competition is serious," says Mr. Elliott, "as it has only just begun. Splendid new machinery and new methods are everywhere in preparation, and work will be undertaken on such a scale as to make successful competition difficult."

REVERIES OF A BACHELOR.

What treasures dear of the days agone
Are these which I cherish now?
What loves they tell of the withered past,
Of many a careless vow!

A curling lock from a giddy head
That prisons a glint of gold;
It had a place in my heart until
The love in my heart grew cold.

A slipper—mold of her pretty foot,
A dainty affair of pink;
It tripped so light in the olden days
That lie behind, link by link.

The scarlet strand of a ribbon worn
And faded by passing time;
It glowed so warm at her snow white throat
When life was a joyous rhyme.

A kerchief daintily edged in lace,
A bit of a spotless thing;
What subtle sense of a dying love
Its delicate odors bring!

What treasures dear of the days agone
Are these which I cherish now!
What loves they tell of the withered past,
Of many a careless vow!

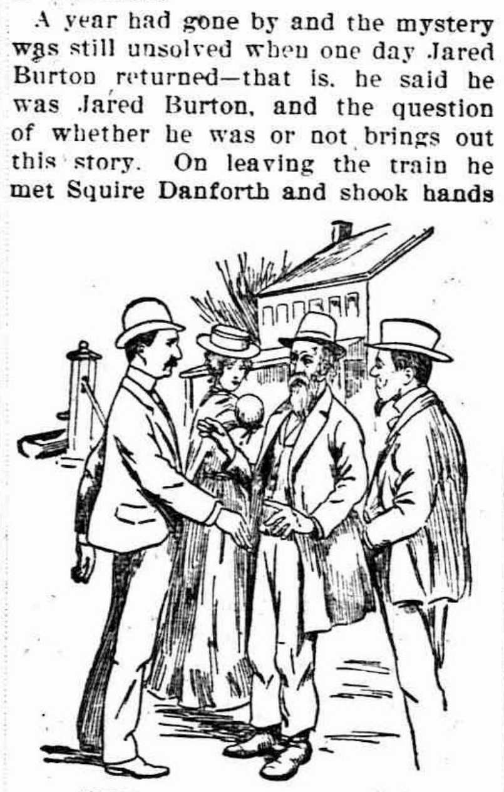
The Case of Jared Burton.

BY M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.

On the 14th day of September, 1867, Jared Burton, a single man of 30, living in a village in Iowa, started by railroad for a town 30 miles distant, and he has not returned to his home and relatives since. He was a man in more than comfortable circumstances, and his mother and sister lived with him. Boy and man, he had lived in the village for 20 years when he set out that day on a business matter. When several days had passed without his return or word from him, inquiries were made. He had arrived at the town all right, transacted his business and then taken a train on another road. It was thought he had gone away in the company of a stranger, but no one could be sure of this. After ten days and still no word he was advertised for, and detectives were employed to hunt him up. The search was not given up for three months, and then it was believed that he was dead.

A year had gone by and the mystery was still unsolved when one day Jared Burton returned—that is, he said he was Jared Burton, and the question of whether he was or not brings out this story. On leaving the train he met Squire Danforth and shook hands with him and asked after the mother and sister. Farther up the street he met a village merchant and shook hands and laughingly said that he had been east in search of a wife. He walked to his house, entered and called to the family and kissed mother and sister and apologized for having worried them as he had. He had the age, height, look and voice of Jared, and at first the women accepted him as such. The story he told was a queer one. He had gone to look at a lead mine with a view of buying, and during the short time he was left alone he had tumbled down an old shaft. He knew no more after that until he suddenly came to himself one day in a town in Kansas and found himself a tramp. The fall had produced concussion of the brain, and, though treated by doctors, he had lost his memory and his identity and only recovered his wits when a constable banged his head against a door in arresting him. He had told his story, found friends and been assisted to reach his home.



"THIS IS NOT JARED BURTON."

The story passed all right with the women for a day or two, but as it got around the village and was discussed pro and con they began to doubt. Of the five doctors in town four declared the thing impossible. Of the 1,500 inhabitants not more than ten were satisfied of the truth of the story. The matter spread until two or three counties were interested and a dozen newspapers were discussing it, and first and last a good many people had their say about it. The first idea, of course, was to test this Jared Burton's memory about the events of his life. It was a great point in his favor that he had recognized two or three citizens at the moment of his arrival and that later on he had met dozens of others and made no mistake except in one instance. He had seemed thoroughly familiar with the house and with certain business matters, and while he did not write as free a hand as formerly it passed for Jared's chirography. He had with him the key of his desk; he asked after certain clothing he had left; he casually recalled various incidents, and he had settled down as the long lost returned when he learned that his identity was questioned. He promptly demanded the fullest and closest investigation, and the doubters were ready to make it.

In his boyhood days Jared Burton had received a burn on the foot, leaving a bad scar. This man exhibited the scar. Jared Burton had been bitten on the calf of the leg by a dog. Here was the scar of the bite. He had once been near death by drowning. This man told of the incident. He had been in Chicago with his uncle for a week; he had fallen off the roof of a barn; he had been on a jury in a lawsuit; he had been robbed by a man on the highway. All these things were told over without a mistake, together with hundreds of other incidents. It was a public investigation, with everybody free to ask questions, and it lasted four days. There were still some who carped after it was closed, but there was a complete change of popular opinion, and Jared Burton was complimented on all sides. The mother and sister fully accepted him, and he settled down into his place unquestioned. Three months had gone by, and the talk and wonder had all died out when a blind man came along one day. He was known in various villages as "Old Hanson." He sang songs, told fortunes and performed tricks and was well liked. Standing on the public square with a crowd around him, he sang songs and then asked if Jared Burton was among the spectators. Jared stepped forward, and the old man took him by the hand. It was his boast that, having once heard a man's voice and shaken hands with him, he could forever after identify him by the feel of his grasp.

"This is not Jared Burton!" he exclaimed as he let the hand fall.

"But it is," chorused a dozen voices.

"But I say it is not. It is not his hand. I never met this hand before."

"You will believe it is Jared Burton when I tell you so, won't you?" asked Jared.

"No. You cannot deceive me on the palm. You are a stranger to me."

There had been an investigation and an acquittal, but yet the blind man's words set people to thinking, especially as Jared himself seemed to be greatly put out. The whole question would have been reopened again but that he started off for Chicago next day on what he claimed was a matter of business. He had a close shave of it. He hadn't been gone two hours when a sheriff from a distant county came to arrest him as one of a gang of land stealers and counterfeiters. He was followed, but not overhauled. His real name was Charles Wright. As to what became of the true Jared Burton no one can say, but he doubtless met his death in some way through falling into the hands of the gang. He had papers with him, but how they got him to talk and give the incidents of his life cannot be understood. It was a curious thing that another man should so closely resemble him and should bear the same scars, but it was a fact not to be got over. The blind man and the sheriff declared the man to be a cheeky impostor, and the latter furnished plenty of proofs, but the question has not been settled yet and perhaps never will be. I passed a day in the village not long ago, and I found the people about evenly divided as to whether the true Jared had not actually returned and been driven off again.

Gutenberg's Achievement.

In The Century Augustine Birrell thus characterizes Gutenberg's epoch making invention:

The invention of movable types was the greatest distributive invention that ever was or probably ever can be made. It circulated knowledge among the children of men and plays much the same part in human life as does the transmission of force in the world of physics. It was marvelous how quickly thought was circulated even in the age of manuscripts. A book like St. Augustine's "City of God" was soon copied thousands of times and traveled all through Europe after a quicker fashion than most printed books can today reasonably hope to do, but St. Augustine occupied a unique position, and hand copying, though a great trade, employing thousands of scribes, could never have fed the new learning or kept alive the reformation. The age of Gutenberg was an age of ideas and demanded books. Just as our day is a day of mechanics and demands cheap motion, telegraphy and telephones. Gutenberg's first printing office is marked by a tablet. Go and gaze upon it and think of the New York Herald, the London Times and the Bible for twopence.

The Horse He Bought.

Higgins is troubled with an overweening curiosity about other people's affairs. Occasionally he gets taken down, however.

He met Smithers in a car; he does not know Smithers very well, but he "me boy's" him as if he were a lifelong friend.

"Busy, eh?" he inquired at once.

"Yes," said Smithers deliberately; "been looking after a horse for my wife."

"Have, eh? Well, let me look over him for you."

"Oh, I've bought him."

"Not without trying him? Was he sound?"

"He appeared to be."

"Doesn't shy?"

"No, certainly not."

"Good mouth?"

"Y-e-s, I think so."

"Good manners?"

But here Smithers arrived at his street. When the reached the door, he called back to Higgins:

"I neglected to mention the kind of horse my wife wanted. It was a clotheshorse."

TOOK HIM LITERALLY.

That Was Why His Signature Was Rejected at the Bank.

"Bank clerks are so often called upon for directions that they sometimes fall into the habit of giving them in a hurried and mechanical manner, consequently they are frequently misunderstood," remarked the clerk of a savings institution to a reporter the other day. "For instance, the usual formula when a stranger is called upon to sign his name is, 'Sign here; pen and ink at your left hand.' One morning last week a stranger entered our bank and asked me for a certificate of deposit for a considerable sum of money which he handed over. I counted the money and found the amount to be as stated and hurriedly said, 'Sign there, sir; pen and ink at your left hand.'

"Well, it took the stranger a long time to sign his name, but I thought nothing more of it and issued the certificate of deposit. About a week later the same man, whose face I had forgotten, reappeared and presented the certificate. He dashed off an ornate signature, which I proceeded to compare with the first signature. The two were vastly different, as the first one was apparently the labored effort of an old man.

"'I can't pay you this money, sir,' I said.

"'Why not?' asked the astonished stranger.

"'Because it is not the signature of the man to whom I issued the certificate of deposit,' I replied.

"'Well,' said the stranger, 'when I was here a week ago you told me to write my name with my left hand, and I did so, but I can't write very well that way.'

"'Then will you oblige me by writing your name with your left hand again,' I asked as a light dawned upon me.

"'Certainly,' said the man, and after much labor he produced a facsimile of his first signature, and I apologized and paid him his money."—Washington Star.

Hands Off.

"Because," returned the jocular mill owner, "my men are on strike."—Philadelphia Record.

REMEMBER DATE OF VISIT

By the latest scientific researches both by improved instruments and methods, the Doctor is enabled to discover the true nature of the disease and locate the organ or parts affected and many diseases and complications which have heretofore proved most obstinate to the Medical profession yield like magic under his skill and systematic treatment.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It costs nothing to see him, for consultation is free and his prices for treatment are within the reach of all. He is a friend to the afflicted and will turn none away unaided. The merchant mingles with the artisan while seeking relief at his hands and hundreds are cured every year.

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs. D. L. Henning, of Adrian, says: I called at the Emery House, Adrian, on Sept. 14 last and consulted Dr W. C. Walker regarding my case and at once began treatment, and after taking a month's treatment of Dr. Walker. I feel like a new person. No one but a woman could know how I have suffered during the past nine years. His treatment has done wonders for me. I advise those afflicted with any chronic trouble to consult Dr. Walker. Signed MRS D L HENNING, Adrian, Oct 12, 01

Mr. Chas. Maltby, of Milan, Mich., says: I was taken with Lagrippe last winter; soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system; my sufferings at times were intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I move around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health.
Signed CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was."

I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment, Had tried everything I could hear of before with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker." Signed W. W. MURPHY
Samaria, Monroe Co., Mich., June 25, 1901.

Mr. A. C. Crittenden, a well-known business man of Carleton, Mich., states: I took a course of treatment of Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, some 2 years ago and I take pleasure in saying the doctor made a permanent cure of my case. There has been no return of former trouble.

Mrs Chas Todd, of Hamburg, Livingston county Michigan, says: "About four years ago my trouble began The doctors called my disease consumption of the bowels. From the time I was first taken I steadily grew worse in spite of all medical aid I realized I was on the decline and that death was staring me in the face In this condition I went to Dr W C Walker, of whose skill I had heard so much After taking a course of his treatment I am entirely cured I feel very grateful"

Children's Meals.

Children should be taught to be regular at their meals and to take nothing between meals. This rule applies to infants as well as to older children. The practice of feeding the little one every time it cries is a most serious injury to its weak digestive organs. An infant's stomach, though it needs food at more frequent intervals—two to four hours, according to its age—requires the same regularity which is essential to the maintenance of healthy digestion in older persons. The irregularity usually practiced is undoubtedly one of the greatest causes of the fearful mortality of infants from disorders of the digestive organs, as appears in our mortuary reports.

Getting Rich.

The Haywod Bros well known in Tecumseh, on account of the concerts given by them years ago are getting rich in the oil business down in Texas. The following from "The Investor" of Denver Col. gives quite an account of their oil speculations Their friends in Tecumseh trust that they may be worth ten times as much and wish them all success in their undertaking.

W. Scott Heywood was in San Francisco when he picked up a paper which told of the first gusher at Beaumont, Texas. Without waiting to pack his trunk Heywood hastened aboard an outgoing train, bound for Texas. Enroute he telegraphed his brothers in Chicago, announcing that he was on his way to Texas to go in the oil business. The answer was, "Play ball; be careful on first ball, but play ball."

Arriving at Beaumont. Heywood secured a lease on fifteen acres on Spindletop hill. He sold half of the lease for money enough to pay the entire obligation and proceeded to bore for oil. The first well spouted 217 feet into the air and was pouring at the rate of 100.000 barrels of oil in twenty-four hours when the well was plugged up. Three great gushers were opened.

An offer was refused of $500,000 for a half interest in one of the gushers. The Heywoods are now classed among the millionaires and theatrical managers are asking in vain, "Where is the Heywood company?"

Louis B Addis

Died at the residence of John H Hialey Tuesday evening of old age. He was born at Doylestown Penn. in 1817. He came to Tecumseh at the age of sixteen and has lived here and in this vicinity ever since. Mr. Addis was a familiar figure about the streets of Tecumseh always kind and cheerful and a friend to everyone. For the last few years his home has been with his niece Mrs John H. Hialey. and although having lived to this extreme age he was thoughtful, cheerful and pleasant to the last.

Uncle Louis Addis will always be pleasantly remembered and in years gone by he spent his substance caring and doing for others. The funeral was held from the Hialey home Thursday afternoon and conducted by Rev W. F. Jones.

QUICKLY MARRIED

Capt. F. B. Chilson and Miss Mabel Clements

MARRIED AT SANDUSKY

At 2:30 o'clock Tuesday Afternoon

The people of Tecumseh were greatly surprised when they learned that Capt. Chilson and Mable Clements were married at Sandusky Tuesday afternoon The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev Edward A Steiner of the First Congregational church. The happy couple left immediately on Capt. Chilson's boat "The Colonial"

The engagement of the couple was announced some three months since and it was supposed that the wedding would be about Christmas time, consequently it was a surprise, the suddeness of the event.

Miss Mable Clements has lived with Mrs. Mary Sutton in Tecumseh for several years was known and loved by all the young people here. She is a beautiful and delightful young lady and Capt Chilson can be congratulated on winning so lovely a girl as a wife.

Capt Chilson is the eldest son of Capt E. D. Chilson and has been captian of the "Colonial" for three years He is a well posted steam boat man, comes from a well respected family and is thought well of by associates here and elsewhere. The Herald joins with many friends in congratulations and wishes them a happy life.

That genial comedian W. J. Florence had a habit of promising a man a fish or some game when he was about starting on a hunting or fishing trip. Day after day would pass, and the game would not be forthcoming. But almost every day a letter or telegram would come saying that Florence had not forgotten; that Florence was just about sending the game; that there was no cause for worry, as a fine fish or deer was on its way to the express office. At first this solicitousness would cause courteous letters and telegrams in return. As the delay got longer the victim would get impatient and would finally be literally haunted by huge fishes or deer, "with the compliments of W. J. Florence." Then some fine day, when it was least expected, the fish or deer would come.

Beef Tea.

It is the suggestion of a trained nurse, whose beef tea was most acceptable to a patient to whom in any previous illness it had been repellent, that the beef should be broiled before the juice is extracted. A thick, lean, juicy steak from the round is broiled over a clear fire perhaps two minutes on each side, after which it is cut up into small squares, put into a saucepan, covered with cold water and set on the back of the stove, where it should steep, not boil, for fully two hours. Remember not to add the salt until the dish is taken from the fire and serve it hot unless, of course, it is to be offered as cold or iced beef tea.

QUEER OLD FLASKS.

New York Wine Merchant Has an Interesting Collection.

There is an old wine merchant in New York who has a curious collection of old bottles.

One, which he believes to be the oldest bottle used for holding liquor in this country, came from Nassau, in the Bahamas, originally filled with snuff. It is made of a coarse, seaweed colored glass and is shaped somewhat like a chestnut standing upright upon its broad end. There is a broad bottomed bottle which held madeira in Charleston in 1810 and a Viennese bottle 125 years old, whose slender, graceful curves have been supplanted today by a more commercial shape. The first American gin bottle, from the Schuchadt estate, has a pouter pigeon shape, which is delightful to the eye.

Among the later bottles are some which constitute the product of the bottle maker's art when impressed glass came into use. On each side figures are molded into the glass. There are a number of "railroad bottles." On one a wagon running on rails and drawn by a horse is depicted on both sides, with the motto, "Success to the Railroad." On another the same primitive arrangements are shown, commemorating the railroad at Lowell, and on the reverse of the bottle a spread eagle imbedded in thirteen stars.

George Washington figures on one bottle, upon the reverse of which was Zachary Taylor, who, so says the glass, "never surrenders." A spread eagle and what appears to be a Masonic shrine, a fruit basket and horn of plenty and two trees, one in leaf, the other bare, representing "summer" and "winter," are both two faced designs. A large, round bottle, which in these days would contain Holland gin, is impressed with a series of monks at their prayers. It was called the "apostles' bottle," but it drew fire from the pope, who had it put, by edict, out of general use.—American Wine Press.

ENGLAND'S SEA GYPSIES.

A Strange Little Tribe That Lives Always on Boats.

A strange and almost unknown part of the population (if it can be called that) of the British isles is the queer semiwild folk known as sea gypsies. Real gypsies they are, differing from their fellow gypsies in the fact that they always live on the sea and that, never having mingled with landsmen, their type is much purer and more nearly resembles the original.

There are about 500 sea gypsies in Britain. They cruise along the coast, seldom touching the land, but always close to it, in old and weatherbeaten craft that may have carried their grandfathers.

When the tide is out, the old craft will often drop anchor by a sand bank island far out at sea, and her crew will grub for cockles with their hands, filling a score of baskets, but saying nothing to each other, for they are almost out of the habit of speech. They find fifty shellfish where the ordinary fisherman finds one, but they rarely do the same thing two days running, and in the next hour they may be snaring rabbits on a headland miles away.

The sea gypsies are wild eyed and thickset. Their hair is always either jet black or golden. They are still of almost pure Norse or Danish descent, never having used the land and mixed with the shore folk to any extent. Their hands seem to be all thumbs instead of fingers, so powerful and stubby are the digits, because they have done nothing but haul ropes and dig in the wet sand.—New York Press.

Tried and Convicted Too.

Politics in the west, even more than in the east, says the author of "Life and Sport In California," is a profession. I remember two men who were candidates for the office of district attorney. One had served before; the other was a young man conducting his first campaign.

The veteran was speaking in a small town, and after setting forth his own claims he spoke as follows of his opponent:

"I understand that Mr. X. is in every sense a worthy and honorable man, but I ask you to remember that he has never been tried—he has never been tried."

"That's so!" exclaimed a voice. "You've been tried, old man, haven't you—and convicted, too, you know?"

After due inquiry it appeared that the veteran had been, indeed, indicted for horse stealing and convicted. He was not elected.

Norway Fairies.

"Like the Japanese," writes William E. Curtis in the Chicago Herald, "the Norwegians are very superstitious, and as in Japan the forests, the mountains and the gorges are peopled with fairies. Nissen is the good fairy of the farmers. He looks after the cattle particularly, and if he is well treated they are healthy and the cows give lots of milk. To propitiate him it is necessary to put a dish of porridge on the threshold of the cow stable on Christmas morning. Whenever the family moves this invisible being goes along with them and sits on the top of the loads."

Cities Without Slums.

Berlin has none of the horrible areas which disgrace London and so many other English towns. Even in the poorest quarters the dwellings are good, the streets well paved, clean and comparatively wide. It also has no slums in the English sense of the word. Kioto, in Japan, and Sevastopol, in Russia, both boast an absence of slums and paupers. In England the largest manufacturing town which is free from this reproach is probably Huddersfield, and after that would come Leamington Spa and London by the Sea.—Pearson's Weekly.

There They Were.

"I am here, gentlemen," explained the pickpocket to his fellow prisoners, "as the result of a moment of abstraction." "And I am here," said the incendiary, "because of an unfortunate habit of making light of things." "And I," said the forger, "on account of a simple desire to make a name for myself." "And I," added the burglar, "through nothing but taking advantage of an opening which offered in a large mercantile establishment in town."—Kansas City Independent.

LIGHTNING FLASHES.

HOW THEY ARE EVOLVED AND THE ENERGY THEY POSSESS.

Inhabitants of Compactly Built Cities Have Little Cause to Fear These Mysterious and Destructive Balls From the Clouds.

Without doubt lightning was the first electrical phenomenon that was observed by human beings. To this day it remains the least known and least understood of natural electrical manifestations except, perhaps, the aurora.

There is a vast deal of popular misconception concerning the danger of lightning and the nature of it. The lightning flash is a discharge from a cloud at a high potential with reference to the earth. When the atmosphere is charged with water vapor and some eddy or current in its colder upper strata is deflected downward, causing condensation, exceedingly minute drops of water are formed, each bearing an electrical charge. The consolidation of these into larger drops results in a very great increment of the potential of the charge since the capacity of the drop varies with its diameter and the volume of the drop with the cube of the diameter.

The consequence of this is that it takes, for example, eight drops consolidated to make one of twice the diameter of the constituent drops, and the charge on the surface of the consolidated drop will be four times as great as that upon the surfaces of its elements. In this way, as the small water particles unite to form drops which fall as rain, the potential of the charge they carry increases until it attains enormous values, and the lightning flash leaps to the earth, which may be regarded simply as a body of very great electrostatic capacity. The discharge, which is called lightning, is apt to be more or less destructive, although the energy of an individual flash is perhaps not very great. Often the conditions are such that the discharge takes on an oscillating character, producing violent surgings of current. No very accurate measurements have been made upon the current involved, but it is taken to be of the order of 1,000 to 5,000 amperes. The electro motive force necessary to cause a flash a mile long is probably several million volts, and of course the power of the flash measured in watts is very great, but its duration is correspondingly short.

Protection of property and life from lightning flashes has been a subject that has entrained the attention of natural philosophers since Franklin sent up his historic kite. The net result of more than a century of attempt to secure protection has been the lightning rod in its more or less inefficient forms and the discovery that buildings of modern construction, having metallic roofs and often metallic frames as well, are practically immune from attack by lightning.

The total number of deaths due to lightning in any given summer is comparatively very small—in the ratio of about one to each 200,000 population in the United States. In cities the destructive influence of lightning is exceedingly small, although occasional fires are caused by it, especially where gas pipes abound.

Protection of electric circuits from lightning has been an interesting subject for research for a number of years, and several highly efficient devices have been constructed for this purpose. Today lightning is little feared by the station superintendent and should be very little feared by any one. The time honored rule that it is wisest to keep in the open and not seek the shelter of trees is one which common prudence dictates. Recourse to the feather bed of our ancestors, however, is no longer necessary except to quiet the nerves of timorous persons, while the ancient superstitions regarding handling steel instruments and sitting in drafts may be utterly disregarded. A modern building in a city is as nearly absolutely lightning proof and those in it are as nearly absolutely protected from lightning as is possible.—Electrical Review.

America's Superior Schools.

In spite of excessive decentralization and the lack of a regulative central authority America has, by making education a local concern, by confiding to each district the organization and control of its schools, by insisting on free public schools in the true sense of these much abused words, created a system which, in spite of its crudeness and obvious imperfections, may yet excite our envy, both as it brings education, secondary as well as primary, within the reach of all and as it is capable of infinite self development and progress, unshackled by the dead hand of ecclesiasticism and departmental routine.—London Chronicle.

Cornmeal.

Before using cornmeal in a bread always scald it to soften its starch. There is not time enough during the baking for this to be done properly. Do this by scalding half of the milk or water you use, then pour it hot over the cornmeal. Next add the eggs, the rest of the cold liquid, then the flour and baking powder sifted together.—Good Housekeeping.

Pepper.

The value of pepper was known of old. We read that when Rome had to be ransomed from the barbarian conqueror in the year 400 Alaric demanded 3,000 pounds of pepper among the payments and that Hippocrates used it in medicine, applying it to the skin.

ANN ARBOR SPEAKS.

Contractor Wooley, of Ann Arbor, Makes a Public Statement.

Mr. Edwin Wooley, contractor and carpenter of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence, No. 618 Fountain St. Mr. Wooley appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and he does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word througout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among the people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills." "little enemies to backache," modern wonder-workers," etc.

Mr. Wooley says: "I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains through the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull, heavy aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold which, as a rule, settled in my loins. I tried various remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At the time my back was troubling me a great deal but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This is months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.. Remember the name Doan and take no substitute.

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insiduous consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

Keeping at It.

There is a very old but very good story about a boy who was engaged one winter day in putting a ton of coal into a cellar. His only implement was a small fire shovel. Noticing this, a benevolent old gentleman expressed surprise and commiseration.

"My son," said the gentleman, "you surely do not expect to put in all that coal with that little shovel?"

"Oh, yes, I do," replied the boy cheerfully. "All I have to do is to keep at it."

There is a lesson in this story for young and old, and it is exemplified in the lives of the great men of the world. It is a mistake to suppose that the best work of the world is done by people of great strength and many opportunities. "Keeping at it" is the secret of success. —Exchange.

Left Handed Medicine.

An Atchison druggist tells this story and declares that it is true: He had tonsilitis, but did not send for a doctor, as he knew he would be all right as soon as the swelling "broke." But his wife was worried and insisted on sending for a doctor. When the doctor arrived, he looked through his medicine case, and said he had nothing suitable for the patient; that the medicine he had was for the right side, whereas the swelling in the throat was on the left side. Then he hurried away to get his left handed medicine.—Atchison Globe.

BIRDSALL—SMITH

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. C. Smith presented a pretty scene Wednesday, the occasion being the marriage of their only daughter, M. Gertrude, to Thos. M. Birdsall, of Edgerton, O.

Promptly at twelve o'clock Kate May Clark took her seat at the piano and to the beautiful strains of Mendelssohns wedding march, the bridal party entered, and took their places neath an arch of autumn leaves in one corner of the parlor. Rev. Edward Mott, of Tecumseh, read the impressive service that united them for life. Miss Jennie Lawton, a cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and Clement Hardenburgh as best man. Little Linna Pocklington was flower girl and Fern Lowe and Laura Birdsall drew the ribbons to form an isle for the bridal party.

The bride was gowned in a handsome dress of white French lawn with satin trimmings and carried a shower bouquet of pink and white carnations and her bridesmaid in light blue dimity with white lace trimmings. The groom was in the conventional black.

After congratulations were offered the Misses Dora Pocklington, Flossie Mott, Lura Palmer, Mae Culbertson, Bertha Wagner, Isadore Wilson, Irene Pilbeam and Miss Alice Westgate, of Raisin Valley, served the guests about ninety in number to a sumptuous wedding banquet.

The fine array of handsome gifts tended to show the high esteem in which both were held. Mr. Birdsall had charge of the creamery here for two years and during his stay not only won one of Ridgeway's fairest daughters for his bride, but also the admiration and esteem of many who regretted his departure for Edgerton.

Mr. and Mrs. Birdsall left for Edgerton on the afternoon train Thursday, mid a shower of rice and old shoes, given by their young friends, who had gathered at the depot to bid them farewell. Guests from abroad were: Geo. J. Stanley, of St. Paul, Neb.; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Birdsall, son Dan and daughter Alice, of Edon, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Dunham, of Adrian; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wilcox and daughter, of Milan. Guests were also present from Raisin Valley, Sutton, Tecumseh, Newburg and Britton.

A DESPERATE ACT.

Aged Farmer Shot His Wife and Then Killed Himself.

Flint, Mich., Oct. 24.—William Parkhurst, aged 65 years, shot his wife Tuesday night during a quarrel. The bullet took effect in her left breast just above the heart, but it is expected she will live. After shooting his wife Parkhurst chased his two daughters through the house, threatening to kill them. He then got into his wagon and drove away.

Yesterday morning his body was found at the farm of Alfred Torrey, three miles from this city. Parkhurst drove into the barnyard, seated himself on a knoll and deliberately blew out his brains. The bullet entered his head an inch above his right ear. A revolver was found in Parkhurst's hand and his horse was feeding at a hay stack in the barn.

They Didn't Steal It.

Bay City, Mich., Oct. 24.—In the United States court John McMullen and John Searles of Iosco county were tried on a charge of stealing timber from government lands. The defendants admitted taking the timber, but claimed they acted under information from the government land office that the tract cut was not government land. Judge Swan charged that under the circumstances the defendants should be compelled to pay only the value of the timber cut, which the jury fixed at $87.64.

Two Warm for Stoves.

Niles, Mich., Oct. 24.—The Beckwith Round Oak stove works, the principal manufacturing industry at Dowagiac, which employs upwards of 300 men, is now practically idle, having laid off all but about 50 men. The management states that the stove market is over-supplied, owing to prevailing warm weather, and that with the coming of colder weather the big works will resume operations.

Child Burned to Death.

Muskegon, Mich., Oct. 24.—The 3-year-old daughter of John Morrison, living a few miles south of Ashland, climbed up to a shelf and, getting hold of some matches, commenced to light them. Her hair caught fire, and in an instant she was a pillar of flames. The parents did all they could for the little sufferer, but she died in a few hours.

Hurt at a Dance.

Monroe, Mich., Oct. 24.—The officers are holding Dan and Albert Anteau, two country boys, to await the outcome of the injuries of Wesley Duclo, who was hit on the head with an ax at a third ward dance Tuesday night. Duclo and his companions attacked the Anteaus with clubs, and the ax was used by the latter in self-defense.

Killed by a Train.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 24.—A stranger walking on the track was struck by a Michigan Central express going east, and instantly killed. His head was smashed to a jelly and one arm and both feet cut off. The dead man had one cent, a pipe and a note book in his pocket, which contained an illegible name and the address, Danville, Ill.

May Have Stamp Robbers.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—The police received word last night of the arrest of three men at Corning, N. Y., who are believed to be the gang who robbed the Chicago postoffice. A satchel full of postage stamps of large denomination was in their possession. Dispatches from Corning state that a gang of three desperate looking men was caught in the New York Central yards yesterday afternoon by the company's detectives.

Praise for the President.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—Resolutions approving the course of President Roosevelt in having Booker T. Washington, the negro educator, dine with him at the White house, were adopted at yesterday's session of the national encampment of the Union Veterans' union. The chief executive's action was characterized as manly and in accord with the highest ideals of American citizenship.

When a Man Can See 200 Miles.

About 200 miles in every direction is the distance a man can see when standing, on a clear day, on the peak of the highest mountain—say, at a height of 26,668 feet, or a little over five miles above the level of the sea. An observer must be at a height of 6,667 feet above sea level to see objects at a distance of 100 miles. The distance in miles at which an object upon the surface of the earth is visible is equal to the square root of one and a half times the height of the observer in feet above the sea level.

Some allowance has to be made for the effect of atmospheric refraction, but as the refraction varies at different heights and is affected by the various states of the weather no precisely accurate figures for general purposes can be given. Probably one-fourteenth to one-tenth of the distance given by the formula would have to be deducted, owing to the refraction of the atmosphere.

Women are Like Flowers. Healthy and strong they blossom and bloom. Sickly, they wither and die. Every woman ought to look well and feel well. It's her right and duty, but she might as well try to put out a fire with oil as to be healthy and attractive with disease corroding the organs that make her a woman. Upon their health depends her health. If there is inflammation or weakening drains or suffering at the monthly period, attend to it at once. Don't delay. You're one step nearer the grave every day you put it off. Women can stand a great deal, but they cannot live forever with disease dragging at the most delicate and vital organs in their body. You may have been deceived in so-called cures. We don't see how you could help it—there is so much worthless stuff on the market. But you won't be disappointed in Bradfield's Female Regulator. We believe it is the one medicine on earth for womanly ills. There is as much difference between it and other so-called remedies as there is between right and wrong. Bradfield's Female Regulator soothes the pain, stops the drains, promotes regularity, strengthens, purifies and cleanses. It does all this quickly and easily and naturally. It is for women alone to decide whether they will be healthy or sick. Bradfield's Regulator lies at hand. $1 per bottle at drug store.

DESPERATE RESORT

Ex-City Employe Bribed a Witness in Salsbury Case.

PROSECUTION AFTER CULPRIT

Witness Garman Received $1,250 As a Bribe to Leave Town—Witnesses to the Transaction Were Hidden From View, but Heard It All.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 26.—The trial of City Attorney Lant K. Salsbury, for bribery, had a sensational interruption when court opened after the noon recess yesterday. Assistant Presecutor Ward, addressing the court, said that attempts were being made to corrupt the witnesses for the people. He asked that an investigation be made, and that a recess be taken to give him an opportunity to put his proofs into form.

The attorneys for the defense were on their feet in an instant to repudiate the charges. They were emphatic in their denunciations, and declared that it was a put up job. The court held that the charges were of a most serious nature, and assumed the responsibility of investigating them. A recess was taken until 3 o'clock, and at that hour, upon the request of the prosecutor for more time, adjournment was taken until morning.

The charges are based on the alleged payment of $1,250 to F. H. Garman about 11 o'clock yesterday, by Wm. M. Leonard, a former city employe and well known as ward politician. Garman was one of the water deal promoters, and was to be the next witness on the stand. Garman reported that propositions were being made to induce him to leave town without testifying, and he was told to take the money, concealing witnesses where they could hear what was said and see the money pass. Leonard made an appointment to meet Garman in the morning, and then paid him the $1,250, in consideration of his leaving town immediately. Garman took the money. and two witnesses he had concealed in his room saw the entire transaction. Leonard was in the court room in the morning and at about 10 o'clock was seen entering the office of the city attorney. Leonard was ordered into custody after the adjournment of court, and is now in jail pending investigation.

The morning session of the trial was devoted entirely to the cross-examination of Witness Robert Cameron by the attorneys for the defense. The same ground was covered that was gone over Thursday, and nothing of any importance was developed.

Equal Suffrage Association Meet.

Saginaw, Mich., Oct. 26.—The Michigan Equal Suffrage association elected the following officers: President, Martha E. Snyder Root, Bay City; vice-president, Clara B. Arthur, Detroit; recording secretary, Edith Frances Hall, Flat Rock; treasurer, Emily B. Ketchum, Grand Rapids; auditors, Cora Jeffers of Atlantic Mines, U. P.; second auditor, Frances Ostrander, Saginaw; member of executive committee of National American Woman's Suffrage association, Emily B. Ketchum.

After Tax Dodgers.

Niles, Mich., Oct. 26.—County Assessor Wm. Geitz of St. Joseph county, Ind., has just returned here from southern Michigan, where he has been looking up loans made in Michigan by residents of his county for the purpose of avoiding taxation. In this county he unearthed $200,000 of St. Joseph county loans. He claims to have found South Bend loans in Michigan as far north as Saginaw, and threatens to prosecute people he finds trying to avoid taxation.

Co-Operative Store.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 26.—A party of railroad men of the north, feeling themselves aggrieved at the Merchants & Manufacturers' association, have organized a co-operative store here, and have subscribed over $3,000 for the opening of a grocery store. which will be increased to a general store later.

Shot a Schoolmate.

Tekonsha, Mich., Oct. 26.—George Prior, aged 10, took a revolver to school and amused himself at intermission by shooting at the children. Before the teacher was aware of what was going on, he had shot one of his companions through the hand, causing a painful wound.

Deserted His Children.

Bay City, Mich., Oct. 26.—Joseph Burns, arrested at Detroit charged with abandoning his six children, was arraigned in police court, pleaded guilty and the examination set for today. Burns was formerly a member of the West Bay City police force.

Easy Way to Start It.

Alpena, Mich., Oct. 26.—Miss Mary Wilson, a domestic at the residence of H. B. McCain, while starting a fire with oil, set fire to her clothing, burning herself so badly that she will die. She ran out of the house, where the fire was extinguished by neighbors.

Hooked by a Cow.

Vassar, Mich., Oct. 26.—A 7-year-old son of Charles Opperman of East Vassar was hooked by a cow. The cow's horn passed under the left jaw bone, split the upper jaw bone and came out under the left eye. The child is in a critical condition.

Burglars Fooled Again.

Howell, Mich., Oct. 26.—L. F. Peet's safe in his store in Iosco was blown up Thursday night. The whole front of the store was blown out. The burglars got little or no money. They stole a horse and escaped.

Cadillac, Mich., Oct. 28.—When the October term of circuit court for Wexford county convenes today, Judge Chittenden will have 29 cases before him. The most important one is that of the people vs. James V. Wright for assault with intent to kill. Wright on Aug. 23 got into a quarrel with Chas. Mead over the lease of Wright's farm, and the latter shot Mead.

Drowned at Cheboygan.

Cheboygan, Mich., Oct. 28.—Mr. Voss, a young man employed at McLeod's mill on Duncan bay, was drowned Saturday by the capsizing of a boat. The accident occurred about 50 feet from the dock. Featherstone, Voss's companion, succeeded in swimming ashore, but Voss went to the bottom. His body was recovered.

BURGLARS ARE BOLD.

Citizens of Kalamazoo Are Being Terrified Nightly.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 26.—Successive burglaries perpetrated in this city have aroused the citizens to an unusual pitch of excitement. A little boy was dragged from his pony a short distance out of the city limits and the animal was ridden off, three houses have been entered and looted, and a number of tramps suspected of the deeds are successfully eluding the officers.

Policemen chased a well-known young society man returning from a late call, to his home, laboring under the delusion that he was one of the gang. He kept ahead, believing them to be hold-up men.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Michigan pensions were granted Friday as follows: Original—Charles Vanness, Hillsdale, $6; John Wittum, Eaton Rapids, $8; James Snover, Kingsmill, $6; James C. Robinson, Bay City, $6. Increase—Geo. W. Hodgeman, Marshal, $8; Orlando F. Saddoris, Bear Lake, $8; Henry S. Humphrey, Moline, $24; Frank Volkenstine, Detroit, $10. Widows—Emilene A. Stewart, South Haven, $8; Jane Mutschall, Clayton, $8; Mary Reno, Waldron, $8; Mary Wise, Ypsilanti, $12; Ella Curtis, Sand Lake, $12.

Costly Suit.

Coldwater, Mich., Oct. 26.—A line fence dispute between two well-known Bronson farmers has just ended in the circuit court. The case occupied seven days, at a cost to the county of over $400, and the plaintiff was awarded six cents damages. The land in dispute does not exceed $30 in value.

Slaughter of Deer.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Oct. 26.—Wm. Hodgson has been appointed game warden of this county. The appointment was made to stop the illegal slaughter of deer which has been openly carried on for the past two months, there being no game warden here.

Cummings is Acquitted.

Baldwin, Mich., Oct. 26.—The Baldwin jury, after less than five hours of deliberation, decided on a verdict of acquittal in the manslaughter case in which Joseph Cummings was accused of being responsible for the death of his younger brother, Percy.

Killed by a Train.

Lapeer, Mich., Oct. 26.—Thomas Rasmussen, a railroad man, was killed yesterday at Attica, being run over by a work train. He was 30 years of age and fought in the Spanish-American war. His people live in Ohio.

Drowned in a Spring.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 26.—Roy, the 4-year-old son of George Carwell, a Bedford township farmer, fell in the spring, from which the family obtained its water supply, and was drowned.

Big Fire at Saginaw.

Saginaw, Mich., Oct. 26.—Fire in D. B. Freeman's dry goods store late last night destroyed the $25,000 stock, which was insured for $15,000.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

C. G. Turner, vice-president of the state board of pardons, sent his resignation to Gov. Bliss.

Mrs. Charles Daniels was severely burned at Muskegon. She leaned too near a gasoline stove and the flames caught in her dress.

James Litchard had his hand caught and badly mangled in a corn husker at the Colf farm, near Milan. His middle finger was amputated.

Fred St. Onge, a Frenchman, who escaped from the asylum at Newberry recently, was captured near Iron Mountain and returned to the asylum.

The board of supervisors has redistricted Lenawee county so that it drops Rep. Combs outside the city of Adrian, placing that city in the southern district.

The annual report of the acting superintendent of the Yosemite national park in California shows that game is very plentiful in the park. There have been 9,000 visitors this season, of whom about two-thirds were campers.

Jackson Will Boom.

Jackson, Mich., Oct. 28.—It was definitely given out today that the Michigan Central Railway Co. has let a contract to a Chicago man named Swift, to double the shops and the capacity of the engine works in this city. Some $400,000 will be spent in new shops. When finished next May, 800 instead of 400 men will be employed there.

Farmer Found Dead.

Lapeer, Mich., Oct. 28.—Ernest Fost, a farmer, two miles from Attica, took $80 and went to Imlay City. It is said he drank heavily and returned at a late hour. In the morning he was cold in death at his home, with no money upon his person.

RECKONED BY HOURS

No Relaxation of the Stringent Rules Regarding Czolgosz.

IS DEPRIVED OF NOTORIETY

The Clothing and Letters for Prisoner Will Be Burned After Execution—Parents' Request for Remains Will Be Evaded, if Possible.

Auburn, N. Y., Oct. 28.—The time that Leon F. Czolgosz, assassin of President McKinley, has to live is reckoned by hours now, but there has been no relaxation of the stringent rule under which the prisoner has been secluded since his confinement. Auburn prison was closed yesterday to any who sougth the assassin, and so it will remain until the prisoner has paid the penalty which the law exacts. In fact, the plan to deprive Czolgosz living of any notoriety has been extended to deprive Czolgosz dead of notoriety.

Immediately after the execution the clothing of the murderer, with the vast accumulation of mail that came to the prison for him, will be burned, and if possible the request of the parents for the dead man for his remains will be evaded. It is feared that the removal of his body to Cleveland would lead to scenes of an unfortunate nature, and the prison officials are very anxious to avoid anything of the kind. The plan of burning the clothing and letters of the murderer will prevent the exhibitions of relics by those who pander to the morbid.

AUBURN PRISON.

The hour of 7 on Tuesday morning is the time set by Warden J. Warren Mead for the execution.

Various reports changing that time have went through Auburn yesterday and last night. Superintendent of WARDEN J. WARREN MEADE.

State Prisons C. V. Vollins will not arrive here until 3 o'clock this afternoon and none of the regularly summoned witnesses has yet reached Auburn.

The chair in which Czolgosz will sit to receive the electrical shock was tested and examined yesterday by State Electrician E. F. Davis, and is ready for the part that it is to play in the final scene of the great national tragedy. Davis carefully examined the wiring switchboard and electrodes and satisfied himself that they were in good condition. He also inspected the dynamos in the prison shop, where the current is generated, and at his direction the current was for a brief period sent pulsating into the death house as it will go Tuesday morning, carrying final punishment to the murderer.

Electrician Davis will look the apparatus over again today and review with the prison officials the plan under which the sentence of death is to be carried out. Czolgosz will be the 59th man in the state and the 15th at Auburn prison at whose electrocution Davis has applied the current.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 28.—The Associated Press is made the medium of the last message from the father of Leon Czolgosz, the condemned assassin, who will pay the penalty for his terrible crime in Auburn prison Tuesday morning. In an interview Sunday afternoon, the elder Czolgosz was asked what he had to say finally to his unfortunate son.

The old man's eyes filled with tears as he replied deliberately:

"Tell Leon that I hope that he may rest in peace, that he will become reconciled to God and will meet his end bravely. Tell him that as much as and all of our family regret his most unhappy plight, that we can do nothing to interfere, that he alone is responsible for his unfortunate position and that he must meet his punishment as a consequence."

Further conversation elicited the information that the purpose of the visit of Waldeck Czolgosz to Auburn is to arrange for the disposition of the body after the law's mandate has been carried out. No communication has been received from the elder Czolgosz from Waldeck, and this is taken to mean that the father's presence is not desired at the death scene. The entire arrangement of the after part of the law's course are in Waldeck's hands, and what steps he will take is a matter of uncertainty. The expense of conveying the body from Auburn to Cleveland is one of the considerations that causes hesitancy in the announcement of definite final arrangements. Paul Czolgosz, the father, stated that there was some fear of mutilation or other undesirable occurrence at some time or other if the body should be brought to Cleveland immediately after the electrocution. This fear has led to the consideration of cremating the body at Buffalo or some other city where a crematory is available. Some anonymous communications to the Czolgosz family have mentioned the fact that the body might be valuable as a scientific object to medical people and would bring a good sum of money, but further than mere hints no definite offer has been made. It was stated that such an offer would be distasteful to the family of the assassin and would not be considered. Fear that the body might be stolen if buried in the usual manner is also a reason for cremation being favored.

PAUL CZOLGOSZ.

As said above, all post-mortem arrangements are in the hands of Waldeck Czolgosz, and whatever he does the family here will acquiesce in.

MARRIAGE WAS INVALID.

Decision of Court of South Carolina Will Cause Loss to Claimants.

Charleston, S. C., Oct. 28.—The court of common pleas in Florence county, this state, has decided that a marriage contracted in this state between a white man and a negro woman in 1867 was invalid, and that the children born of such marriage do not inherit an estate left to the lawful grandchildren of the testatrix. It was shown that in 1865 the South Carolina legislature passed an act prohibiting the intermarriage of white and colored persons, and reiterated in the act of 1866. Under the code of 1872 these two acts were repealed by the republican state government. Under the present state constitution, marriage between white and colored persons is prohibited. The real estate in dispute is said to be valuable, and the loss will be heavy to the mulatto claimants.

A SPECIAL VESPER SERVICE.

Knights of Columbus Commemorated the Discovery of America.

Washington, Oct. 28.—Cardinal Martinelli and Dr. Rooker, of the papal legation, the Rev. Dr. Garrigan of the Catholic university, and Bishop Bradley of New Hampshire, and about a thousand members of the order of the Knights of Columbus, attended a special vesper service at St. Patrick's church in this city yesterday, held in memory of the fact that it was in this month that the man for whom the order was named discovered America. It is the purpose to make such a service in October a regular feature of the order. The Rev. Dr. D. J. Stafford preached the sermon, choosing for his text "Christian manhood." Dr. Warren Courcey was deacon and the Rev. Dr. Burns of Holy Cross college, subdeacon. A choir of 100 voices took part in the service.

Heavy Registration in Ohio.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 28.—The registration of voters in Ohio for the election one week from next Tuesday closed Saturday night. The total registration of Cincinnati was 76,602, the largest ever recorded except for presidential election last year, when it reached 82,322. The registration of Cincinnati two years ago was 74,106, and at that time the conditions were the same as now, the election then being for state officers and members of the legislature, as at present. Two years ago John R. McLean of this city was the opponent of Gov. Nash, and it is a surprise to all that the registration this year exceeded that of 1899.

More Insurgents Gathered In.

Manila, Oct. 28.—The constabulary report a fight with insurgents near Passi, province of Iloilo, Island of Panay, in which 25 insurgents were killed and three captured, together with a quantity of arms and ammunition. The news from Gen. Hughes regarding conditions in the island of Cebu is encouraging. Llrega has surrendered with his entire force and one cannon and seven rifles, while Gen. Hughes is negotiating for the surrender of Maxilo, who styles himself "governor politico-militar." His surrender will mean the pacification of the province.

Implement Men to Meet.

Kansas City, Oct. 28.—The eighth annual convention of the National Association of Agricultural Implement and Vehicle Manufacturers will meet here next Wednesday for a three days' session. Col. J. G. Stowe, formerly consul-general to Cape Town, will make an address.

Chile Mobilizes Army.

London, Oct. 28.—"The Chilian government announces the mobilization of the army for the end of November ostensibly for manoeuvers," says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Buenos Ayres. "The Argentine fleet has been ordered to be provisioned and coaled and the sailors are working day and night. Three thousand manifestants have arrived."

Jail Breaker Located.

Toledo, O., Oct. 28.—J. B. Evans, better known as "Topeka Joe," the famous postoffice robber, who escaped jail here recently, has been located in the woods near Sarnia, Canada, and a posse of men is on his track. There is a heavy reward for his recapture.

A Fatal Mixup.

Middlesboro, Ky., Oct. 28.—George Mayes was killed and Joe Nail was mortally wounded Saturday night at the "Quarter house" on the Tennessee line. Mayes was killed by Nail, who received his death wound at the hands of an unknown man. Several were engaged in the fight. Mayes is said to have killed several men.

New Breed of Cattle.

Carbondale, Ill., Oct. 28.—Warren Gammon of Des Moines, Ia., noted as a breeder of registered cattle, has secured 11 of the 17 known muley Hereford cattle in the United States for the purpose of establishing a distinct new breed of cattle, to be known as the Polled Herefords.

M'KINLEY MEMORIAL ASS'N.

President Roosevelt an Honorary Member; Lyman J. Gage Treasurer.

Washington, Oct. 28.—The William McKinley National Memorial Arch association has issued the following statement to the public:

"President McKinley's memorial is enshrined in the hearts of his countrymen. But their unexampled affection demands expression in a material memorial, national in character, to be erected at the national capital, the scene of his greatest labors and achievements. The William McKinley National Memorial Arch association has been incorporated, under the laws of the District of Columbia, to meet this desire by the erection of a national memorial arch in honor of President McKinley in the city of Washington by national popular subscription.

"President Roosevelt has accepted honorary membership in the association.

"It is proposed to place the memorial arch preferably at the Washington approach to the memorial bridge across the Potomac connecting Washington with Arlington, which President McKinley earnestly desired and recommended to congress as 'a monument to American patriotism.'

"Contributors to its fund will be made members of the William McKinley Memorial Arch association. The treasurer, Hon. Lyman J. Gage, secretary of the treasury of the United States, Washington, D. C., will receive all contributions and will forward certificates of membership to all contributors. Contributions of money may be handed to postmasters, managers of telegraph, telephone and express offices, or deposited with banks or other financial institutions and newspapers. They are hereby authorized and requested to receive and transmit contributions to the treasurer."

CARELESS HUNTERS.

Mountaineers Are Fleeing For Life From Forest Fires.

Uniontown, Pa., Oct. 28.—The western slope of the Allegheny mountains, through Fayette county, are ablaze from the Yough river into West Virginia, are mountaineers are fleeing from their doomed homes with their families. Careless hunters started a dozen fires during the past week, and the brush is as dry as tinder. Streams that were never known to go dry are without water, and only a drenching rain will stop the swiftly spreading destruction.

The fire has been spreading for a week and the glare at night can be seen for miles. The destruction has been enormous to crops, fences, barns, stock and dwellings, with many narrow escapes from cremation in homes that were surrounded by the flames.

Sunday Was the President's Birthday.

Washington, Oct. 28.—Yesterday was the forty-third anniversary of the birth of President Roosevelt. Occurring on Sunday, there was no formal celebration and the day was spent very quietly. Dr. Nichols, a friend from Baltimore, was at the White house a portion of the day, and last night Commander Cowles was a guest at dinner. The president attended religious services at Grace Reformed church as usual.

Arms and Ammunition Captured.

Manila, Oct. 28.—Lieut. Louis J. Van Schaicke reports that in an attack by insurgents on the municipal police and scouts at Sebang one scout was killed and two of the police were captured. The insurgents secured two Krag-Jorgenson rifles, two shotguns and 200 rounds of ammunition. Lieut. Van Schaicke has been ordered to occupy the Barrio, or suburb of Sabang.

Ugly Stories Are Heard.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 28.—Ugly stories are heard about the game between Columbia and Yale Saturday, the Yale students claiming that several of the men on the Columbia eleven were not bona fide students. The Yale football authorities will not make any statement to that effect, but admit that investigation has been started.

Last Week of the Pan-Am.

Buffalo, Oct. 28.—This is farewell week at the Pan-American exposition, and as such will crowd all manner of entertainments into a few days.

Western New York will own the exposition on Wednesday. In addition, this will be exhibitors' day, and from all the various exhibits valuable and useful souvenirs will be distributed to the visitors.

THRILLING CHASE

Desperate Man Broke Away From Officers at Nashville.

HE UTILIZED AN ICE WAGON

Raced the Horses Until One Fell Dead, Then Grabbed Another Rig and Escaped the Law—Bloodhounds Were Found Shot to Death.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 28.—A desperate man fought his way clear of two city detectives here yesterday and, after a thrilling chase, made good his escape. In his race for liberty he utilized a two-horse wagon team, a horse and buggy and a riding horse, all forcibly taken, while two dead bloodhounds mark the first portion of his trail.

Officers believe the man is one of the gang that held up the Great Northern express near Wagner, Mont., last June, his attempt to get change for a $20 bill of the series secured in that robbery attracting attention of the police to him.

Sunday morning a raw-boned man, about 5 feet 10 inches high, with florid complexion, offered the bill in payment of a small purchase made in a storehouse on the public square. Difficulty in making the change caused the salesman to closely notice the bill, which proved to be on the Montana bank. The police were quietly notified, the clerk meanwhile delaying the matter of change.

Detectives Dwyer and Dickens were soon on hand, and, approaching the man, demanded his name.

"Ferguson," was the reply, and after another question or two Detective Dwyer informed the man he was under arrest. Quick as a flash, Ferguson had a revolver in each hand and started for the door. A hand-to-hand fight ensued, both officers grappling with the stranger, who proved more than a match for them. Using his pistols as clubs, he fought his way to the door and fled down the street.

A passing ice wagon caught his attention and the three negro occupants were soon out of his way. Then, at a fire engine clip, the wagon was headed across Cumberland river bridge into East Nashville, a fusilade of shots following it.

Out Woodland street went the flying team, but a sudden turn into First street brought it to grief. One of the horses fell and broke his leg, but the fugitive was not to be delayed. Running across First street, he held up an old negro who was driving by in a buggy and the flight was continued.

Out into the commons he sped. Once the buggy overturned but was quickly righted. Finally the tired horse was abandoned and after a dive into Shelby park on foot the supposed bandit secured another horse hitched at a point near the park. Then, after a sensational ride, the horse was left and the flight continued on foot. Further out pursuers found two of their bloodhounds shot to death a short distance apart, and after that the trace of the man was lost. The sheriff, with a large posse, is out scouring the country for the missing man. When the buggy was abandoned, the man threw away a wallet containing $1,040 in ten and twenty-dollar bills of the Montana bank. The money was recovered by Chief of Police Curran.

The World's Bike Record.

New York, Oct. 28.—At the Vailsburg, N. J., bike track Sunday, Albert Champion, on a motor bike, made a mile in 1:12 2-5, breaking the world's record for this sort of machine. Champion made the old record of 1:15 about three weeks ago. He will again try to lower the record next Wednesday at the Empire City mile track.

Bank Manager Arrested.

Halifax, Oct. 28.—Adam A. Harley, the former manager of the Bank of British North America at Fredericton, N. B., was arrested in this city last night on a warrant charging him with stealing $6,000 belonging to the bank. Harley came from Scotland to Halifax 10 years ago.

HEAD BLOWN OFF.

A Number of Violent Deaths in the State.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 28.—G. H. Achtenberg and Smith Clawson were returning in an automobile from a hunting trip late yesterday afternoon. Their dog was in front of them in the vehicle. Just after they reached the city the dog started to arise, but Achtenberg ordered him down, at the same time making a pass at him with his hand. There was a report, which Clawson thought was occasioned by the bursting of a tire. He brought the machine to a standstill and was horrified to find Achtenberg sitting dead at his side with fully one-half of his head blown off. Either the dog or Achtenberg's hand had struck the hammer of the gun, which was standing at Achtenberg's side, and the latter received the entire charge full in the face. The victim was 25 years old and unmarried.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Oct. 28.—Jennette Paro, a French girl aged 18, committed suicide Sunday morning by drowning in Lake Antoine. She was a waitress at the Commercial hotel for two years. The girl was in a cheerful mood earlier in the day. She waited on table and left for church, but instead went to the lake, undressed, and jumped in. She was very pretty and popular. Her parents reside at Daggett, Mich. The body was recovered at 11 o'clock. The motive for her act is not known.

Hillsdale, Mich., Oct. 28.—The first hunting accident of the season in this vicinity occurred Sunday afternoon just east of the city. Charles W. Hagan was accidentally killed by Charles Palmer. Both were employed in the shoe factory here. Hagan had been in the city but a short time, coming from Ripley, O. An inquest will be held.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 28.—William Jewett, who was accidentally shot Saturday night by Miss Edith Horton, is in a precarious condition, with the chances against his recovery. He had the revolver in his possession and she asked him to let her see it. Removing the cartridges, he supposed, he gave it to her. She playfully pointed it at him and pulled the trigger. One cartridge had not been removed, and the ball entered his head.

Poisoned at a Social.

Olivet, Mich., Oct. 28.—The hundred or so students and citizens of this place who were poisoned by tinned meats at a social given by the ladies of the Congregational church are all out of danger, although it was necessary to work over some of them nearly all night.

Will Change the Route.

Northville, Mich., Oct. 28.—Difficulties in securing the right of way for the new United Railway extension, which has been surveyed from Farmington via Novi to Lansing, have led to a new survey, which is now in progress on a route going to the capital from Northville via South Lyon.

KILLED FOR FIFTY CENTS.

A Man at Montreal Commits a Desperate Murder.

Montreal, Oct. 28.—"I killed a boy last night," said Tobin Hanson, a Dane, 35 years old, to the officer in charge when he walked into central police station yesterday.

"I killed him for money, and I only got 50 cents. That is not enough, so I came to give myself up."

Hanson described the locality in which the deed had been committed, and the police found the boy's body. It was identified as that of Samuel Marotte, a son of Samuel Marotte, a well-known spice and coffee merchant.

Release Not Effected Yet.

Constantinople, Oct. 28.—During the last few days there has been a voluminous exchange of dispatches in cipher between Spencer Eddy, secretary of the United States legation, and Consul General Dickinson, who is now in Sofia, regarding the efforts to rescue Miss Stone, the abducted American missionary, from the brigands. The legation is reticent and nothing has been made public as to the progress of the negotiations.

Samakoff, Bulgaria, Oct. 28.—The release of Miss Stone, the missionary, has not yet been effected.

We Pay $8,000,000 for Wrappers.

Washington, Oct. 28.—Secretary Wilson announces that experts of the agricultural department will hunt all over the United States and its new possessions for conditions favorable to the cultivation of the filler tobacco such as is now raised in Cuba, so that if possible all the filler tobacco used in this country eventually be raised within the boundaries of the United States.

"The United States," he said, "is now paying $8,000,000 for wrapper tobacco."

Leprosy Prevalent in Denmark.

Washington, Oct. 28.—United States Consul Victor E. Nelson, at Bergen, Norway, has sent a report to the marine hospital service, in which he says that the prevalence of leprosy in Denmark must be imputed to the uncleanliness and the grotesque carelessness of the people on that island. He says there are six leprosy patients there, of whom four are in Copenhagen. In Denmark leprosy does not belong to those few diseases which are subjected to public treatment.

Load of Sealskins.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 28.—The sealing schooners Fawn, Annie Paint and F B. Marvin have returned from Bering sea, the former with 304 skins, the second with 642 and the latter with 489 skins, three of which were branded.

Three People Killed.

Milwaukee, Oct. 28.—Three persons were killed and one seriously injured by a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul passenger train last night, while driving over a grade crossing at Oakwood, near here.

Coffee Drinking Denounced.

As early as 1663 coffee was satirized in England, and on every hand the bitterest invectives were applied to it by the press and pulpit. In one instance a preacher hurled anathemas at the heads of those who used as a beverage "a sirup of soot and essence of old shoes!" Probably he had good grounds for this statement, having sampled some boiled coffee. Another divine denominated it "a poison which God made black that it might bear the devil's color!" The women also took up the cudgels against it.

Folding Linen In Holland.

Folding linen is an accomplishment in which each one of the women in Holland is expected to be proficient before she becomes mistress of a home. In Holland especially the folding of linen requires considerable skill and training. Much of their fabric is of the finest texture and quality, and they fashion the various pieces in ironing into birds, animals, flowers and all manner of artistic shapes. Their linen closets are often shown to visitors with the same pride that china closets are shown elsewhere.

Big Real Estate Deal.

Mackinac Island, Mich., Oct. 28.—The biggest real estate deal here in many years was wound up in the purchase of a 20-acre tract known as the Stockbridge field, directly across from the Grand hotel by Henry R. Weaver of St. Louis, Mo., from Peabody & Houghteling of Chicago. The property will be extremely valuable as a boat landing and site for a hotel. The alleged consideration was $20,000.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at C. A. Wright's.

By the latest scientific researches both by improved instruments and methods, the Doctor is enabled to discover the true nature of the disease and locate the organ or parts affected and many diseases and complications which have heretofore proved most obstinate to the Medical profession yield like magic under his skill and systematic treatment.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It costs nothing to see him, for consultation is free and his prices for treatment are within the reach of all. He is a friend to the afflicted and will turn none away unaided. The merchant mingles with the artisan while seeking relief at his hands and hundreds are cured every year.

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs. D. L. Henning, of Adrian, says: I called at the Emery House, Adrian, on Sept. 14 last and consulted Dr W. C. Walker regarding my case and at once began treatment, and after taking a month's treatment of Dr. Walker. I feel like a new person. No one but a woman could know how I have suffered during the past nine years. His treatment has done wonders for me. I advise those afflicted with any chronic trouble to consult Dr. Walker. Signed MRS D L HENNING, Adrian, Oct 12, 01

Mr. Chas. Maltby, of Milan, Mich., says: I was taken with Lagrippe last winter; soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system: my sufferings at times were intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I move around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health.
Signed CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was."
Signed JAMES B. GILDAY.
Yargerville, Monroe County, Mich. June 28. 1901.

Sick all his Life. Read the statement of another well known citizen of Monroe county: Mr. W. W. Murphy, of Samaria, who had been almost a constant sufferer all his life from stomach and liver complications. He says: "I have found Dr. W. C. Walker's treatment a great help to me. I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment. Had tried everything I could hear of before with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker." Signed W W. MURPHY
Samaria, Monroe Co., Mich., June 25, 1901.

Mr. A. C. Crittenden, a well-known business man of Carleton, Mich., states: I took a course of treatment of Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, some 2 years ago and I take pleasure in saying the doctor made a permanent cure of my case. There has been no return of former trouble.
Signed A. C. Crittenden.
Carleton, Monroe co., Mich., Sept. 10, 1901.

Mrs Chas Todd, of Hamburg, Livingston county Michigan, says: "About four years ago my trouble began The doctors called my disease consumption of the bowels. From the time I was first taken I steadily grew worse in spite of all medical aid I realized I was on the decline and that death was staring me in the face In this condition I went to Dr W C Walker, of whose skill I had heard so much After taking a course of his treatment I am entirely cured I feel very grateful"
Signed. MRS CHAS TODD. Hamburg Mich

Gold In California.

The Society of California Pioneers determined after careful investigation that Jan. 28, 1848, was the exact date of the discovery of gold in California by James W. Marshall. The gold was found in the rocky bed of the tail race of the Sutter sawmill at Coloma, on the south fork of the American river.

The highest clouds lie at 27,000 feet; Mount Everest is 29,002 feet. The highest recorded balloon ascent is 36,000 feet.

Tecumseh has something new; it is an Interpean Fraternity; Hudson has an old fashioned cornet band, just launched Adrian has a new orchestra; other places have choral unions, mandolin clubs etc; but none of these could satisfy the longings of Tecumseh's musical devotees. They must have something otherwise and much more so, and so they have organized an Inter Pean fraternity. Inter means between and we don't know what Pean is unless it is a general name for all kinds of musical gymnastics, but taken together it may indicate that the club members will drink between songs or sing between drinks as the case may be.—Blissfield Advance.

Our club notes seem to be read in many by places, but when the Blissfield editor read "Interpean" for Enterpean he must have been taking too many of those "drinks between the songs." Enterpe was one of those muses who danced with Apollo. They ought to have heard of Apollo and the nine muses, even in Blissfield.

The ever present motto of our Enterpean Fraternity is the Golden Rule, and one of its maxims is, "Ignorance is the worst form of Poverty." Come up brother and join them, they will do you good. It is an ante-poverty society which will enrich your understanding.

NEW BANKING ROOM

Beautifully Fitted up for the Use of the Tecumseh

STATE SAVINGS BANK

Increasing Business and more room Made the Change Necessary.

This bank opened for business Apr. 24 1893, as a Commercial and Savings bank with a capital stock of $26,000, which stock was taken by 35 stockholders, residents of Tecumseh and Adrian. Although the bank was organized and started in a business way in a year and at a time when many banks were going to the wall and people generally were suspicious of all banks, yet it has prospered, increasing in business from $53,000, the first year to $150,000, at the present time and is now without exception, in as sound a financial condition as any bank in the country.

J. H. Smith, who was cashier for O. P. Bills & Co. for five years, solicited the stock for the organization. Mr. Smith is a well known and representative Tecumseh man. He is in a great measure responsible for the success of the bank, has been a member of the school board for years and is always a leader in anything for the best interest of Tecumseh. In all is just the man for such a place, having the confidence and respect of the entire community, as an honest, careful and conservative business man.

The first officers of the bank were:
Pres.—C. A. Slayton.
Vice Pres.—B. C. Knapp.
Cashier—J. H. Smith.
Asst. Cashier—Geo. W. Knapp.

Mr. Slayton continued as its president until 1899, when on account of personal business requiring his whole attention, he refused a reelection and C. R. Miller, of Adrian, who has been one of the directors from the start, was elected president, and now gives considerable attention to the affairs of the bank. Mr. Miller is also President of the Commercial Savings Bank, of Adrian, and well acquainted with the banking business. J. Q. Look has had considerable experience in banking and will always be found ready to treat the customers well.

The present officers are:
Pres.—C. R. Miller.
Vice Pres.—J. Q. Look.
Cashier—J. H. Smith.
Directors—C. A Slayton, L. M. Kellogg, Joseph Russell, A. D. Gilmore, C. R. Miller, L. D. Dewey, J. Q. Look.

The stock is now held by 20 stockholders.

Capital stock	$ 26000
Stockholders personal liability	26000
Surplus and undivided profits	4800
Loans............	103700
Cash and in reserve banks	37000
Deposits	117000

Two per cent is paid on saving deposits.

Owing to the increasing business of the bank, the directors decided it was necessary to increase the facilities for doing office work and have just about completed a general over hauling of the interior of the banking office. The office has been newly decorated in modern style, the furniture rearranged, and new added. A fine room has been made in the rear of the banking office for use of directors and committee meetings, also for the use of the bank customers, where they will be welcomed to come and do business either with the bank or among themselves.

The bank is centerally located in the center of the business part of the city and owns the banking office, building and grounds. It is the intention of the officers and directors to use their best efforts in continuing the present success and increasing business of the bank, and all who may come to the bank will be welcomed and well treated. The bank has a surplus of of funds and desires to make loans on real estate and on good secured commercial paper.

ROUND ABOUT US.

The Milan Creamery Company has its new building completed and will have the churn running next week.—Milan Leader.

A recent issue of the Telegram says that Geo. Everiss was arrested for being "drunk and intoxicated." George must have been drinking to get in that condition.—Blissfield Advance.

A letter for "Mr. Smith" was advertised in the list of undelivered letters last week at Hudson. It had been opened and read by 63 Smiths, but none of them admitted it belonged to them. It must have been a dun.—Adrian Press

J. S. Kane, the Onsted druggist, has joined the Cambridge farmers' club. The first thing he did was to ask for some rosin seed and quinine plants, and offered to sell a preparation warranted to cure bald head on pumpkins and cabbage.—Adrian Press.

Miss Lydia J. Rice, of Tipton, mother of Mrs. Lucy M. Sickles, superintendent of the Industrial Home for girls at Adrian, died last Wednesday from heart trouble. Deceased was seventy years of age, and had resided in Lenawee county nearly all her life.—Exchange.

One of the C. N. box cars has been fitted up, placed at one of the sidings at Addison Junction, and now constitutes the car accountants' office, with four men in charge. Thus that branch of the line service is transferred from Toledo to this point.—Addison Courier

There are 750 lady students and 140 gentlemen at the Ypsilanti Normal this year. Will pessimistic individuals discover in this "a deterioration of the desire among the mail sex for perfection in the higher branches of education?" Or will they say in plain English that "the girls are crowding the boys out of the game?"—Hudson Post.

When you ask a newspaper publisher to suppress a piece of news simply because you are personally interested in keeping it out of print, you are asking him to defraud his subscribers out of that which rightfully belongs to them and just what they expect when they pay their subscription. Please paste this in your hat.—Addison Courier.

Rev. Richard Harkness, of Raisin Valley, is the oldest Quaker minister in Michigan. Rev. Harkness is 81 years of age. He came to Raisin township in 1834, and more than fifty years ago began his duties as a minister. For twenty-five years, he has been secretary of the school board of the Raisin Valley seminary and for the past two years has been its superintendent.—Adrian Times.

Charlie Lawrence, of the fire department, had an experience at the fire which occured Sunday morning that put him back to the days of short pants. In his hurry to get out he put on his best coat, hat, collar and necktie and never discovered that he had left off his pantaloons and shoes until he arrived at the fire. Charlie never believes in being seperated from his pantaloons in public but if he gets in a hurry, what is the use waiting for such a small thing as the trousers.—Adrian Times.

A few days ago several representatives of the Clinton High School went out on a foraging expedition, their object being to obtain pumpkins. Had they notified the farmers of the impending depredations, they might have been spared the humiliation of great bewilderment in the mazes of a maizefield. However, it was not unmitigated, for it gave them an opportunity of emptying their lungs of foul air which the school district allows them to breathe in an overcrowded and badly ventilated school room.—Clinton Local

Will O'Riley shipped on Tuesday to Northern Michigan three barrels of bread, to be used as a hunger exterminator by our hunters when they go up there looking for big game in a day or so. Mart Crossman says he put in his best efforts on the bread for the northern shipment, and if Ben Crites and his fellow hunters find any fault with it, he won't accept a quarter of venison form them if they should offer it to him.—Hudson Post. Mart Crossman used to be a Tecumseh boy and this sounds just like him.

Burglars broke into the depot of the Ann Arbor railroad here Tuesday night and carried out several boxes of goods belonging to Hershfield Sons' McIntyre Bros. and B. M. Eger, took them to the building upon the old stave mill grounds and broke them open. Not finding the boxes containing goods that they desired only two boys' size of overcoats were taken, from Hershfield's boxes—the boxes only containing children's clothing. McIntyre Bros. box contained lap robes and Eger's, leather leggings. The thieves were probably in search of a suit of clothes for each of themselves.—Dundee Reporter.

Ladies who intend donating castoff clothing towards "rummage" sales will do well to grope carefully in the innermost corners of the pockets thereof. An Adrian lady, who is said to invoice the contents of her husband's pockets occasionally, whether the garments are old or not, went through an old pair of his trousers, previous to sending them down to a sale, and was a winner by $7.—Hudson Post. It would be well for the Tecumseh ladies to remember this before donating their husbands old clothes to the rummage sale, which is going on here and they would probably be a little money ahead too.

Tim Lane, John Skinner and Harry Twiggs were instantly killed at Milan about three o'clock last Thursday morning. It seems that Mr. Lane, who is section foreman of the Wabash, had received orders to go three miles west and drive some cattle off the track. He went and asked the other two, who are also employes of the section, to go with him. They had got the cattle off the track and were returning home, when they were struck by the Rainbow City special, which was running one mile a minute. Mr. Lane leaves a wife and one daughter and the other two were single men.

A MATTER OF FAITH

Many of the Clergy in Michigan Endorse the Little Conqueror.

Our religious opinions are, as a whole, a matter of faith. Whatever denomination or sect we follow we pin our faith on the words and teachings of our pastor His sincerity is never doubted that he thoroughly believes his adopted creed is unquestioned The opinions of the clergy on any subject carry well deserved weight with all classes of people. Many reverend gentlemen in Michigan are testifying for the little conqueror, their praise is not given lightly and only after personal experience Gratitude and a desire to promote the welfare of the public brings forth such testimony as follows:

"The Rev. F. A. Smith, of 829 First street, Kalamazoo, Mich., says: "When I procured Doan's Kidney Pills I was at that time, and had been considerably troubled with my kidneys. Backache was quite pronounced, being especially severe when I sat or stood in a stooped position for any length of time. Other symptoms usually attending disordered kidneys plainly indicated what caused the difficulty. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected the annoyance in a very short time and I have not noticed, up to date, any indication of a recurrence. As I took no other medicine there can be no doubt but Doan's Kidney Pills were the direct means of curing me. I am most favorably impressed with them "

A Far Look.

Three visitors traveling in the Isle of Man thought they would visit Sneefell, the king of Manx mountains. When walking up toward the mountian, they espied an old shepherd coming toward them. They thought they would take a rise out of him, so one accosted him, saying:

"They tell me, old man, you can see England, Scotland, Ireland and even as far as America from the top of this mountain."

"Oh, yes," said the old man. "If you will come with me. I will show you much further than America."

So, chuckling to themselves, they decided to follow him. After trudging for about half an hour up the mountain side in a boiling sun they began to feel rather fagged and kept asking the shepherd how much further they had to go.

He kept urging them on a little further until at last the three visitors lay down on the grass and said they would go no further for any sight.

"Now," said the old man, "if you will sit here long enough you will see the moon."

A Clever Woman's Answer.

"Do you not consider your husband the most graceless sinner in existence?"

This question was asked the wife of a gay Lothario by a rival for his affections while playing a game called "candor."

The stillness became intense and every pair of eyes grew rounder as those present looked from one woman to the other. It was the husband's voice that broke the silence.

"Your question is out of order, Beatrice," he said quietly. "It is a rule laid down in courts of law that a woman is not required to testify against her husband."

In the confusion that followed as the game broke up the man sought his wife's side. "What should you have replied to the query of the fair Beatrice if I had not come to your rescue so neatly?" he demanded.

"I should have said you were a sinner, yes, but a graceful rather than a graceless one."—Lippincott's.

"I trust, Leonidas, that you are not going to become sentimental and silly."

A Corn Plaster.

A medical publication gives the following formula for a corn plaster: Take of purified ammonia and yellow wax, each two ounces; acetate of copper, six drams; melt the two first together over the fire, and after removing from the fire add the verdigris just before it grows cold. Spread the mixture on soft leather or linen, pare away the corn and apply the plaster. Keep it on a fortnight and then renew it.

Changing the Subject.

An original method of closing a conversation was adopted by a host at a dinner party the other day. A young man had turned it to a topic which he did not care to discuss, and angry glances failed to make any impression. "Now, then," said the host at last, "let's change the conversation. The Tanning Process.

The slowness of the process of tanning is largely due to the difficulty with which the tannin penetrates into the hide. As the penetration progresses the outer part of the hide becomes converted into leather and is thereby made impervious; consequently the rate of penetration decreases. Months of soaking in the tan pit are therefore necessary for thick hides. Many attempts have been made to hasten this absorption of tannin by hide. The methods used include circulating the tan liquor so that fresh portions are continually presented to the hide, forcing the liquid through the hide by pressure and using strong aqueous extracts of tanning materials.

It has been sought to attain the same object by passing a current of electricity through the vat in which the hides are suspended. One such process has been found to shorten the time of tanning to a quarter of that necessary when no current is used, and the leather is said to be unexceptionable.—Electrical Review.

The Eskimos.

The old tradition that the Eskimos are a people of small stature is without foundation. On the contrary, in Labrador, Baffin Land and all around Hudson bay the height of the men is probably above rather than below the average of the human race; but, as a rule, the women, although very strong, are considerably shorter than the men. They are brave, industrious, provident and communicative, in all of which characteristics they contrast with the northern tribe of Indians.

A Wonderful Echo.

Many wonderful echoes are known, but the one which takes the first place seems to be that of the old palace of Simonetta, near Milan, which forms three sides of a quadrangle. The report of a pistol is said to be repeated by this echo 60 times, and Addison, who visited the place on a somewhat foggy day, when the air was unfavorable, counted 56 repetitions. At first they were quick, but the intervals were greater in proportion as the sound diminished.

OLD STONER'S GIRL

How She Became a Happy Woman.

By HOWARD SHERIN.

The story properly begins at midnight on the San Luis Obispo coast, California, 20 years ago, when the September moonlight shone down upon Stoner's cattle ranch, near the Pacific ocean, in the rugged Santa Lucia mountains.

Stoner had been a Texas ranger and could hold his own extremely well in that rough frontier community. He had carried off a pretty Spanish wife from the Chihuahua region years before, had brought her to the rocky California coast and had purchased a settler's claim and an old adobe house built by a Spanish hidalgo half a century ago.

Here he farmed, raised cattle on the unused government lands and kept a sort of hotel, for several mountain trails joined at that point the broad highway which led from the county seat, 20 miles south, to the northern settlements in the pineries. He had five daughters, too, the youngest, Theresa, known as Tessa, a girl of 17. That added to the attraction, and almost every night the dark eyed half Spanish girls sang and danced, and old Stoner managed to hear all the news that was afloat, and somehow most of the loose coin of the region ultimately found its way into his pockets. He was a deep one, that same Ephraim Stoner, quiet, sly and patient, secret in his methods and deadly in his blow.

Stoner's wife and his four eldest daughters were uneducated and in complete subjection to his will. But Tessa had more brains and energy than all the rest put together and quite as much beauty, and so the old Texan ranger took a certain pride in her and had even allowed her to attend a district school for two years.

This midnight when, as I have said, the story begins a person of a prying disposition might have discovered several interesting performances in progress around the Stoner abode. On the north side of the house Tessa was leaning from her window conversing in low tones with a blond, fair haired and sturdy young man on horseback.

"Tom, do you know my father? He is not the careless, warm hearted man you may suppose. I must admire his ability, but that is all. I warn you, Tom, there never was a more dangerous man. He may be where he hears every word you say, though if he is he will not speak to you or me about it. But if he knew you cared for me he would be your enemy. He has other plans for me. He wants me to marry for money."

Tom Warren had once been the schoolteacher in the mountain district, miles away, where Tessa had been one of his pupils. Thrown upon his own resources from his childhood, he had developed a strong, earnest character and was already so popular in the county that he had just been elected sheriff, though the youngest man on the ticket.

While Tessa and her lover were talking a scene of a different nature was being enacted on the south side of the old adobe, which overlooked a deep ravine and a camp of five or six men in a field below. For several years these men had spent their summers there, ostensibly hunting, fishing and exploring the country with their dogs and guns. Every one knew them, and most persons liked them. Tessa did not.

Stoner, though it was midnight, sat in the moonlight on an old rawhide chair outside the door smoking his pipe and meditating—a tough, sinewy, grizzled night owl of a man.

"That infernal knucklehead at the camp ought to have reported before now," he thought to himself as he smoked.

A man came out of the brush and spoke deferentially.

"Cap'n, good evening."

"You're late."

"Dick was shot."

"Well?"

"Just as the driver throwed off the box. Shot by a passenger in the neck and shoulder."

"He mustn't stay here to get us into trouble. Take a boat and carry him to the point and leave him in the cave there."

"Yes, cap'n."

"How much aboard?"

"About $2,000 for the Josephine miners."

"Send it over the cliff before morning, and I'll divide it up soon. But you be extra careful—that new sheriff is a smart one."

"All right, cap'n. "And the man went back to camp.

A moment later, just as Stoner was going into the house, there was a low thud of horse's hoofs, and Tom Warren, the young sheriff, rode down the trail around the corner of the old adobe building into the country road that led to the west. He had at last yielded to Tessa's entreaties to "Go, go, this minute, Tom."

Impassive as Stoner was he felt a little startled by the sight.

"Where in the devil did you come from, sheriff? Anything up in this part of the country?"

"Oh, no, not a particle. I've been visiting my old school in the mountains and took the trail home down Cayucus."

This was plausible enough, for there was a blind trail that entered the canyon just east of the angle of the house Stoner felt a little relieved.

"Won't you put up and stay with us all night?"

"No, Mr. Stoner; I must go down to Kestral to see my friends there. It's only an hour's ride."

"That settles it," thought Stoner. "Plenty of stout fellows to use as sheriff's deputies there. He has probably stumbled on traces and is going for help." He sat and smoked and slipped his hand back under his coat. "Easy to shoot the fellow," he said to himself.

"Well, goodby, Stoner," said Warren suddenly. "I suppose the beach road is as good as ever?"

"Perfectly safe, only when you cross Toro creek keep on the sand bar. It's as hard as iron. I crossed there today."

"Thank you. Adios."

Simple, smiling speech, those words of Stoner, and yet they were intended to send Warren to his death more surely and safely than by bullet of pistol or pellet of secret poison.

Stoner took an extra swig of brandy and went to his rest. Warren rode down the rugged hill to the bottom of the ravine, then turned seaward, and at last the wide gulch opened broadly to the shore of the Pacific.

The cliffs were from 50 to 300 feet high and full of wave worn caves. Warren drew rein on the beach and for fully ten minutes watched the ocean sway and rise. His thoughts throbbed with dreams of Tessa. He would take her away from her narrow and hurtful surroundings. He would force Stoner's consent, marry her and make her happy.

He rode rapidly south, and in half an hour the mouth of the Toro appeared in the midst of sand dunes, breakers rolling in and the steady river rolling out. Here was the long sand bar, ten feet wide and stretching across hardly an inch higher than the water surface.

Warren was beginning to have some suspicions of Stoner, but not such as to lead him to doubt the simple directions he had received. The sand bar looked safe, but within a few days the sea, as Stoner knew, had swept it mightily, torn out the long compacted bar and placed instead a quivering mass of quicksand so treacherous that not even a light footed rabbit could cross without being swallowed up and dragged bodily down. Warren rode swiftly forward. He had crossed sand bars hundreds of times. Some horses would have been wiser, but the animal he rode had been bred in the valley.

The approach to the bar was hard for a few rods, and he galloped on. Suddenly, in one heartbreaking, breathless descent, noiseless but unutterably dreadful, Tom Warren's horse went down, down, and the soft, slimy sand came up to his mane. He shrieked out that ghastly cry of appeal and agony that a desperate, dying horse will sometimes utter.

Tom knew the peril. He had drawn his feet from the stirrups and lifted them up at the first downward throb, but the sand began to grab at him also. He threw himself flat on his breast and tore himself loose from the poor animal, over whose back the mingled sand and water were running, as it rolled from side to side in ineffectual struggles to escape.

Tom spread himself out over as much surface as possible, but slowly, resistlessly, the mighty force drew him downward. The hard beach was only ten feet distant, but practically the chasm was impassable. He felt his horse sink out of sight. The sand gripped his own knees and arms, his thighs and shoulders Two inches more, and the end by suffocation was inevitable. Up to this time he had not shouted; only his horse's wild death scream had told of the tragedy What was the use? Who would be passing along that lonely road? Then he thought of Tessa and of life. He raised his voice in a clear, strong shout for help, again and again repeated.

Far off along the deep ravine there came a cry in response and a horse's hurrying feet, and hope awoke in his heart. The margin of life was five minutes now—not longer. Faster, faster, oh, fearless rider!

"Tom, where are you?"

"Here, Tessa. Don't come too near."

But the mountain girl knew the danger. Creeping down stairs for a drink of water, she had heard her father's words to Warren, had thrown a shawl about her shoulders and run to the pasture. There she caught her pet horse, sprang upon his unsaddled back, seized a riatta as she passed the stable and galloped at the utmost speed down the ravine, hoping against hope, for many minutes had necessarily elapsed since Warren started.

She sprang to the ground and tossed the rawhide rope to the one arm he held above the sand. She folded her shawl and put it over her horse's shoulders and tied the riatta round like a collar. Then she led him slowly away from the quicksands, and Warren thought his arm would break, but slowly, reluctantly, painfully, the sand gave up its prey.

"Your father told me to take this road, Tessa," said the young sheriff.

"Yes, I know that, and I heard one of the men tell him today that the bar was swept out."

There was a long silence between them.

"Tessa, go with me to San Luis," said Warren, "and let us get married."

And Tessa went.

Old Stoner heard the news a few days later. Within an hour he had "retired from business." The camp was broken up, the hunters disappeared, mysterious lights flashed at intervals all night from the points of the cliff, and the next day old Stoner himself disappeared, leaving his family, the ranch and the live stock. It was said that he made the best of his way to Mexico and finally to South America. The world is large as yet, and men who have money can ramble over a good deal of it without finding a past they wish to escape from. But Tessa lives in her San Luis Obispo cottage, with orange trees over it and La Marque roses on the porch, and she thinks herself the happiest woman in California.

Transmission of Sound.

A striking example of the magical effects capable of being produced by any one conversant with the laws of sound was shown by the late Professor Tyndall in one of his lectures. He placed on the floor of the room an ordinary guitar. No one was near, and yet some unseen hand drew sweet music from it so that all could hear. The guitar was replaced by a harp, with the same result. A wooden tray was then substituted, and even from that issued mysterious harmonies.

The marvelous effect was simply due to the sound conducting quality of wood. In a room beneath and separated by two floors was a piano, and connecting the rooms was a tin tube containing a deal rod, the end of which emerged from the floor. The rod was clasped by rubber bands so as to close the tube, and the lower end of the rod then rested on the sound board of the piano. As the guitar rested upon the upper end of the rod the sounds were reproduced from the piano, and when the sound board of the harp was placed on the rod it seemed as though the actual notes of the harp were heard, the notes of the piano being so like those of the harp.

As the professor said, "An uneducated person might well believe that witchcraft was used in the production of this music."—Chambers' Journal.

Are Willow Trees Lightning Proof?

"In all my forty years' experience with trees and plants," said a well known gardener, "I have yet to hear of a willow tree being struck by lightning. Spruce trees, whitewood and pine trees sometimes almost seem to attract the electricity, and oak and other large trees and even many small trees are often maimed and killed. But willow trees seem for some reason to be immune to death or injury in this shape, and I have never seen or even heard of a tree of this family which lightning has ever struck."—Cleveland Leader.

Love at First Sight.

We talk of love at first sight, but what shall we say of people who have never seen each other marrying and being not unhappy? "Courting," said an Irishman, "is like dying—sure a man must do it for himself."

In some countries—as, for instance, Sweden—this is not the case. There the marriages of young people are made for them by their parents, and they only begin to court when they are wedded. This sounds wrong and absurd in theory, but it often works well in practice. Indeed young people ask the advice of their parents much too little about that which is perhaps the most serious and important undertaking in life—marriage. Too many of them are like the young lady who said she hoped she might be cut into ten thousand triangles if she did not know more of everything than did her mother. So they consult no one and insist on gaining experience at a great cost to themselves.—Philadelphia Ledger.

An Alphabetical Ad.

The Schoolmaster has discovered this alphabetical advertisement in an issue of the London Times in 1842: "To widowers and single gentlemen—Wanted by a lady a situation to superintend the household and preside at table. She is Agreeable, Becoming, Careful, Desirable, English, Facetious, Generous, Honest, Industrious, Judicious, Keen, Lively, Merry, Natty, Obedient, Philosophic, Quiet, Regular, Sociable, Tasteful, Useful, Vivacious, Womanish, Xantippish, Youthful, Zealous, etc. Address X Y Z, Simmons' Library, Edgeware Road."

Paper Quilts.

In some parts of England there is quite a trade carried on by poor people in making paper quilts for their poorer neighbors. They are simply composed of sheets of brown paper sewed together and perforated all over at distances of an inch or two apart, covered with chintz or cretonne on one side and lined with patchwork or old sheets—anything available, in fact. They make surprisingly warm covers and are much appreciated.—London Tit-Bits.

One Way to Boil a Ham.

The following is the recipe of the famous John Chamberlin of Washington for boiling a ham:

"To boil a ham a la Chamberlin, the night before put the ham in a tub of cold water, fleshy part downward, skin part up. Next morning put the ham in a large kettle or pot of cold water to boil. Let the water get hot gradually and continue to cook the ham in a slow boil, scarcely more than a simmer. At the end of five hours take the ham out, throw the water out of the pot and fill it with fresh cold water. Put the ham back immediately and let it simmer or boil slowly five hours more. Then add, according to the size of your purse, a gallon of vinegar or a gallon of claret or burgundy or champagne; then simmer or boil for three hours more. Then take the ham off, skin it and put in a cool place. Next morning trim it and eat when you are ready.

"To prevent the ham from tearing or the water suddenly boiling too fast it is always safe to sew a piece of cotton cloth tightly around the ham so as to fit as close as a glove. This will keep the meat firm and guard against the neglect of the cook in letting the water boil too fast."—New York Herald.

LAXAKOLA THE GREAT TONIC LAXATIVE

If you have sour stomach, indigestion, biliousness, constipation, bad breath, dizziness, inactive liver, heartburn, kidney troubles, backache, loss of appetite, insomnia, lack of energy, bad blood, blotched or muddy skin, or any symptoms and disorders which tell the story of bad bowels and an impaired digestive system, Laxakola Will Cure You.

It will clean out the bowels, stimulate the liver and kidneys, strengthen the mucous membranes of the stomach, purify your blood and put you "on your feet" again. Your appetite will return, your bowels move regularly, your liver and kidneys cease to trouble you, your skin will clear and freshen and you will feel the old time energy and buoyancy.

Mothers seeking the proper medicine to give their little ones for constipation, diarrhea, colic and similar troubles, will find Laxakola an ideal medicine for children. It keeps their bowels regular without pain or griping, acts as a general tonic, assists nature, aids digestion, relieves restlessness, clears the coated tongue, reduces fever, causes refreshing, restful sleep and makes them well, happy and hearty. ☞ Children like it and ask for it.

For Sale by All Druggists

Laxakola is not only the most efficient of family remedies, but the most economical, because it combines two medicines, viz: laxative and tonic, and at one price, 25c. or 50c. At druggists. Summer Resorts on the G. R. & I.

"The Fishing Line."

The Passenger Department of the Grand Rapids & Indiana Railway has issued a 36-page booklet, entitled "Michigan in Summer," that contains 250 pictures of resorts in Northern Michigan. Interesting information is given about these popular resorts:

Petosky	Mackinac Island
Bay View	Traverse City
Harbor Springs	Neahtawanta
Harbor Point	Omena
Wequetonsing	Northport
Roaring Brook	Northport Point
Emmet Beach	Edgewood
Walloon Lake	and other points

It contains a list of hotels and boarding houses in Northern Michigan, with their rates by the day and week, and passenger fares from the principal points in the Middle West.

This booklet will be sent free upon request to C. L. Lockwood, General Passenger and Ticket agent, Grand Rapids, Mich. The summer train schedule goes into effect June 3. Time cards and full information regarding connections, the 'Northland Express' with cafe car service, will be sent, and assistance given to plan a comfortable trip via the Grand Rapids & Indiana R'y.

Brain-Food Nonsense.

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain another for muscles and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or to prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthly action, purifies the blood and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS.

Woman's General Executive Committee Hold Thirty-Second Meeting.

Philadelphia, Oct. 31.—The 32d annual meeting of the general executive committee of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society began here yesterday, and sessions will be held daily until the end of the week. Missionaries were present from India, China, Japan, Mexico and South America. Each of the eleven branches of the executive committee was represented. Mrs. Cyrus D. Foss of this city, president, opened the meeting with a brief address. By a unanimous vote, the members of the literature committee were appointed members of the executive committee. These are: Mrs. H. P. Pooly, Rockford, Ill.; Mrs. A. H. Eaton, Baltimore; Miss E. Pearson, Des Moines.

The financial reports from the various districts were encouraging, the receipts for the year amounting to $426,795, an increase over last year of $12,263.

BULLER'S MESSAGE.

A London Periodical Prints the Dispatch for the Public.

London, Oct. 31.—The National Review gives the essential terms of the "Spatch-Cocked" dispatch of Sir Redvers Buller to Gen. Sir George White when in command of the beleaguered British garrison at Ladysmith. According to this authority, the message is as follows: "I have been repulsed. You will burn your ciphers and destroy all your ammunition. You will then make the best terms you can with the Boers after I have fortified myself on the Tugela."

Gen. Buller, in the speech which led to his dismissal from the command of the first army corps, challenged the National Review to publish the complete dispatch and to explain how it was obtained, declaring that he would then publish a certified copy of the original and allow the public to judge the matter.

THEY ARE HERE.

The Irish Nationalists Have Arrived at New York.

New York, Oct. 31.—On board the White Star line steamer Majestic, which arrived last night from Liverpool and Queenstown, were John F. Redmond, Patrick A. McHugh and Thomas O'Donnell, the Nationalist members of parliament, who are on a visit to this country in behalf of the Irish cause. Messrs. Robert O'Flaherty, John O'Callaghan, T. St. John Gaffney and Gen. James R. O'Bierne, were at quarantine hoping to take off Mr. Redmond and his friends. In that, however, they were disappointed, as the Majestic reached quarantine too late to be cleared last night. When seen, Mr. Redmond had nothing to say except that he had had a pleasant trip and was feeling very well.

Praised Their Bravery.

Manila, Oct. 31.—Col. Robe, of the Ninth infantry, in his official report of the Balangiga disaster, in regimental orders, praises the magnificent heroism of the dead American soldiers. To the survivors he says:

"Your splendid, courageous, defensive warfare at Balangiga has gone into history as a rare achievement of your regiment. I am proud of you. To you and to those who fought and fell, the army is indebted for a superb demonstration of what the bravery of a few determined men may accomplish under most unequal and unfavorable circumstances."

Picture Frame Factory Burned.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—At 5:15 p. m. yesterday a fire started in Peterson & Co.'s picture frame factory at Union street and Austin avenue, and, fanned by a strong wind, gutted the factory in half an hour. The building was a four-story brick structure. The flames then communicated to dwelling houses which adjoined the factory on either side, and five have been destroyed. The fire is still spreading.

Big Locomotive Order.

Denver, Oct. 31.—The largest order for motive power and equipment ever given at one time by a western road has been placed in the east by the Denver & Rio Grande. The order is for 40 locomotives, 20 passenger cars and 2,000 freight cars.

SIX MEN INJURED

Automobile Party Were Crossing Railroad Track at Westbury.

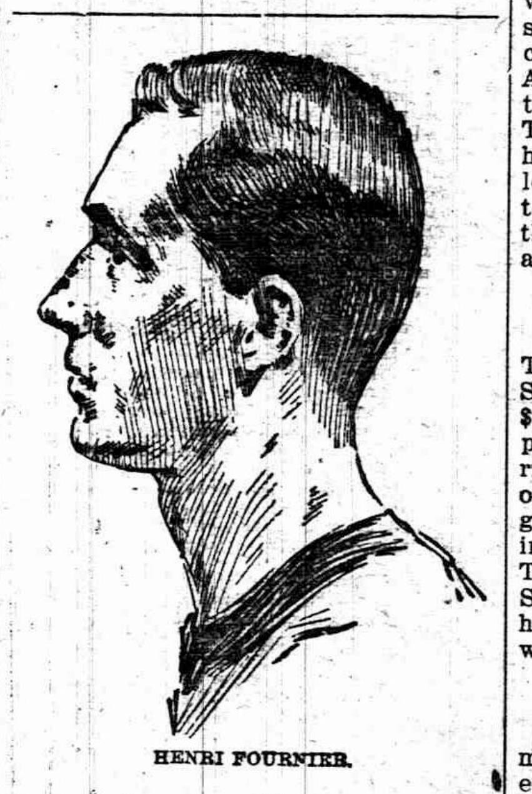
HENRI FOURNIER WAS DRIVING

The Machine Had Just Reached the Rails When an Engine Came Rushing Up—The Crash Was Loud—Machine Was Demolished.

New York, Oct. 31.—As Henri Fournier, the French chaffeur, was crossing the tracks of the Long Island railway near Westbury in an automobile, in which five other men were seated, the machine came into collision with a locomotive and disastrous results followed. All six men were hurt and the machine demolished. The names of those in the party and the extent of their injuries are:

N. B. Fullerton, badly cut about head and face and compound fracture of one leg: A. G. Batchelder of the New York Journal, broken leg and other injuries; J. H. Gerrie, New York Herald, broken shoulder and leg; Arthur Lewis, cuts on face and hand and ankle sprained; Henry J. Everall, leg sprained; Henri Fournier, foot sprained.

Mr. Fournier said that the party was on its way home to New York when the accident occurred, having been out all day in company with Wm. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., in his machine looking for a good road on which it was Fournier's intention to try for the mile record.



HENRI FOURNIER.

"I had just reached the crossing," said he, "and the front wheels of my machine were just touching the first rail when the locomotive loomed up, and I realized an accident was inevitable. Not having time to reverse the power, I gave the handle a quick turn, which moved the front wheels to the right, and then the crash came. The locomotive struck the machine two or three inches behind the left front wheel, throwing it around so that the rear of the automobile was brought against the locomotive. The first thing I remember is someone calling and asking if I were dead. I think I was unconscious for about a minue. The machine was completely demolished. It was not one of my racing machines. It was of only ten horsepower, very heavy, and was built to hold six persons."

There is no flagman at the crossing, which is hidden by buildings, but an automatic bell is supposed to ring on the approach of a train. The members of the party said it did not ring. The railroad people claim otherwise. Fournier, who was handling the lever, and Everrall were thrown about 50 feet. Fullerton and Batchelder were hurled 150 feet, while Lewis and Gerrie were mixed up with the wreckage of the machine. Foxhall Keene, with W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and a party of ladies, who were starting for the Meadowbrook hunt, saw the accident and gave aid to the injured until a number of physicians arrived.

Fournier and his companions were taken in a special car to the Nassau hospital at Mineola, L. I. Later Fournier, Everrall and Lewis were brought to their homes in this city. Fullerton, Batchelder and Gerrie are still at the hospital, and the surgeons say Fullerton, though much more seriously hurt than the others, will recover.

Five Hundred Penniless.

Port Townsend, Wash., Oct. 31.—The steamers Queen and Valancia have arrived from Nome. Each brought 800 passengers. On the Queen were 100 stowaways, who succeeded in boarding the vessel by climbing up the anchor chains while the vessel was at anchir in the roadway at Nome. Passengers report that 500 men were left at Nome, all of whom are penniless, with no means of making a living during the winter and a reign of terror is predicted. During the entire voyage of the Queen petty thefts were of daily occurrance.

Root Knocked Ryan Out.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 31.—"Australian" Jimmy Ryan was last night knocked out in the second round of a 20-round contest at Music hall by Jack Root of Chicago. The fight was for the middleweight championship of the west, and Root was a decided favorite. Ryan, who has but one eye, forced the fighting, but Root blocked him throughout.

No Strike of Spinners.

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 31.—At a mass meeting of the mill operatives here last night two of the five unions—the spinners and loom fixers—voted against a strike Monday next, and as a result of this vote there will be no strike.

May Irwin Will Retire.

Baltimore, Oct. 31.—May Irwin, who is playing here this week in "Madge Smith," announced today her intention to retire from the stage at the close of the present season. Miss Irwin said that she had passed through an enormous amount of hard work and desired to enjoy a rest for the remainder of her life.

Will Meet the Turk.

New York, Oct. 31.—Ernest Roeber has accepted Mehmet Neohad's challenge for a wrestling match. Roeber will meet the new Turk for $250 a side, best two in three falls, at Graeco Roman wrestling. The only condition he makes is three weeks in which to train.

HIS SENTENCE COMMUTED.

Convict Wiseman Will Appear for Trial at Pontiac.

Pontiac, Mich., Oct. 31.—The five-year sentence of Convict Henry Wiseman, the confessed murderer of Mrs. Ellen Huss, has been commuted so that it will expire on Friday, Nov. 1. Prosecuting Attorney Rockwell of this city presented the matter to the governor and Wiseman will be returned to this city Saturday.

Love Has Returned.

Plainwell, Mich., Oct. 31.—About two years ago Samuel Negus, an aged widower, fell in love with Bernice Wolcott, a charming girl of 16, and married her. The young wife lived with the aged husband but one week, and in the meantime managed to secure a large amount of his money, after which she left for the west.

Recently she secured a divorce, but has returned and remained with her former husband. They left immediately for Chicago.

Evangelists Are Expensive.

Niles, Mich., Oct. 31.—At the opening session of the Niles district M. E. conference, Dr. R. W. Van Schoick, presiding elder of the district, took a strong stand against the employment of evangelists to conduct revivals. He said that many churches are too poor to stand the luxury and said he had a letter from one minister who was unable to attend the conference because it had taken all his funds to settle with an evangelist who had just closed a series of revival meetings under his charge.

The Pratt Case Grinding.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 31.—D. J. Sproat of Grand Rapids testified that Pratt told him Adams and French were concerned in the book deal, and showed him drafts that figure in the case, saying the body drafts was in Adams's handwriting. Sproat testified to genuineness of such handwriting. The witness admitted Pratt never told him he had bribed Adams or any other legislator. Today Judge Person will tell Pratt's alleged confession to him, the court having ruled such testimony admissible.

Fight Over a Ring.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 31.—Wm. Tebo has commenced suit against Sheriff Maines for the conversion of a $100 diamond ring. W. R. Austin, a prominent Hebrew, is owner of the ring, and claims an inmate of a disorderly house took it on approval. The girl claims Austin gave it to her. She in turn gave it to her lover, William Tebo. Austin secured a warrant and Sheriff Maines secured the ring for him. Tebo claims the ring is his, and wants it or equivalent in cash.

Look Out for Wildcat Bills.

West Bay City, Mich., Oct. 31.—A man with a big roll of "wildcat" money, issued by the People's National bank of Helena, Mont., the bills promising to pay $5 to bearer on demand, made some purchases at a second-hand store and presented one for payment. The proprietor went out after change and the fellow became suspicious and left. The bills are of a nature to deceive the unwary.

Two Suicides.

St. Johns, Mich., Oct. 31.—J. C. Fortress, a milkman, went into the hay loft and shot himself. He leaves a widow and two children. No cause assigned for the deed.

Petoskey, Mich., Oct. 31.—Samuel Burbank, 65, a wealthy farmer, blew the top of his head off with a shotgun He suffered from pains in his head, the result of a gunshot wound received in the civil war.

Food Commissioner Active.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 31.—Pure Food Commissioner Snow has definitely decided to test the anti-color provision of the oleo law against four local dealers. Chemists have been sworn in the cases, the defendants in which sold alleged oleo from the factory of W. J. Moxley in Chicago, the product being colored "butter yellow."

Will Save One Foot.

West Bay City, Mich., Oct. 31.—Wm. Finn, the Michigan Central brakeman injured near Kawkawlin Tuesday, may not lose either foot, although four cars passed over both of them near the ankle. The physicians say that one will certainly be saved, and they hope it will not be necessary to amputate the other.

Armada Will Be Dry.

Armada, Mich., Oct. 31.—The waterworks movement at Armada has been put at a standstill for the present with an opinion from the village attorney to the effect that the proceedings are irregular, and a new election must be held before bonds can be issued.

Missing With $45.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 31.—F. C. Gier of Eaton Rapids left here Sunday to drive to his home. He had $45 in his pocket, and as he has not been seen since, his friends are alarmed.

Papal Consistory is Postponed.

London, Oct. 31.—"The papal consistory that was to have been held in November has been postponed to next spring," says the Rome correspondent of the Daily Chronicle. "Consequently Cardinal Martinelli will continue to reside in Washington for a time. It is officially announced that the Most Rev. Diomede Falconio apostolic delegate to the Dominion of Canada, will succeed Cardinal Martinelli."

Stone Ransom Progressing.

Constantinople, Oct. 31.—The negotiations for the ransom of Miss Ellen M. Stone, the abducted American missionary, are progressing satisfactorily. it is understood, but beyond this those having them in hand maintained absolute secrecy, as they are convinced that publicity would be detrimental to Miss Stone's interests and safety.

Two Carpenters Killed.

Elyria, O., Oct. 31.—J. A. McDonald and Joseph Kolb, carpenters at work on the new Catholic school house here were killed today. A scaffold upon which they were at work broke and they were precipitated to the ground.

Easy or Impossible.

A remark imputed to Victor Hugo in reply to a young man who asked him if it was difficult to write poetry is both witty and true, but it is more witty than true.

"My dear sir," the poet is said to have replied, "it is either easy or impossible."

A Chinese Trick of War.

A curious artifice of war was adopted by a Chinese junk when attacked by a man-of-war. The crew threw cocoanuts overboard into the sea and then jumped in among them. Nearly all escaped, for it was impossible to tell which were heads and which were nuts.

KILLED HIS WIFE

Farmer at Newaygo Became Enraged and Shot to Kill.

TURNED WEAPON ON HIMSELF

He Lies in a Precarious Condition and Cannot Live—The Couple Had Been Separated—Three Children Are Left in Poverty.

Newaygo, Mich., Oct. 31.—Abe Spies, a farmer living at Croton, eight miles east of here, shot and killed his wife, Flora, yesterday and then fatally shot himself.

Spies is about 40 years of age, his wife being a few years younger. The couple have separated a number of times and have not been living together for a number of months. Spies drove to Newaygo in the morning to induce his wife, who has been working here, to return with him to his home, and failing to do this, became enraged and committed the deed.

He lies in the county jail breathing out his life and constantly moaning in agony at the thought of what he has done. Physicians say he cannot live, there being internal hemorrhage. Three children are left to face disgrace and poverty alone.

M. A. C. Students Rebel.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 31.—Twenty-six Agricultural college juniors met last night and decided not to take the special examinations prescribed by the faculty as punishment for their action in going to Chicago ahead of Prof. Wiel and balance of the class last week for the purpose of inspecting manufacturing plants. The boys say that, inasmuch as there is a charge of $1 for each special examination, and all are required to take four and some five and six, the punishment is really inflicted on their parents, who foot the bills. The alternative is expulsion.

Spectacular Runaway.

Albion, Mich., Oct. 31.—Julius Merritt, driver of a coal wagon, was badly bruised in a runaway yesterday. He was standing in the back of the wagon, the lines lying loose, when the horse started. The wagon was overturned and the front axle and wheels were broken loose. With this part of the wagon the horse went tearing down Main street, jumping completely over a lumber wagon that stood in the way.

Father's Sad Death.

St. Joseph, Mich., Oct. 31.—Prof. William Gilmartin, an inmate of the county jail in this city, received a telegram last evening stating that his father had dropped dead in Bay City, when about to come to St. Joseph to frunish bail for his son. Prof. Gilmartin is a well-known balloonist. He is charged with furnishing liquor to minors, and being unable to furnish the $200 bail, had asked assistance from his father.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, Oct. 31.—Michigan pensions granted: Original—Wm. Porter, Detroit, $6; Wheeler Farris, Detroit, $6; Hiram P. Simmons, Lawrence, $17; Levi H. Chase, Coopersville, $12; Wm. W. Nivison, Coldwater, $8. Widows—Mary Lincoln, Leslie, $12; Sophia Pacardat, St. Louis, $12; Diannah Palmer, West Bay City, $8; Sarah Easton, Hartford, $12; Margaret W. Stewart, Butternut, $8.

Killed in Sugar Factory.

Caro, Mich., Oct. 31.—The first fatality to occur in thebig sugar making plant of the Peninsular beet sugar refinery here, took place last night. An employe named George Briette fell into the machinery and was torn into pieces. The deceased leaves a widow and several children.

Hunter Shot.

Traverse City, Mich., Oct. 31.—While hunting on the peninsula eight miles north of this city yesterday, Joe Dion was accidentally shot, a full charge entering his abdomen. It is said that he will die.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Martin Duffy of Chicago defeated Art Simms of Akron in the tenth round at Detroit.

Lawrence Orlander, a 12-year-old Muskegon boy, was killed by a shotgun that he did not know was loaded.

Frank Rathbone, aged 30, of Petoskey, committed a vicious assault on his wife, while drunk, and inspired by jealous rage. Bound over.

Willard Beach, a farmer near Brighton, lost two barns and his entire crop of beans, wheat and hay. Loss, $3,000.

Alonzo Young, who pleaded guilty at Port Huron to assaulting a young girl, was at once sentenced to three years at Jackson.

Dick Claflin's right hand was cut off at the wrist in a corn husking machine at Potterville. He is a poor man and has a family.

George Cooley, residing near Addison, had his arm so badly crushed in a corn husker that it had to be amputated above the elbow.

William E. Fisher, formerly of Saginaw, died in Toledo, O., from the effects of laudanum, taken witn suicidal intent. Family trouble is said to be the reason.

The district missionary conference, which includes all the Danish Lutheran churches of Michigan, is being held at Muskegon. The next conference will be held at Ludington.

The district convention of Olivet Congregational association is being held at Nashville. Rev. Smitts of Charlotte delivered the apening address. About 75 delegates and members are present.

Half and Half.

"Have you suffered much from tooth ache?" asked the dentist.

"A little," answered the young woman in the chair, "but not much. My teeth, I suspect, are like mamma's. She has never had anything done to hers, and she hasn't an unsound tooth in her head."

"How are your father's teeth?"

"Poor papa! His are all gone. They never were anything but mere shells."

"Well," said the dentist, breaking it to her as gently as he could, "it's very evident that you inherit your upper jaw from your mother and your lower jaw from your father."—Chicago Tribune.

HEAD-ON COLLISION

Bad Smash-Up on the B. & O. Yesterday---Three Are Dead.

TRAIN ORDERS CONFLICTED

The Special Was Filled With Railroad Employes Going to the Assistance of a Freight Wreck When Disaster Overtook Them.

Washington, Pa., Oct. 31.—A wreck occurred on the B. & O. road east of Brady's tunnel, a short distance east of Washington, yesterday, which resulted in the death of three men and the injury of ten more, two of whom may die. The wreck was caused by a head-end collision between an empty freight engine and the westbound Wheeling accommodation train. The dead are:

Michael Hahn, Finleyville, car inspector.

James Beggan, Washington, supervisor of Wheeling division.

M. J. Padden of Roney's-Point, clerk in the supervisor's office.

The injured: J. A. Spangler, injured internally, may not recover; Robert S. Gore, engineer on the passenger train; James R. Fox, bruised and cut; Charles Ball, conductor, scalp wound; G. O. Devaughn, arm and back hurt; M. Devaughn, B. & O. agent at this place, face cut and foot injured; Lewis N. Barto, Pittsburg, brakeman, severely shocked; F. M. Cunningham of Glenwood, conductor on freight train, badly cut by broken glass, condition serious; John Logue, Hazlewood, flagman on freight train, left arm fractured and otherwise seriously injured; C. H. Schull of Glenwood, engineer on freight engine, left wrist dislocated.

J. A. Spangler and F. M. Cunningham are both lying at the Washington hospital in a precarious condition, and their recovery is doubtful. The stories of the case of the wreck are conflicting, and it will take a coroner's jury to determine who is responsible for it. The engine was on its way from Washington loaded with the road officials going to render assistance at a freight wreck near Vances Station, and was hit by the passenger train just as the engine emerged from the tunnel, both going at high speed.

FOUGHT WITH PISTOLS.

Husband and Wife Have War; Child Was Killed.

Virginia City, Mont., Oct. 31.—Two-year-old Ethel Plumb was killed, Mrs. Plumb, the child's mother, was shot in the hip and Mrs. Plumb's bother, Mrs. Parke, was shot in the shoulder during a fight with pistols between Plumb and his wife, who for some time have not lived happily together. Mrs. Plumb has recently been making her home with her mother. Plumb appeared there last night and the pistol fight followed. The child fell dead at the first shot from her father's pistol. The man, who is now in jail, escaped other injury than a powder-burned face. The women will recover.

Negro Shot a White Man.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 31.—Late yesterday afternoon, near the show grounds at Rutherfordton, N. C., Deputy Sheriff Butler was probably fatally shot in the head by Bud Logan, a drunken negro, who, with a negro companion, had been abusing white men and had knocked down four of them. The negroes had out pistols and the deputy attempted to take them when Logan fired. The whites opened fire and both the negroes ran under a shower of bullets. They were soon captured and are in jail. Should Deputy Butler die, a lynching is likely, unless the negroes are shipped from the jail here.

Spreads Like Wildfire

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years." You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, rundown man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

THE SCHLEY COURT.

The Long Ordeal for Admiral Schley Closed Yesterday.

Washington, Oct. 31.—The long ordeal to which Admiral Schley has been subjected since Monday morning ended yesterday afternoon when his cross-examination was concluded, and he was allowed to leave the witness stand. When the judge advocate finished the cross-examination, shortly after 3 o'clock, the court propounded to the admiral 34 questions prepared by the members of the court. These questions touched many points of the campaign of the flying squadron, but mainly centered about the difficulties encountered in coaling and the reasons for the retrograde movement Not one of them related to the battle of Santiago. The judge advocate's cross-examination covered the retrograde movement, the reconnaissance of May 31, the loop of the Brooklyn and the alleged colloquy with Lieut. Hodgson about the Texas.

One of the most interesting features of the day was the development of the fact that the report of the battle written by Admiral Schley July 6, 1898, was not the original report. The original report never has been published and in accordance with a previous decision the court declined to allow it to go into the record. Admiral Schley was allowed to explain, however, that Admiral Sampson declined to receive the first report because it did not mention the presence of the New York. "I felt that the victory at that time," said Admiral Schley, in explaining the matter, "was big enough for all, and I made this change out of generosity and because I knew if the New York had been present she would have done as good work as anybody else."

Capt. Thomas Borden of the marine corps, who was aboard the Brooklyn, will be the last witness called for Admiral Schley. After he testifies today the judge advocate will put on the stand the witnesses in rebuttal, of whom there are understood to be about 15, and it is probable that Admiral Schley's counsel will call several witnesses in rebuttal.

THE FRENCH ARE STARTLED.

The Mediterranean Squadron Has Left for Turkey to Get Satisfaction.

Paris, Oct. 31.—"The entire French Mediterranean squadron left yesterday afternoon," says the Toulon correspondent of the Figaro. "While one division put in at Salins-d'Hyeres another, composed of three battleships and two cruisers, under the command of Admiral Caillard, proceeded to the Levant. Two thousand troops will be added to this force. Admiral Caillard's orders are that, if complete satisfaction is not immediately given by the Ottoman government to all the claims of France, he shall seize the custom house of the post nearest his squadron. It is believed his destination is the island of Mitylene or Salonika. The island commands the entrance to the Dardanelles and the Gulf of Smyrna."

Several morning papers confirm the Figaro's Toulon advices.

Rumors to the same effect were current in Paris late last evening, but the foreign office professed to know nothing about the matter.

Had to Send It Back.

Berlin, Oct. 31.—The German steamer Herzog has arrived at Hamburg from South Africa, having on board six thousand hundredweight of saltpetre. The latter was ordered by a powder mill which has been making powder and dynamite for the Boers on Portuguese territory. The British officials forced the mill to send the saltpetre back to Hamburg.

Reversed Court Decree.

New York, Oct. 31.—A decision was handed down yesterday by the United States circuit court of appeals in the famous case of Brickill vs. the mayor, etc., of the city of New York, reversing the decree of the United States circuit court, and thereby relieving the city from the payment of a judgment of $1,036,666 obtained against it for the infringement of the Brickill patent, which was for apparatus for heating the water in the boilers of steam fire engines.

Will Confer the Red Hat.

Washington, Oct. 31.—Unofficial advices just received from Rome, confirm the understanding that no papal consistory at Rome will be held before next February. In view of this fact, Cardinal Martinelli, the papel ablegate, will leave this country just before the consistory, which, in connection with its other work, will confer the red hat upon him. While there may be some additions to the roll of cardinals, it is certain that none of these will be from the United States.

Letters Are Genuine.

Omaha, Oct. 31.—Chief of Police Donahue last night received assurance from Chicago handwriting experts that the letters received by the chief, signed Pat Crowe, are genuine. The letters were compared with specimens of Crowe's writing in the archives of a Chicago detective agency. The letters were received Oct. 19 and 21, and named the conditions on which the writer offered to surrender to the chief of police.

Hunt Improving Situation.

Washington, Oct. 31.—Luis Munoz Rivera, the leader of the federal party in Porto Rico, accompanied by Wenceslas Borda and his son, called on President Roosevelt yesterday. Mr. Rivera told the president that he and his party would do all in their power to support and co-operate with Gov. Hunt. They told the president that Gov. Hunt's administration was improving the situation in the island.

How Sponges Are Sold.

When offered for sale in the local market in the Bahamas, sponges are either piled up loose or made into strands or beads of from two to ten sponges each. The best sponges are usually made into strings of from eight to ten sponges each. Others are generally sold in lots not strung. The buyer, however, is not guided in his purchase by the number of sponges on a string, but by what a certain lot will weigh, and the weight is never given, but the buyer must estimate it; hence practical experience is needed in the purchasing of sponges.

His Cork Legs.

"Along about 1890," said a veteran physician. "I amputated the legs of a man who was blown up in a boiler explosion and helped him procure a couple of cork substitutes. As soon as he was able to be about he went fishing, fell in and was rescued just in the nick of time. He was laid up for several weeks and then sued me for damages."

"But why?"

"The cork legs stood him on his head in the water."—Detroit Free Press.

A Case of Overcrowding.

"I don't see why I keep on getting so much fatter. I only eat two meals a day."

"I know, my love. But you shouldn't insist upon crowding your breakfast and luncheon into one meal, and your dinner and a late supper into the other."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THESE CLOTHES FIT.

SINGLE PIECE SUITS THAT ARE SPUN UPON THE BODY.

A Remarkable Tale of the Remarkable Garments of Silk That Are Worn by Some Remarkable South American Indians.

Probably no country on earth is more interesting to the traveler on the lookout for queer things and unusual experiences than the silvas of the Amazon and here is a story about an Indian tribe of that region told by Arthur Axtell, an American traveler, that can hardly be beaten.

These particular Indians were continually bent on discovery and experimenting, says Mr. Axtell. Somehow they had come into possession of some silkworms. These worms were not known before in that country, and most of them died before the natives found out how to raise them. But they persevered and by feeding them on the tender leaves of some native plants produced a good quality of silk, not so good as the Chinese product by feeding the worms on white mulberry leaves, but nevertheless a strong, serviceable silk, certainly good enough for the dusky bodies of these savages, for this silk has not yet become an article of commerce.

Their method of obtaining the silk and transforming it into garments was crude. When the moths laid the eggs, the natives carried them in great quantities in belts about their bodies, thus giving the eggs the body heat. At the end of winter the eggs were hatched and the result was an army of caterpillars. These were trained to crawl over the naked bodies of the natives. This was their home. They knew no other and seemed quite contented.

During eight weeks the savage is covered with these yellow crawlers. It would seem that thousands of creeping caterpillars over one's body from head to foot would tickle one to death. Certainly a white man would find it unbearable, but it must be remembered these natives of Brazil are scarcely human. To them it is intensely interesting to train these worms in the way they should go. Small bits of leaves are stuck on the bodies of the natives in regular rows, and round and round the worms go, feeding on the way. The natives help each other in the placing of the bits of leaves and in confining the worms to certain localities on the body.

These caterpillar covered niggers, as Dr. F. A. Marsh, who was of our party, called them, sleep on their backs at night and are careful not to turn over in their sleep. That would be a sad calamity When we came to their village there were ten Indians, men and women, in the act of raising silk caterpillars by this unique process. They were a sight to chill the blood. I know the blood stopped flowing in my veins I stood still and shuddered. Yet there was a fascination about it, for I had been told what the object of it was, and I admired the savage ingenuity.

After the worms have become dizzy with playing the "merry go round" on the bodies of the savages they quit eating and commence spinning the outer covering for the cocoons. When this labor is done, the natural process of silkmaking is interfered with. The savages had found out that when the cocoons were finished they would burst or the worms would eat their way out In either case the silk was destroyed So the worms are prevented from making the cocoons. Instead the fiber for the outer covering is destroyed, and the poor caterpillars stop in perplexity. But they doubtless conclude the savages are right, and the worms are in debt to them for eight weeks of feeding, so they start soon to the spinning of the silk.

The natives are now in ecstasy. They make the worms hustle around them as they have been taught during all their little lives and spinning as they go the fine filaments of shining silk. Round and round crawl the worms, each one spinning 1,000 to 4,000 yards of silk thread around the swarthy, savage neck, around each naked arm, around the chest and abdomen and the lower limbs. The work of the worm is over.

And the result is a remarkable transformation From a nude savage figure loathsome and repulsive, with thousands of yellow worms crawling, twisting, writhing, squirming, to a conquering, proud native of Brazil, clothed in a perfectly fitting garment of rich silk He has toiled not, neither has he spinned he has only bossed the job—yet is he clothed in raiment as beautiful as the lilies of the field. What a feeling of supremacy he must have! He has interfered successfully with a divine plan. He has turned aside the course of nature and stands erect—in his own mind, at least—a man to be greatly admired.—Philadelphia Times.

Slow but Inexorable Justice.

In October, 1900, Pietro Giaconi and Marie Bonelli were tried at Rome on a charge of sextuple murder by poisoning committed 31 years before. In England Eugene Aram was hanged for the murder of Clarke 14 years after the offense. A man named Horne was executed for the murder of his child in the eighteenth century no less than 35 years after the offense. There is also the well known case of Governor Wall, who was executed in 1802 for a murder committed in 1782. Sherward was hanged at Norwich for the murder of his wife after a lapse of 20 years.

But Sir Fitzjames Stephens recalls what is the most remarkable case of all. He prosecuted as counsel for the crown in 1863 a man who was charged with stealing a leaf from a parish register 60 years before—that is, in 1803. In this case the prisoner was acquitted.

The Strength of a Shark.

Given special advantages, such as that of holding the end of a stout rope at the other extremity of which is a hook fixed in a shark's mouth, man may, with the assistance of a number of his fellows, have the best of the shark. But alone and in the water the advantage is wholly and absolutely the other way, and the strongest swimmer and the bravest heart fail when the tyrant of the sea seeks to make his acquaintance.

The shark is a creature gifted with great strength, a savage temper, dogged perseverance and exceptional power of jaw. The lion and tiger may mangle, the crocodile may lacerate, the bulldog may hold fast—the shark alone of living creatures possesses the power of nipping off a human limb at a clean bite.

Gender of the Sword.

Among the many curious notions obtaining among the different races using the sword may be noted the gender of the weapon. In the north of Europe it was either masculine, as in Britain, or neuter, as in Germany, while in the south it was uniformly feminine. Its force and cruelty appealed to the northern mind. Its grace and elegance attracted the warriors of the sunny south. It typified to the one strength, to the other dignity.—Exchange.

Astounding Discovery

From Coopersville, Mich., comes word of a wonderful discovery of a pleasant tasting liquid that when used before retiring by any one troubled with a bad cough always insures a good night's rest. "It will soon cure the cough too." writes Mrs. S. Himelburger, "for three generations of our family have used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and never found its equal for Coughs and Colds." It's an unrivaled life saver when used for desperate lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00 at C. A. Wright's. Trial bottles free.

Eat of God's bread, and you will have no appetite for the devil's dainties.

Geo. A. Points, Upper Sandusky, O., writes; "I have been using Foley's Honey and Tar for hoarseness and find it the best remedy I ever tried. It stopped the cough immediately and relieved all soreness." Take none but Foley's. J.J.Orr

When a man's conscience acts as a policeman he is never on the beat.

I'd leave my happy home and cross
the deep blue sea,
Rather than be without Charley and my Rocky Mountain Tea.
J. J. Orr.

Getting a bare living—Capturing Bruin alive.

No one would ever be bothered with constipation if every one knew how naturally and quickly Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the stomach and bowels.

Nature's spring suit—A bloomer.

That Throbbing Headache

Would quickly leave you, if you used Dr. King's New Life Pills. Thousands of sufferers have proved their matchless merit for Sick and Nervous Headaches. They make pure blood and build up your health. Only 25 cents. Money back if not cured. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

Long division—Divorce.

Adolph Bluner, Grand Mound, Ia., writes: "I have used Foley's Honey and Tar in my family and think it is the best cough cure on the market. I would not be without it in my home, as there is nothing so good for coughs and colds. J. J. Orr.

Harrowing to the sole—Pegs.

Cures croup, sore throat, pulmonary troubles—Monarch over pain of every sort. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil.

The present day—Your birthday.

Seymour Webb, Moira, N Y., writes: "I had been troubled with my kidneys for twenty-five years and tried several physicians but received no relief until I bought a bottle of Foley's Kidney Cure. After using two bottles I was adsolutely cured I earnestly recommend Foley's Kidney cure. Take only Foley's. J. J. Orr.

When a man or woman asks for a candid opinion, it may generally be taken for granted that a "candied" opinion is meant.

Brings attractiveness to listless, unlovable girls, making them handsome, marriageable women. That's what Rocky Mountain Tea will do. 35c. J. J. Orr.

The best thing that people can do with obstacles is to use them for stepping-stones.

To-day take Foley's Honey and Tar. It positively prevents pneumonia or other serious results from colds. It may be too late tomorrow. J. J. Orr.

W. J. Shively, Batesville, O., speaking of Banner Salve says: "I used it for piles and it has done me more good than any salve I have ever used, and I have tried a great many kinds.

Consultation Free.

The most Successful Methods in the Treatment of all Chronic Diseases known to Medical Science

THE PUBLIC PRESS SAYS:
Dr Walker is one of the most skillful Specialists now before the public

REMEMBER DATE OF VISIT

By the latest scientific researches both by improved instruments and methods, the Doctor is enabled to discover the true nature of the disease and locate the organ or parts affected and and many diseases and complications which have heretofore proved most obstinate to the Medical profession yield like magic under his skill and systematic treatment.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It costs nothing to see him, for consultation is free and his prices for treatment are within the reach of all. He is a friend to the afflicted and will turn none away unaided. The merchant mingles with the artisan while seeking relief at his hands and hundreds are cured every year.

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs. D. L. Henning, of Adrian, says: I called at the Emery House, Adrian, on Sept. 14 last and consulted Dr W. C. Walker regarding my case and at once began treatment, and after taking a month's treatment of Dr. Walker, I feel like a new person. No one but a woman could know how I have suffered during the past nine years. His treatment has done wonders for me. I advise those afflicted with any chronic trouble to consult Dr. Walker.
Signed MRS D L HENNING, Adrian, Oct 12, 01

Mr. Chas. Maltby, of Milan, Mich., says: I was taken with Lagrippe last winter: soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system; my sufferings at times were intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I move around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health.
Signed CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was."
Signed JAMES B. GILDAY.
Yargerville. Monroe County, Mich. June 28. 1901.

Sick all his Life. Read the statement of another well known citizen of Monroe county: Mr. W. W. Murphy, of Samaria, who had been almost a constant sufferer all his life from stomach and liver complications He says: "I have found Dr. W. C. Walker's treatment a great help to me. I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment, Had tried everything I could hear of before with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker." Signed W. W. MURPHY.
Samaria, Monroe Co., Mich., June 25, 1901.

Mr. A. C. Crittenden, a well-known business man of Carleton, Mich., states: I took a course of treatment of Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, some 2 years ago and I take pleasure in saying the doctor made a permanent cure of my case. There has been no return of former trouble.
Signed A. C. Crittenden.
Carleton, Monroe co., Mich., Sept. 10, 1901.

Mrs Chas Todd, of Hamburg, Livingston county Michigan, says: "About four years ago my trouble began The doctors called my disease consumption of the bowels. From the time I was first taken I steadily grew worse in spite of all medical aid I realized I was on the decline and that death was staring me in the face In this condition I went to Dr W. Walker, of whose skill I had heard so much After taking a course of his treatment I am entirely cured I feel very grateful"
Signed, MRS CHAS TODD, Hamburg Mich

The case of Stephen Avery vs Chas. Avery for the alienation of his wife's affections, was decided upon in the circuit court yesterday. The jury brought in a verdict of $2,000, which was a surprise to every body, even the plaintiffs' attorneys themselves, as they are quoted as saying they never expected in any event to get half this amount. Watts, Smith & Baldwin represented plaintiff and F B. Wood, John E. Bird and G. R. Gillespie the defendant. A motion was immediately granted by the Judge, staying all proceedings 20 days, within which time an appeal to the supreme court will be taken.

Fine Flour Is Best Say Goverment Experts.

The ideas respecting the superior nutritious quality of whole wheat bread, graham and other coarse grain preparations, have been so solidly founded upon popular belief that a sense of shock would be felt in certain localities if these old and sacred ideas should be rudely turned upside down by scientific knowledge. Yet a prolonged investigation recently conducted by goverment food experts wholly contradicts the coarse bread theory. They made thorough experiments with a number of human beings, and conducted trials of various flours and other cereal preparations, and also subjected these foods to artificial digestion. All the results showed that the coarse flours were decidedly less nutritious than the fine bolted flours, and, therefore, not so suitable for consumption by persons engaged in active physical labor.

It is found to be true that course flours contain slightly more nutriment than bolted flours; but they are not nearly so digestible. The coarse particles are not assimilated and so contribute nothing in building up or in warming the body. They make less flesh and blood and supply less heat power.

Of course, these ideas will be looked upon as revolutionary, but they will quickly be accepted as the truth, since it is established by the results of the most credited scientific investigations. Children have been fed coarse bread and oatmeal in the notion that they were gaining flesh and bone at the most rapid rate possible, but the experiments prove that fine flour bread is the most nourishing and digestible, and more suitable for the delicate human system.

The demonstration of the experts is a boom to millions of children, and even the most cultured devotees of brown bread and cereal fads will turn, for the more delicate quality of their cereal foods, to fine white flour. The coarse bread theory is not left a standing place.

FOUR THOUSAND

Hogs have Died in the last Eight Weeks of

CONTAGIOUS PNEUMONIA

In and Near Tecumseh.

The farmers in Holloway, Raisin, Britton, Dundee and Tecumseh have been much excited for about two months concerning the appearance of what they supposed was hog cholera amongst the swine. Whole herds of hogs would die within a few hours and the usual hog cholera serum had no effect on the disease. In fact anything that Dr. Chas. Waldron could do seemed perfectly useless.

He made up his mind that the disease was not hog cholera and at last sent to Parke Davis & Co., Detroit, telling them of the trouble and requesting that they send out their veterinary surgeon and others if necessary to find out the cause of the trouble and suggest a remedy.

Last Thursday Dr. Palmer, their veterinary and Dr. Perkins, their bacterologist came to Tecumseh, spent the day with Dr. Waldron and since going home sent to Dr. Waldron the following letter. At the present time only one thing is certain, that is that the new disease is single that is, nothing is complicated with it. No doubt Parke Davis & Co. can obtain vaccination serum and battle the disease in that way, the same as is done at the present time with cholera and the firm is now taking the quickest methods to obtain this serum.

Dr. Waldron is entitled to much credit for his promptness in this matter and hopes to be able soon to successfully cure the disease. The farmers have sustained a serious loss so far and will no doubt lose more before the spread of the disease is stopped. Think of it death occurs 12 hours after exposure.

Detroit, 235 Alexandrine W.,
Oct. 27, 1901.

DR. CHAS. WALDRON,

Dear Sir:—I have been waiting in order to give you more information about the swine disease but fear I can not even help you on it. I don't know why but dead pig did not reach us until 3:50 on Saturday. Dr. Perkins held a postmortem at once and found exactly the same as at Bird's. Injected rabbits, guinea pigs and a pig with blood from dead animal. Rabbits and guinea pigs died in 12 hours and the same germs were found in them.

The live pig arrived ok. and I took him on the car and carried him to the barn and put him in with a healthy pig and this afternoon that pig died and I put it aside in a cool place for Dr. Perkins to post to-morrow. Dr. Perkins says positively that it is not hog cholera and hardly dare say just what it is yet, but appears to be a contagious pneumonia. It does not appear to be swine plague. He is putting almost all his time on it. We were working on it the most of the forenoon.

Both pigs arrived in first class condition, couldn't have been better. Can't tell yet whether we will be able to give you much help in the trouble but rest assured we will help you with it if in our power.

The cultures brought from Tecumseh all prove to be pure cultures, so it is this one thing whatever that is. About 50 animals have been used thus far. If any new developments in the field, please let us know as we have become intensely interested in it.

Yours hastily,
H. F. PALMER.

MICHIGAN BOOK

Silas Farmer has Issued another Indispensable Work on this State.

Mr. Silas Farmer, the well known authority on Detroit and Michigan, has just issued a little work which will prove itself indispensable to those who wish to be informed about Michigan.

It is a small volume, printed on thin, though opaque paper, but within its 350 pages can be found pretty nearly every fact that anyone is likely to care to inquire for concerning our state, and the reputation of the author is sufficient warrant for the accuracy of the statements.

Under the head of each county will be found an accurate map with the townships and sections marked out. Every farm of 40 acres in the state can thus be accurately located without difficulty.

One of the more valuable special points is the population figures of unincorporated villages, some of them having as high as 3,000 people which are not enumerated in the United States census.

Another is the careful statement of the amendments to the constitution, showing at a glance not only what the reading now is, but what it used to be.

Along with the book Mr. Farmer is publishing a map of the state prepared on paper with cloth back, which is likely to supercede all others. Like the county maps in the book, it shows the section as well as township lines and indicates accurately not only railroads but interurban electric lines, the latter in red. It is the only map that shows the whole state, including Isle Royale, in its proper geographical position. It gives the exact area of cities, and in many other minor matters is a distinct improvement in map-making over anything hitherto prepared for the state. It is sure of a wide circulation. Price for book and map $1.00.

The Inquisitive Antelope.

An antelope is as curious as a woman. If the hunter will lie down in the grass and wave a red handkerchief, a band of antelope will keep circling around until within reasonable distance for a safe shot. After completing a circle the antelope halt suddenly and bring down one fore foot with a vigorous stamp on the ground, and at the same instant they make a sort of snort that sounds like a half whistle. That is the propitious moment for peppering them with rifle balls.

I learned this trick when a frontiersman came along and found me crawling for miles on the level prairie endeavoring to get a shot at one of the timid creatures. The man asked me if I thought I could get him. I answered: "Get him! I've got to get him. I'm out of meat." He then posted me about lying still and flirting with the handkerchief, and I found they liked that better than chasing, and I made an entry right there that an antelope possessed some of the characteristics of a woman.—Exchange.

Masquerading In the Past.

In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries Venice set the fashion in all matters of amusement and was a sort of combination of our Monte Carlo and Paris. Throughout the eighteenth century the Venetians were seized with a perfect mania for masquerading and gambling. Paris and London followed suit, and the two most popular amusements, both public and private, were masquerades and gambling saloons. People not only wore their masks or visors at balls, but in the Mall and the parks and the theaters. At length matters got to such a pass that when a police raid was made on a certain low dancing place in Soho and an order was given for every one to unmask what was the amazement of the police to find that at least a third of the company consisted of ladies and gentlemen of the highest aristocracy, some of whom had even brought their daughters.—Saturday Review.

Insects and X Rays.

A writer in The American X Ray Journal tells of some unusual experiments upon insects with Roentgen rays. A box was made, half of wood and half of sheet lead. In the wooden half a number of larvæ of flies, bees, beetles and other insects were placed, and the box was then put in the field of the X rays. The insect colony at once became greatly excited, and after crawling to and fro finally emigrated to a worm to the leaden half of the box, where the rays could not penetrate. The experiment was repeated many times and always with the same result.

A similar experiment was tried with the blind larvæ of a certain species of beetle. A number of them were placed in an open cigar box, which also contained a metal box with an opening. No sooner were the rays turned on than the insects showed signs of distress. Their uneasiness increased, and in a little while they all sought refuge in the metal box. As the larvæ in the second experiment were entirely sightless their perception of the rays must take place through the nerves of the skin.

Getting a Day Off.

A certain government officer was noted for being a hard taskmaster to those who were under him, the servants in his own establishment being no exception. His valet was expected to be on duty 365 full days in the year.

Being detailed to accompany a scientific expedition on an extended cruise, the officer unbent a little in communicating the news to his personal attendant.

"Well, James," he said, "how would you like to go with me around the world?"

"Do we go from east to west, sir?" asked the valet.

"Yes."

"We lose a day in going that way, don't we?"

"We do."

"Well, sir, I'd like it first rate. It would give me one day off."

His master was so pleased with the aptness of the retort that he gave him a week off to prepare for the trip.—Youth's Companion.

The American Soldier.

That West Point is the best military school in the world is conceded by all impartial critics. Its methods transform the average raw youth into the honorable, refined and highly educated officer of our army. He is pre-eminently taught the "habit of command," which, as a rule, he uses without any of the arrogance shown by officers of some of the armies of Europe, notably that of Germany. He is made to realize that he commands men who are as sensitive as they are brave and who appreciate and respect a character combining generosity, kindness, firmness and, above all else, physical and moral courage.

These traits of character are carefully cultivated at West Point, with a result that, besides having the best enlisted personnel, we have in the United States army, without question or doubt, the best trained and most capable gentlemen as officers.—Army and Nav Journal.

An Arctic Bill of Fare.

The Eskimos at home in their native frozen wilds do not believe in cooking. Their meat, be it seal, fish, venison, trout, salmon, whale blubber or codfish, they devour in its natural raw state and with the same gusto with which the average small boy tackles a watermelon. As for bread and vegetables, they have none. They set their seal oil lamps going, suspend a soapstone dish filled with snow over it, and with the water thus obtained they mix an equal quantity of molasses procured from the Hudson Bay company. That they drink and are happy. That is the sum total of an arctic cuisine.

A Flame Combination.

If a small quantity of chlorate of potash be powdered and mixed with an equal quantity of powdered sugar, a candle may be lighted by means of the mixture without matches.

Place a little of it in the depression around the wick of a candle that has been previously used and then touch the mixture with a glass rod the end of which has been dipped in oil of vitriol. It will burst into flame, lighting the candle.

An Elaborate Bank Note.

The most elaborate bank note is the hundred ruble note of Russia, of the time of the Empress Catherine, which is a gorgeous piece of paper about 4 inches by 10. The note is barred from top to bottom with all the colors of the rainbow blended as when thrown through a prism. In the center in bold relief is a large, finely executed vignette of the Empress Catherine I in black.—London Tit-Bits.

Testimony of the Nose.

An eminent physician now proclaims that the ancient and general opinion that the nose is an index to character is a fallacy. And it may be proclaimed with fully as much confidence that there is nothing which any eminent physician knows to be so that other eminent physicians do not know to be "ain't so."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Declined the Honor.

"Perkins," said Colonel Hankthunder, "you have named a new brand of whisky after me, have you not, suh?"

"I have taken that liberty, colonel," answered the distiller.

"Well, suh," rejoined the colonel, "I shall have to ask you to call it something else. I have tried it, suh."—Chicago Tribune.

The growth of grass that comes in a long, mild, moderately rainy autumn is said to be far more nutritious for cattle than the spring grass. It is richer.

Best Butter in the World.

The butter of Denmark is considered superior to that of all other countries. It brings the highest price in fancy markets and can be found all over the world in shops where luxuries are sold. In South America, South Africa, in the East and West Indies, in India, Egypt and in tropical countries generally it is used by epicures, who pay $1 a pound for it in tins of one, two and three pounds' weight. No other country has been able to produce butter that will stand changes of climate so well.

Refrigerator ships are now found on nearly all the big steamship routes, and they can carry perishables as long and as far as necessary, but butter shipped by the ordinary cargo steamer usually melts and remains in a liquid state as long as it is exposed to the tropic heat. When it passes into the temperate zone again, it hardens, and the change usually spoils it for the taste, entirely destroying the flavor and leaving it like ordinary grease or oil. The Danes, however, produce a butter which will endure this ordeal without affecting its flavor or sweetness, and they are the only people of whom this may be said.—Chicago Herald.

A MATTER OF FAITH

Many of the Clergy in Michigan Endorse the Little Conqueror.

Our religious opinions are, as a whole, a matter of faith. Whatever denomination or sect we follow we pin our faith on the words and teachings of our pastor. His sincerity is never doubted: that he thoroughly believes his adopted creed is unquestioned. The opinions of the clergy on any subject carry well deserved weight with all classes of people. Many reverend gentlemen in Michigan are testifying for the little conqueror, their praise is not given lightly and only after personal experience. Gratitude and a desire to promote the welfare of the public brings forth such testimony as follows:

"The Rev. F. A. Smith, of 829 First street, Kalamazoo, Mich., says: "When I procured Doan's Kidney Pills I was, at that time, and had been considerably troubled with my kidneys. Backache was quite pronounced, being especially severe when I sat or stood in a stooped position for any length of time. Other symptoms usually attending disordered kidneys plainly indicated what caused the difficulty. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected the annoyance in a very short time and I have not noticed, up to date, any indication of a recurrence. As I took no other medicine there can be no doubt but Doan's Kidney Pills were the direct means of curing me. I am most favorably impressed with them."

Cooking a Mackerel.

Many a dainty nose with beauty and fortune behind it has been airily elevated at the mention of plain, old fashioned salt mackerel, but never at the salt mackerel as cooked by the famous John Chamberlin of Washington. His testimony runs to this effect:

"Take one or more mackerel and soak about 48 hours, changing the water once. Then put them in a pan large enough to hold them, cover them with cream or the nearest you can get to it, put in oven and cook until cream is brown. This beats any mackerel cooking on earth."—New York Herald.

CONFECTIONS FROM GRAIN.

Wheat and Malt Used In the Manufacture of Candy.

A manufacturing plant in New Jersey, formerly used as a manilla paper mill, is now operated by a corporation engaged in the unique industry of making confections from wheat and malt, about the last materials in the world one would expect to find in candy.

In the earlier stages of the process the grain is fanned, ground and mixed in proper proportions. Then it is cooked to a mash, from which a thin sirup is squeezed by hydraulic presses and conducted to a great iron evaporator. Thence the sirup is carried in pipes to a vacuum pan. Here it is vigorously stirred and further evaporated. The thickened sirup is drawn off into huge shallow tin pans, where it is cooled and hardened. Plain or flavored with peppermint, the mass is a rich golden brown in color. Combined with chocolate it is dark as the familiar caramel in the candy shops.

When a batch of goods is needed for the market, the stock in the pans is broken into pieces and put into a boiler surrounded by a steam jacket. It is reduced by heat to the consistency of taffy at an old fashioned candy pull. Skilled workmen shape the mass into long strips that lie like golden snake on a board table.

They are fed to a cutting machine, a noisy little monster with an insatiable appetite for sweets. You could almost cover the machine with a hat, yet it turns out malt creamlets nearly as fast as a Maxim gun hurls a storm of bullets. The boys who carry the creamlets from the machine to the tables where they are wrapped have little time for meditation.—Chautauqua Herald.

A hopeless man is deserted by himself, and he who deserts himself is soon deserted by his friends.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FIVE LITTLE FOXES.

Among my tender vines I spy
A little fox named—By and By.

Then set upon him quick, I say,
The swift young hunter—Right Away.

Around each tender vine I plant
I find the little fox—I Can't.

Then, fast as ever hunter ran,
Chase him with bold and brave—I Can.

No use in trying—lags and whines
This fox among my tender vines.

Then drive him low and drive him high,
With this good hunter, named—I'll Try.

Among the vines in my small lot
Creeps in the young fox—I Forgot.

Then hunt him out and to his pen,
With—I Will Not Forget Again.

A little fox is hidden there
Among my vines, named—I Don't Care.

Then let I'm Sorry—hunter true—
Chase him afar from vines and you.

SMALL CALIBER RIFLES.

How They May Be Kept Clean With a Squirt of Water.

"Now, I'll tell you something that will save you the trouble and expense of bringing this gun to me again," said the expert gunsmith to the owner of a .22 caliber magazine rifle, the barrel of which had become so foul that it would not shoot true.

"The rifles of this gun are not leaded. They are simply caked up with powder. All small caliber rifles get that way when ordinary, soft bullets are shot out of them. This caked powder is as hard as steel, and if I were to try to get it out with instruments I would ruin several dollars' worth of tools. Water is the thing to use. Water is the greatest solvent known, but very few people, particularly people who handle guns, seem to appreciate it. They nearly always try to clean their gun barrels with oil when water will do the work twice as well.

"You use this rifle mostly for shooting frogs, don't you? I thought so. That is what most men use a .22 caliber for. And you sometimes shoot it several hundred times a day, and you find it too much trouble to wipe it out every few shots. Ain't I right? I knew it. Now, let me tell you what to do. Get a small syringe that you can carry in your vest pocket, and after every ten or twelve shots squirt a syringeful of water into the barrel of your gun from the breech, then shoot a cartridge out of it while it is wet. If you will follow this plan, you can shoot your gun 10,000 times and never need to clean it. The water softens the powder that has accumulated in the rifles and the bullet forces it out.

"Use plenty of water in the barrel of your rifle, very little oil in the lock, and never under any circumstances put coal oil in the works, and you will save yourself much vexation and always have a smooth working gun."—St. Louis Republic.

Anecdote of Sims Reeves.

An operatic singer tells the following little known anecdote relating to the late Mr. Sims Reeves: About the middle of the sixties, while the eminent tenor was living in a hotel of a town on the south coast, he made a wager with another guest that he would black his face, proceed to the beach and sing a few of the songs which had made him famous without recognition. Sims Reeves duly disguised himself and rendered to a sparse audience "Tom Bowling," "My Pretty Jane," etc.; but, strange to say, he did not receive much in the way of appreciation or financial tributes from the beach loungers. Hat in hand the tenor approached an elderly gentleman who was standing apart and requested a trifling honorarium, but the stranger had recognized the great vocalist despite his ebon hued skin, and he replied with decision:

"Not this time, Mr. Sims Reeves! My wife is mad about your performances, and you have cost me many a guinea. You haye just treated me to the luxury of listening to you without any ruinous expense being attached."

"Confound you," said Reeves, "you have made me lose my bet! Come to my hotel and have a drink."

The stranger accepted the hospitable invitation.

EDITOR STOREY'S NOTION.

Theory on Which He Remitted a Fine and Raised a Salary.

"I was slashing copy on old Storey's Chicago Times many years ago," said one of the guests at a reunion dinner. "We had a correspondent in an Illinois town who simply would not schedule his matter, but as he generally sent good stuff we let him run on, slashing his stuff to suit the exigencies of the night. Besides, his stuff always suggested good headlines, and that was one of Storey's hobbles.

"On one occasion the correspondent sent up about 700 words which went into 100, with nothing over. On the 100 words I constructed a headline which was right up to the mark. The next day I was instructed to tell the man who made out the checks for the country correspondents to knock $5 off the correspondent's pay.

"When he received his check, he wrote to Mr. Storey saying that under ordinary circumstances he wouldn't kick about the deduction, but in this particular instance he did because the fool headline over the item made by a fool telegraph editor had infuriated the man whose name was mentioned in the dispatch and brought on a fight between him and the correspondent, the result of which was that the correspondent was fined $5 in the police court.

"Mr. Storey was a very just man when you got at him the right way. He instructed the cashier to send the correspondent the amount of the fine and raised my salary because the headline I wrote had caused a row. That was his way of encouraging a headline writer."—New York Sun.

Never Wanted to Be at Home.

"Oh, you men, you men! When you used to call on me before we were married it was all you could do to tear yourself from me at midnight. Now you are never so happy as when you are away from home."

Mr. Griffin—But you seem to forget, Fannie, that I was away from home in those courting days when it was so hard to tear myself away.—Boston Transcript.

A Malaprop.

Miss Windstraw—What a wheezy, pinched little thing that baby of Mrs. Puffproud's is, to be sure!

Mrs. Blazer (contemptuously)—Yes, and to hear her talk you'd thing she had a progeny.—Leslie's Weekly.

AN EXPLANATION.

If you'll make a diagnosis when you're feeling sad and dreary,
As you would with any everyday disease;
If you'll simply question science as to why you're glum and weary
And everything seems dull and ill at ease,
Perhaps you will discover, after devious calculations,
The cause of all these symptoms which appall,
And you'll smile as you reflect, in spite of various irritations,
That it's nothing but the weather after all.

You'll find a sigh denoting neither sorrow nor contrition;
A tear drop's not indicative of care.
They are products of the meteorological condition,
Of extra moisture that is in the air.
So perhaps it's not in reason fortune's chance to be reviling
Or to vow life's store of happiness is small,
For when the sun comes out again, again we will be smiling;
It's nothing but the weather after all.

—Washington Star.

SPIRIT SLATE WRITING.

How the Mysterious Sentences Are Prepared In Advance.

Spiritualistic slate writing, if cleverly done, always makes a marked impression on a magician's audience because it utterly baffles their efforts to detect the trick. They see a small cabinet suspended above the stage by means of cords or ribbons. It has an open front and is empty. The magician turns it around so that every part of it may be seen and taps it inside and out with his wand to show that it is hollow.

On a stand near by he has a small easel, a common school slate, a bottle of india ink with a quill pen in it and a few sheets of ordinary white writing paper. All these he passes around among the audience for examination. Then he fixes a sheet of the paper to the slate by means of wafers, places the slate on the easel and the easel in the cabinet, together with the bottle of ink, the latter having the pen still in it.

Having allowed the audience to see the articles thus arranged in the cabinet, he throws a large silk handkerchief over it. Mysterious sounds are immediately heard, and the cabinet shakes as if some living thing had entered it. When the sounds and the shaking cease, he removes the handkerchief, showing an inscription written in bold black letters on the paper and the pen not in the ink bottle, but lying on the bottom of the cabinet. He then removes the paper from the slate and passes it around for examination, when the writing is immediately recognized as having been done with India ink.

The explanation of the trick is simple. The writing was done in advance by the performer, the fluid used being a solution of sulphuric acid of the purest quality. To make the solution 50 drops of the concentrated acid are added to one ounce of filtered water. Writing done with this solution is invisible until exposed to heat. When so exposed, it comes out perfectly black, looking exactly like dried India ink.

The heat is applied by means of an electric current running over wire with which the slate is wound. The cords by which the cabinet is suspended conceal copper wires, which conduct the current to the slate. Black silk threads suitably attached enable the performer to make the sounds in the cabinet, to cause the cabinet to shake and to jerk the pen out of the ink bottle.

Several sheets of paper are prepared in advance, each with a different inscription, the performer telling one inscription from another by secretly marked pin pricks.—New York Herald.

FLOWER AND TREE.

Pruning to excess or too frequent or too long is weakening to the tree.

When a branch is removed, the cutting should be close, leaving no stub.

The apple, pear, quince and thorn can be grafted one on another, with varying success.

Wormy fruit in the orchard is best disposed of by the sheep. They eat all without making any choice, as pigs do.

Planting a few trees every fall or spring, as may be convenient, helps materially to keep up a supply of good fruit.

The cherry, peach, apricot, nectarine and almond require a light, dry and warm soil, but may be grown on loose, sandy soils.

Saltpeter is recommended as a quick acting fertilizer for flower beds that seem to be languishing, especially those that show small and pale leafage.

Peach and plum trees are both less liable to diseases when grown in the poultry yard. The trees will make a better growth and at the same time afford shade for the fowls.

Geraniums that have been used for summer bloomers will not flower again until the late spring months. Geraniums for winter blooming should be grown especially for that purpose by keeping the flower buds nipped off until August.

THE HANDY FOLDING RULE.

An Old Standby of the Mechanic In Greater Demand Than Ever.

"There are about a million different kinds of rules," said a dealer in hardware and tools, "the rules being something of well nigh universal use in one form or another in pretty much all trades, but here's one old standby that we sell more of now than ever, this being the folding rule.

"There are plenty of rules that fold, the commonly known two foot rule being a familiar example, but this particular old rule that I speak of is known by name as the folding rule.

"It is made in foot long sections, in various lengths, ranging from two to ten feet and over ten, if required, but three feet, five feet, any number of feet, the rule, whatever its total length, folds up completely into a bundle a foot long. The slats are thin and folded up, and even a ten foot rule takes up little room. It can be quite conveniently carried in the pocket.

"Lots of people use folding rules—plumbers, for instance, in measuring pipes and in measuring places for pipes. In measuring a distance greater than the spread of the arms with a tape two men are required, but one man can measure with a folding rule as far as the rule can reach, and with such a rule he can, single handed, measure around corners or in the angles of wall and ceiling or in any other bend or crevice. We sell lots of them nowadays to electricians, who use them in measuring for wiring houses, and we sell them to various other users, the six foot rule being the one most commonly sold.

"Such rules, of whatever length, are sold by the foot at 8 cents a foot."

Heart Disease

retards the circulation, weakens the stomach, deranges digestion, pollutes the blood, destroys the nervous force and saps the vitality of the whole system. It causes pains in the side, palpitation, shortness of breath, smothering, dropsical swellings, sinking spells, and frequently ends all suffering in sudden death. Why tempt death when a cure is within easy reach?

"My head would get so hot it seemed to be burning up, while my feet were like ice. My limbs would swell and get numb. I had to sit in a chair day and night for months and my heart throbbed and pained me terribly. After using three bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure I could do a good days work."

NINE FACED DEATH

Runaway Balloon Captured With Its Occupants Safe.

THEY EXPECTED TO BE KILLED

The Balloon Sailed Out Over the Ocean, But a Lucky Breeze Took It Back to Land Again—One Woman With the Party.

San Francisco, Nov. 4.—The nine occupants of the car of the captive balloon which escaped from this city Saturday afternoon landed safely Sunday, after being over two hours in the air. The balloon was landed near Pescodero, 50 miles from this city and but a short distance from the ocean. The balloon was at one time setting out to sea, but was blown back to land.

Those who made the involuntary trip were:

E. P. Dudley, aeronaut; A. L. Dodge, Ed Foster, Jr., Walter Leon, C. P. Vildecoq, J. F. Leonard, M. L. Howarth, John A. M. Swift and Mrs. J. P. Gunsaulus.

When the baloon broke its bonds, it sailed away in a southerly direction. South of Redwood City it struck another air current, which took it toward the ocean, over the summit of the coast range. Nineteen miles from La Handa, and about six miles from Pescadero, lies Beatty Thomson's place. Thomson was up and out when the balloon came along by Wurr's mill, and the grappling hook slipped through the trees and raked along brushy patches of ground. By this time much of the gas had been let out of the balloon and the power was weak. The rope that held snapped and the captive became a runaway and was sweeping along the ground. When it came within Thomson's reach he grasped it and bore down with all his weight. This stopped its flight. Soon the balloon was brought to the ground and the nine passengers alighted.

A. L. Dodge, one of the passengers, describing the trip, said the balloon first started toward Oakland and after circling about for a time, drifted southward and became stationary for a short period. Then, catching a breeze from the eastward, it sailed over the San Mateo hills and stood far out over the ocean, and the occupants of the wicker cage faced the prospect of a plunge into the sea. Twice, according to Dodge's story, the balloon dipped, rose to the surface of the water, but rose again each time to a considerable altitude. Finally a breeze from the sea caught the balloon and carried it back over the land, and after dragging the cage through the tops of a grove of trees, landed it on a hillside six miles from Pascadero.

"It was a terrible experience," said Dodge, "and I would not undergo the same adventure again for any consideration. Everybody was more or less shaky, while the woman passenger and two or three men were so sick that they sat in the bottom of the basket throughout the trip."

Big Brewery Combine.

Louisville, Nov. 4.—The six lager beer breweries of Louisville have transferred their properties to a new corporation known as the Central Consumers Co., which is capitalized at $3,500,000. The new corporation controls the Frank Fehr Brewing Co., Senn & Ackermann Brewing Co., Phoenix Brewing Co., Schaefer-Meyer Brewing Co., Nadorff Brewing Co., and the Stein Brewing Co. It is said these companies will not lose their individuality. The officers of the new company were all connected with the breweries which have been absorbed.

Going Out of Business.

Washington, Nov. 4.—The industrial commission will cease to exist on Dec. 15 by operation of law. The members of the commission are now at home, mostly to vote in the coming state elections. A full meeting of the commission will be held next Wednesday and the commission probably will remain in session most of the month, going over its final report. This will be embodied in one volume and will be submitted to congress about the time the official existence of the commission expires.

Astounding Discovery

From Coopersville, Mich., comes word of a wonderful discovery of a pleasant tasting liquid that when used before retiring by any one troubled with a bad cough always insures a good night's rest. "It will soon cure the cough too." writes Mrs. S. Himelburger, "for three generations of our family have used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and never found its equal for Coughs and Colds." It's an unrivaled life saver when used for desperate lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00 at C A. Wright's. Trial bottles free.

AN EXCITING SCENE.

An Excommunicated Priest Breaks Up High Mass at Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—There was an intensely dramatic scene in Holy Name cathedral Sunday when, in the presence of fully 1,000 parishioners, Jeremiah J. Crowley, the excommunicated Roman Catholic priest, was publicly humiliated by order of the authorities of the church. Fr. Crowley had entered the church unobserved, passing up the center aisle, and had taken a seat almost under the pulpit. Solemn high mass was being celebrated at the time. When the presence of Fr. Crowley became known, Rev. Francis J. Barry, chancellor of the archdiocese of Chicago, was hurriedly sent for. Upon entering the cathedral he went straight to the seat where the excommunicated clergyman was kneeling, and ordered him to leave the church. Fr. Crowley refused to go, saying: "Put me out if you dare."

The strain was intense, and one woman in the congregation fainted. There was no resort to force, however. Chancellor Barry signalled to a man in the choir loft, and the sound of the organ ceased and the singing of the choir was hushed. The priests in the altar stopped the solemn service at the end of the "Gloria" and walked to the bench and laid aside their golden vestments. The altar boys marched out of the sanctuary through a side door and the priests, clad in their cassocks, followed. The next moment the hundreds of incandescent lights in the vaulted arches were extinguished and the candle lights on the altar were put out. The strain was broken when Chancellor Barry appeared in the pulpit and said:

"Owing to the presence in this sacred edifice of an excommunicated priest, the solemn high mass has been suspended. We will proceed with a low mass."

No sermon was delivered, however, and the mass was at an end before the congregation was calm again. The parishioners lingered around the cathedral and watched the deposed priest as he hurried away. None spoke to him. In a statement last night, Fr. Crowley insisted that it had been his desire to avoid involving any of his brother priests in contesting the order depriving him of the privilege of worshipping in Catholic churches and that, accordingly, he had attended the church of Archbishop Feehan's own parish, which is the cathedral. He announced that he would continue to attend the services of the Roman Catholic church.

MAY NOT BE SO.

Mr. Wu Not Notified of His Recall From United States.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Mr. Wu, the Chinese minister, returned to the city Sunday night from his trip to Ann Arbor, Mich., where he delivered an address to the students. Replying to questions on the subject, Mr. Wu said he had not received any notice of his recall to China, a step which a Pekin dispatch of Saturday's date said had been determined upon, nor had he received any intimation that he would be asked to return. As he has heretofore expressed himself, the minister would not be surprised in the least if such action were contemplated by his government, as he now has served on the mission here for more than a year longer than the customary time allowed by the foreign office at any one place, viz., three years. He is simply holding over now and his recall and the appointment of a successor would be simply in line with established practice. Mr. Wu's tenure has been very satisfactory to the administration and it is understood that it was through representations of the officials here conveyed to the Chinese government that it was continued.

When asked whether he would return to China if he were recalled, Mr. Wu replied with feeling: "Why shouldn't I? All my interests are there."

SOUTHERN SHOTGUN TRAGEDY.

Negro Kills Two Persons and Wounds Two Others.

Roanoke, Vt., Nov. 4.—Meager details were received here yesterday from the little town of Ferrum, Va., about 30 miles from Roanoke, on the Roanoke & Southern railroad, of a tragedy at that place Saturday night. A negro named William Hale took exception to some remarks made by a white man at a political meeting, and leaving the hall, went to his home, where he armed himself with a double-barreled shotgun, loaded with buckshot, returned to the place where the speaking was being held, and fired both barrels into the crowd. A white man named Robinett, who was the village blacksmith, was killed instantly, and John Thomas, colored, received wounds from which he died shortly afterward. The other men, both white, were seriously and probably fatally wounded.

Hale made his escape and thus far has not been captured, though the country is being scoured for miles around by indignant citizens. Bloodhounds were sent to the scene. There are no trains on the Roanoke & Southern road on Sunday, and the telegraph office is closed. Hale is said to be a desperate character.

Cracked Six Cribs.

Battle Creek, Mich., Nov. 4.—Burglars swooped down on Battle Creek Saturday night and made things lively for the police until morning. They visited no less than six residences and made a good haul, including watches, jewelry and money. They have not been captured.

No New Plague Cases.

Liverpool, Nov. 4.—United States Consul Boyle states that he does not consider the bubonic plague outbreak serious enough to require the quarantine of vessels from Liverpool at American ports. No new cases have developed.

Game is Plentiful.

Lansing, Mich Nov. 4.—The report of the state game warden shows a steady increase in the number of game and fur bearing animals throughout the state. To a large extent this is due to the co-operation of sportsmen and others, which has enabled the closed season to be closely observed. The deer in the upper peninsula are especially abundant this year.

After Closing Time.

Niles, Mich., Nov. 4.—Mayor Z. L. Baldwin instituted a wave of reform when he personally visited the saloons after closing time Saturday night. Several of the dram shops were doing business when the mayor put in an appearance and ordered the places closed. Arrests are expected.

FAST MAIL SERVICE

May Soon Extend Direct From Atlantic to Pacific.

IMPORTANT POSTAL REPORT

Pneumatic Service For Large Cities to Be Resumed—Closer Separation of City Mail by Postal Clerks is Much Needed.

Washington, Nov. 4.—The annual report of Second Assistant Postmaster-General W. S. Shallenberg urges regular, direct fast mail service between the Pacific coast and the orient; the re-establishment of pneumatic tube service generally and the closer separation of city mail by postal clerks on railway trains rather than by clerks of the mailing division after its arrival in the general postoffice. Under the last-named proposition the entire force engaged in distributing mail ready for the carriers would be under one management and congestion in a postoffice could be overcome by the temporary detail of railway mail clerks off duty. The city distribution in postal cars has been assumed entirely by the railway mail service, supplanting the former practice of having clerks from the city postoffice go out some distance on the road to meet in-coming trains. Constant demands are now being made for still closer separation by having the railway mail clerk or superintendent in charge take the outgoing mail from the public and see that it is expeditiously dispatched, and also deliver the in-coming mail properly made up for the carriers. Mr. Shallenberg's suggestion for the present test of the practical operation of this proposition at postoffices whose gross receipts are half a million dollars or more a year.

The postoffice department has no contract for direct mail service between the Pacific coast on ships, mails being carried by government transports or by steamers to Hong Kong, and thence by steamers of other countries to Manila. "It now seems probable," says the report, "that if this government should withdraw its transports, as may be done at any time with the understanding that its passenger and fast freight traffic, together with the increasing volume of its mails, might go to the steamship company that would submit the most satisfactory proposal for quick and regular service, a favorable contract could be secured. The mail service and commercial interests would be greatly advanced by fast mail steamers adhering strictly to schedule time between the Pacific coast and Manila and calling at other ports at regular intervals, under contract with this government."

The request for $500,000 appropriation for pneumatic service is renewed as a basis for the beginning of the service which, when fully established, it is stated will involve an annual expenditure of approximately $800,000. The department expresses its opinion and that of the commission of experts that investigated the subject, that the outright purchase of the system should not be considered by congress pending a more complete test.

The report shows that on June 30 last there were 267,357 miles of star route service, 183,358 of railroad routes, 45,779 of railway postoffice of car routes and almost 3,000 miles of electric and cable car routes. The annual rate of expenditure for all classes of domestic mail transportation service has increased $6,940,285 since last year. It is contemplated that the new contracts for star mail service, beginning next July, shall provide for delivering mail into boxes along nearly all of the routes.

Deaths in Philippines.

Washington, Nov. 4.—The latest mail report received at the war department from Gen. Chaffee contained the following list of deaths in the troops under his command, in addition to those made public Saturday:

Honored at Last.

New York, Nov. 4.—The Spanish steamship Montserrat, on her way home from Havana, came into port Sunday with her flags at half mast. In a mortuary apartment aboard the liner is the body of Admiral Villamil, who lost his life during the encounter with the American ships at Santiago. The body is on the way to Spain. Before the Montserrat leaves the Spanish consul and many of the Spanish residents of this city will attend memorial services aboard the steamer.

A Business Tonic.

Advertising is not a cure all for business ills, but a pharmacopia of business tonics. All depends upon the prescribing. Magazine space is good for certain business diseases that will never yield to billboards, while the newspaper is the quinine for business chills that are beyond the power of dodgers. Every remedy in the list has its uses, and the whole result of treatment depends upon the doctor.—Printers' Ink.

PAN-AMERICAN CLOSED.

Lights Out in the Big Exposition; Heavy Financial Loss.

Buffalo, Nov. 4.—The Pan-American exposition ended at 12 o'clock Saturday night. At midnight President John G. Milburn pressed an electric button and the lights in the famous electric tower grew dim for the last time. Slowly, one by one, the lights on post and pinnacle and tower faded away. A corps of buglers standing in the tower sounded "taps," and one of the greatest glories of the exposition was ended.

The exposition has not been a financial success, but it is believed the benefits derived from it will be of great value to the commercial interests of the country. The primary object of the exposition was to advance the friendly relations and commercial intercourse between the United States and the other countries of the two Americas. In this respect it has been a decided success. The financial loss will be in the neighborhood of $3,000,000. The first mortgage bonds, amounting to $2,500,000, will be paid in full.

The total number of admissions for the six months was close to 8,000,000. An average of 2,000,000 a month had been figured on by the exposition officials. The great snowstorm of last April was a severe blow to the exposition.

There was a veritable riot on the midway the closing evening. The disorder started from a quarrel between an intoxicated man and a waiter. The crowd took the part of the stranger and wrecked the place, smashing chairs, tables and windows. A stream of water from a fire hose finally put the mob to rout.

The total admissions the last day were 124,399, and for six months 8,295,073.

BOTHA DIRECTED ATTACK.

Some Later Details Concerning the Recent Boer Victory.

Pretoria, Nov 4.—Further details have been received regarding the attack by the Boers under Commandant General Louis Botha last week upon Col. Benson's column near Brakenlaagte, eastern Transvaal. It appears that Gen. Botha, who had been joined by another big commando, aggregating 1,000 men, attacked Col. Benson's rear guard Oct. 30 on the march, and captured two guns, but was unable to retain them. Col. Benson fell mortally wounded early in the fight.

Major Wools-Sampson took command, collected the convoy and took up a position for defense about 500 yards from entrenchments prepared by the Boers. The captured guns were so surrounded that neither side could touch them.

The Boers made desperate efforts to overwhelm the whole British force, charging repeatedly right up to the British lines and being driven back each time with heavy loss. The defense was stubbornly and successfully maintained through the whole of the following day and the succeeding night, until Col. Barter, who had marched all night from Bushman's kop, brought relief in the morning of Nov. 1. The Boers retired. Their losses are estimated as being 300 or 400. Col. Benson did not long survive. Not only did Gen. Botha direct the attack, as already cabled, but he personally shared in the fighting.

Li Hung Chang's Illness.

Pekin, Nov. 4.—The condition of Li Hung Chang, who has been seriously ill, shows improvement. His physicians diagnose the malady as ulceration of the stomach, and the hemorrhages have been severe. As a rule, he is an intractable patient, but, having been told that his life depends upon his adhering to a liquid diet, he is complying with the medical orders.

Nothing From Miss Stone.

Constantinople, Nov. 4.—Nothing is publicly known here, beyond what has already been cabled to the Associated Press regarding the whereabouts and fate of Miss Ellen M. Stone, the abducted American missionary, or the progress of the negotiations for her ransom. In the absence of news there is considerable disquietude.

World's Record Broken.

New York, Nov. 4.—Albert Champion, on a motor bicycle, broke the world's 10-mile record at the Vailsburg track Sunday. He did five miles in 6:22 3-5, and 10 miles in 12:47 1-5.

The Earliest Lens.

The earliest known lens is one made of rock crystal unearthed by Layard at Nineveh. This lens, the age of which is to be measured by thousands of years, now lies in the British museum with its surface as bright as when it left the maker's hands. By the side of it are very recent specimens of lens which have been ruined by exposure to London's fogs and smoke.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

Big Sunday Celebration by the Order Generally.

Detroit, Nov. 4.—Many notable audiences have gathered at the Light Guard armory and Sunday that building held 1,600 of the bright and brainy men of Michigan and adjoining states. The Knights of Columbus came by special trains and big delegations from many points in the state. Toledo was strongly represented also, and many men of prominence in the order are present from Chicago and the east.

The program of the day opened with mass at St. Aloysius' church. In the afternoon a large class of candidates was put through the three degrees by visiting and local officials in the presence of a large gathering of knights.

At 8 o'clock a banquet in the main audience room of the armory commenced and with a program of excellent toast responses the day closed. Today the organization of the state district council will be effected and officers will be elected.

Special delegations arrived in Detroit from all directions in the morning. The Bay City and Saginaw contingents came on a train all their own. Toledo sent 150 of the best knights, and large crowds were present from Pontiac, Battle Creek, Ann Arbor, Grand Rapids, Jackson and Cleveland, besides many knights from other cities in the state. The Knights of Columbus have multiplied in numbers rapidly of late and the phenomenal growth of the order has necessitated the organization of Michigan into a district council.

Pratt Found Guilty.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 4.—The Pratt bribery case was given to the jury Saturday. After the jurors had retired Prosecuting Attorney Tuttle announced himself as ready to try the cases against Adams and French as soon as possible and elected to try Adams first. No date for the trial was announced, but it is understood that Monday, Nov. 11, will probably be the time selected.

At 9:10 Saturday night the jury in the Pratt case brought in a verdict of guilty. Judge Wiest granted the attorneys until the first day of the next term to file a bill of exceptions and a stay of proceedings until that time.

Good Showing to Be Made.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 4.—Prospects are bright for the largest display of furniture ever shown here at the coming spring sales. P. J. Klingman is putting up another large exhibition building, which will add 200,000 square feet to the rooms now available, and he announces that his buildings will be filled. Space in the other large buildings here is nearly all taken. The season will open Jan. 2.

Stopped by Revolver.

Manistique, Mich., Nov. 4.—William Patterson, driver for Cirvin, the baker, had quite an experience near Delta Junction, while en route from Cooks to Manistique. Three colored tramps attempted to hold him up. One ran to the horse's head while the others made an onslaught on the wagon. Patterson whipped out his revolver, and after he fired a few shots the tramps beat a hasty retreat.

France Means Business.

Paris, Nov. 4.—This morning M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs, telegraphed M. Bapst, councilor of the French embassy in Constantinople, directing him—so the correspondent of the Associated Press is authoritatively informed—to present today to Tewfik Pacha, Ottoman minister of foreign affairs, a note asking how the Turkish government proposes to pay the Lorando claim and demanding the execution of the sultan's irade dealing with that matter. The note will also require satisfaction regarding the rights of France, which are defined in the various capitulations and treaties, and which in some cases have not been respected and in others have been encroached upon by Turkey.

This declaration of what has been done bears out the statement cabled Saturday to the Associated Press regarding the intention of the French government to attack Turkey if demands are not acceded to.

BIG FIRE AT MANITOWOC.

Property Loss $125,000—Two Firemen Overcome By Heat.

Manitowoc, Wis., Nov. 4.—Seventy-three carloads of flour on track and 23 carloads in the warehouse of the Wisconsin Central Railway Co. were destroyed by fire of unknown origin Sunday night, together with the warehouse and dock property of the road. The loss will reach $125,000, fully covered by insurance.

The flour was the property of the Washburn-Crosby Milling Co., of Minneapolis. The warehouse and dock, built a few years ago, cost $45,000.

Firemen Gust Boeder and Louis Wilkowski were overcome by the heat and were rescued with difficulty. Wilkowski's condition is serious.

A Trolley Disaster.

Columbus, O., Nov. 4.—Four persons were seriously hurt, one of them perhaps fatally, and several others were slightly cut and bruised in a collision of two motor cars on the Columbus, London & Springfield electric railway Sunday afternoon at Rome, a few miles west of Columbus. The injured:

Miss Lola Romosier, spine and back badly wrenched.

John Balser, dairyman, skull fractured; may die.

Daniel Nelson, colored, right leg broken.

The collision occurred at the bottom of a steep grade and was caused by the brakes on a descending car failing to work, allowing it to crash into a car standing at a siding.

Spreads Like Wildfire

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years." You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, rundown man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

IMPORTANT CASE

Auditor General Cannot Set House Ruling Aside.

MILAGE ALLOTMENT CASES

The Alger County Controversy Is Much More Important Than Has Been Supposed—Fraud, if Any, Must Rest on the House.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 4.—The question involved in the case brought by Journal Clerk Samuel F. Cook of the house of representatives to compel Auditor-General Powers to countersign his certificate for mileage to and from Alger county is of much greater importance than appears on the surface. It involves a question of vast concern as to the authority of the two houses of the legislature in regard to numerous matters.

The auditor-general refused to countersign the certificate on the ground that Cook's actual residence was Lansing, instead of Rock River, and that the mileage was not actually traveled.

Lewis M. Miller, the veteran clerk of the house, who is attorney for Cook, has filed a brief in which he maintains that each house has the absolute right to determine the number of miles for which each member, officer and employe is to draw mileage, and that having determined that Cook is entitled to mileage from Alger county, such determination cannot be reviewed. Miller contends that such has been the long continued and undisputed practice; that, as a matter of necessity, such questions must be determined by the legislature, each house for itself; that this is one of the cases in which, under our system, each house exercises such judicial powers as are necessary to determine questions arising in matters peculiar to itself.

The point is made that if the auditor-general can go back of the determination as made by the house, for the purpose of considering the matter of "actual travel," he can also dispute the question of which is the "usually traveled route," or may join issue with the house over the proper method of computation of mileage, and may then refuse to countersign on the ground that the allowance is excessive.

"If any fraud has been perpetrated upon the state," says Miller, "it was done by the house in determining the mileage due Cook, and it is submitted that the court will neither impugn the honor and integrity of the house, nor permit a party to any proceedings before it to do so." In this connection the following is quoted from an opinion written by Judge Cooley: "The legislature will not only choose its own modes of collecting information to guide its legislative discretion, but, from due courtesy to a co-ordinate department of the government, we must assume that these methods were the suitable and proper ones, and that they led to correct results. And if the records show no investigation, we must still presume the proper information was obtained; for me must not suppose the legislature to have acted improperly, unadvisedly, or from any other than public motives used any circumstances, when acting within the limits of its authority.

New Michigan Corporations.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 4.—The following corporations filed articles of association with the secretary of state during the past week: White Star Portland Cement Co., Detroit, $10,000; Ash-Harper Co., Lyons, $11,000; Michigan Lithographic Co., Grand Rapids, $10,000; Stearns Mercantile Co., Ludington, $30,000; Forester & Cheney Co., Detroit, $25,000; McConnell-Huber Lumber Co., Detroit, $10,000; Petoskey, Bay View & Northern Gas Co., Petoskey, $100,000; Stearns Lighting & Power Co., Ludington, $50,000; Battle Creek & Marshall Traction Co., $200,000; Coe Pharmaceutical Co., Detroit, $10,000.

Non-capitalized corporations—East Side Bakers' Protective association, Detroit.

The Munising State bank, Munising, filed notice of increase of capital from $15,000 to $80,000.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Michigan pensions: Original (war with Spain)—Samuel Feltman, Muskegon, $6; Harley M. Andrus, Hastings, $14. Increase—James M. Thompson, Charlevoix, $8; Bela Ames, Pokagon, $10; Levi E. Bacon, Petoskey, $17. Widows—Sarah Ann Burleson, Reading, $12; Maria L. Worden, Grand Ledge, $8; Alice J. Watson, Grand Rapids, $12; Matilda A. Sickafoose, Buchanan, $8; Mannah A. Bishop, Jackson, $12; Susanne Burt, Detroit, $12.

Heavy Snow at Escanaba.

Escanaba, Mich., Nov. 4.—The city received a big surprise Sunday, finding itself apparently in the grasp of winter. A heavy snow fell.

Houghton, Mich., Nov. 4.—A severe snow storm raged all Sunday. The Portake Lake docks are filled with vessels seeking shelter.

Thunder.

Winter thunder is considered throughout Europe to be of very ill omen, but April thunder is considered to be very beneficial. In Devonshire and other cider counties of England there is a saying that "when it thunders in April you must clean up the barrels"—in readiness, that is, for a plentiful crop of apples.

The French consider April thunder to be indicative of a good yield from their vineyards and cornfields.

Chance For Vengeance.

Simson (angrily)—I have sent the editor of The Hightone Magazine forty-two of my poems, and he has returned every one of them.

Friend—Don't send him any more. He might get mad.

"Suppose he should. What could he do?"

"He might publish one of them under your real name."—New York Weekly.

Abandoned Cisterns.

An abandoned cistern is often a dangerous thing and should be filled, as stagnant water which may remain in it is a common source of disease. If this cannot be done at once, it is a good plan to throw in proper disinfectants and gradually fill it up with sifted coal ashes.

The Real Bitterness.

Mamma—But, darling, why should you object to taking the good doctor's advice?

Bobby—It isn't his advice, mamma. It's his horrid old medicine that I hate to take.—Chicago News.

Why He Never Attains Her Ideal.

A man who is earning the living for a family doesn't have time to live up to his wife's ideals, and by the time he has made his money he is too old and wants to be comfortable.—Atchison (Kan.) Globe.

COMING AGAIN

M. F. STEIN,

THE FAMOUS OPTICIAN of Detroit,

Eyes tested by means of the latest appliances. In the hand of an expert. The only method to properly detect errors in curvatures or shape of the eyes. The diagnosis of diseases and fitting of glasses reduced to a certainty. M. F. Stein has testimonials from the leading physicians in every town or city he has visited. He is not a cure all, but an Eye Specialist who makes regular visits to your town. The eye is a delicate organ and subject to hundreds of diseases. You have a dentist fill your teeth, have a scientific optician fit your glasses. Will be at

A Wonderful [illegible]

Some charitable women were recently inspecting the wards of a Baltimore hospital when they chanced to see a poor fellow, the expression of whose face melted their hearts.

"My poor man," said one of the women sympathetically, "you seem to suffer agonies."

"Sure, mum," he answered, "I have the rheumatism."

"Is there anything I could do for you?" asked the kind hearted woman.

"We-l-l," slowly muttered the patient "I would like to have my face shaved but I haven't the coin."

The women held a hasty consultation, and one of them finally drew a crisp $2 bill from her purse. Turning to the patient, she said, "There, take this, and may you soon get better."

Her wish was evidently gratified, for the next day when she called at the hospital to see the good effects of a shave on the rheumatic patient she was told that shortly after she had left on the previous day he had shown such marked improvement that he said he was able to get up and hurriedly left the hospital before a barber had been summoned. It was evident that the $2 bill had wrought the wonder.—Baltimore

Consultation Free.

The most Successful Methods in the Treatment of all Chronic Diseases Known to Medical Science

☞THE PUBLIC PRESS SAYS:
Dr Walker is one of the most skillful Specialists now before the public

REMEMBER DATE OF VISIT

By the latest scientific researches both by improved instruments and methods, the Doctor is enabled to discover the true nature of the disease and locate the organ or parts affected and many diseases and complications which have heretofore proved most obstinate to the Medical profession yield like magic under his skill and systematic treatment.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It costs nothing to see him, for consultation is free and his prices for treatment are within the reach of all. He is a friend to the afflicted and will turn none away unaided. The merchant mingles with the artisan while seeking relief at his hands and hundreds are cured every year.

Read What Grateful Patients Say

Mrs. D. L. Henning, of Adrian, says: I called at the Emery House, Adrian, on Sept. 14 last and consulted Dr W. C. Walker regarding my case and at once began treatment, and after taking a month's treatment of Dr. Walker, I feel like a new person. No one but a woman could know how I have suffered during the past nine years. His treatment has done wonders for me. I advise those afflicted with any chronic trouble to consult Dr. Walker.
Signed MRS D L HENNING, Adrian, Oct 12, 01

Mr. Chas. Maltby, of Milan, Mich., says: I was taken with Lagrippe last winter; soon after rheumatism set in, affecting my whole system, my sufferings at times were intense and in a short time I had become so emaciated that I was a mere skeleton and only by the aid of crutches could I move around at all. I took less than three months treatment of Dr. Walker, who completely restored me to health.
Signed CHAS. MALTBY.

Mr. James B. Gilday, a well known citizen, of Yargerville, Mich., says: "I had suffered with catarrh of the head, throat and bronchial tubes for several years. I had treated with several doctors and also tried the best patent medicines advertised, but found no relief until I consulted Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, who makes regular visits to Monroe. The doctor's treatment produced most satisfactory results. Those afflicted with chronic diseases should not lose hope but go to Dr. W. C. Walker. I can cheerfully recommend the doctor as a thorough gentleman and master of his profession. This statement is voluntary on my part, given for the benefit of those afflicted as I was."
Signed JAMES B. GILDAY.
Yargerville. Monroe County, Mich. June 28. 1901.

Sick all his Life. Read the statement of another well known citizen of Monroe county: Mr. W. W. Murphy, of Samaria, who had been almost a constant sufferer all his life from stomach and liver complications. He says: "I have found Dr. W. C. Walker's treatment a great help to me. I was troubled with sick headache often, as long as I can remember; am now 44 years of age. I treated with the doctor several months and have not had one attack of sick headache since I began his treatment. Had tried everything I could hear of before with very little benefit. I heartily recommend Dr. Walker." Signed W. W. MURPHY
Samaria, Monroe Co., Mich., June 25, 1901.

Mr. A. C. Crittenden, a well-known business man of Carleton, Mich., states: I took a course of treatment of Dr. W. C. Walker, of Detroit, some 2 years ago and I take pleasure in saying the doctor made a permanent cure of my case. There has been no return of former trouble.
Signed A. C. Crittenden.
Carleton, Monroe co., Mich., Sept. 10, 1901.

Mrs Chas Todd, of Hamburg, Livingston county Michigan, says: "About four years ago my trouble began. The doctors called my disease consumption of the bowels. From the time I was first taken I steadily grew worse in spite of all medical aid. I realized I was on the decline and that death was staring me in the face. In this condition I went to Dr W. Walker, of whose skill I had heard so much. After taking a course of his treatment I am entirely cured. I feel very grateful."
Signed, MRS CHAS TODD. Hamburg Mich

Coaling a British Visitor.

A big British battleship coming here to attend a patriotic function of some kind on the invitation of our government ran short of coal, and Uncle Sam, as host, agreed to fill her bunkers free of charge. This courtesy was done through the medium of a Jersey City merchant, who supplied fine furnace coal, worth from $6 to $7 a ton and presented his bill to the English captain. "Send it to the navy department," said the latter, and to Washington it went, to be returned by the next mail with a memorandum attached saying that an error had been made in the charge, "the government contract calling for coal at $3 a ton." And that is all the smart Jerseyite ever received.—New York Press.

H. D. Nessel, while attending a Hallowe'en party last evensng, was arrested, charged with attempted criminal assault on Helen Felger, aged 14 years. The girl claims that she was assualted when returning home some nights ago from the rehearsal of a play about to be given here. Nessel is practically a new-comer here and is the proprietor of a store His alleged victim is the daughter of highly respectable parents. There were numerous threats of giving Nessel a coat of tar and feathers before he was arrested.—Toledo Blade. Mr. Nessel is formerly from Tecumseh having run a novelty store in the Mills block for a short time.

Uncle Hez.

Frank Adams Company last night gave a splendid performance at City Opera House. The play abounds in amusing incidents. Not the least of which are those of Uncle Hez and the "Talkaphone." His work at the phone was a clever hit and sufficient to make the audience wish he would go to it oftener. The first act closes with one of the most thrilling of climaxes when Martin Thorn is surprised while robbing the store of Uncle Hez, a desperate encounter ensues between Thorn, Zac Mullen, Uncle Hez and Kate Marsden, in which Zac is killed and Thorn worsted.

The specialties were clever and repeatedly enchored. Mr. Adams was well supported, each member of the company handling his or her part in the most approved style, the audience being especially well pleased with Master Frankie as Little Billy Wilkins.—Frederick, Md., Daily News. Sutton's opera house, Saturday, Nov. 9.

SETTLED

Milward T. Loucks, who stole $600 from

RICHARD MEADE

Sent to State Prison in New York State.

Rochester, N. Y.—(Special)—A sentence of not less than one year and four months and not more than three years and six months was imposed on Milward T. Loucks, a Detroit man, by County Judge Sutherland to-day. Loucks was convicted of grand larceny in the first degree in stealing $600 from a Tecumseh, Mich., resident.

Just before the crime was committed Loucks was employed by an automobile concern in Detroit, where he met Richard T. Meade, a well to do resident of Tecumseh. Meade wanted to invest in an automobile and Loucks was anxious to act as middle man. A satisfactory deal could not be closed in that city and Loucks suggested that Meade come with him to this city. Both arrived here and registered in the Livingston hotel. Several agencies were visited and then Loucks suggested that they go to an "auto" factory. There a machine was found to suit all requirements and negotiations were made for the purchase. After returning to the hotel Loucks induced Meade to give him $600, the purchase price of the machine, agreeing to close the deal.

As soon as he got the money Loucks jumped the city, but was arrested a few days later in Ogdensburg, N. Y. Sentence was imposed despite Loucks' plea that a wife and several children are dependent upon him for maintenance.—Free Press

Even the news has been reading our club notes with interest, and comes into the fray with war whoop and club in defense of his friend, John C. Howell, of the Blissfield Advance, whom he fears has had ill usage at our hands. He says his friend is "well educated" and "one of the brightest boys who grew to manhood in Macon," and evidently could have spelled the whole township down with little effort, and that he was only jollying when he misspelled intentionally the goddess Euterpe's name. Brother Howell, we owe you a sincere apology, you have our sympathy. Who was it who said, "Deliver me, Oh Lord, from my friends and I will take care of my enemies.

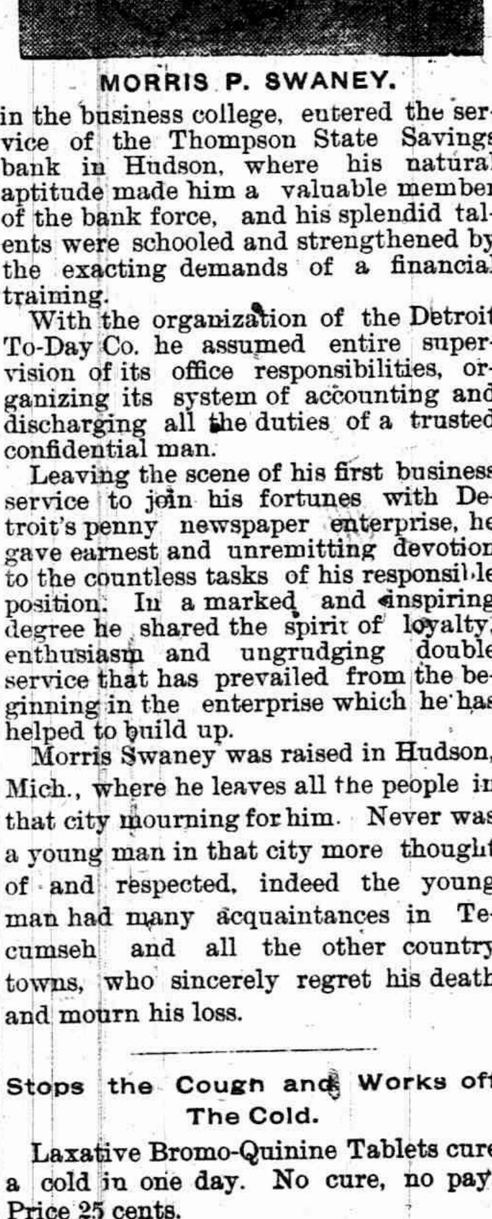
MORRIS P. SWANEY

Treasurer of the Newspaper TO-DAY

Of Detroit, died in Harper Hospital Detroit Sunday

Morris P. Swaney, cashier to the Detroit To-Day Co., died at Harper hospital at 12:30 p. m. Sunday. An attack of typhoid fever, setting in three weeks ago and culminating in pneumonia, caused his death.

The remains were taken to his old home at Hudson, Mich., Monday morning and the funeral will be held there at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Swaney was born in Hudson, May 28, 1868. He attended the East Side school in that city, and after a course of instruction in the business college, entered the service of the Thompson State Savings bank in Hudson, where his natural aptitude made him a valuable member of the bank force, and his splendid talents were schooled and strengthened by the exacting demands of a financial training.



MORRIS P. SWANEY.

With the organization of the Detroit To-Day Co. he assumed entire supervision of its office responsibilities, organizing its system of accounting and discharging all the duties of a trusted confidential man.

Leaving the scene of his first business service to join his fortunes with Detroit's penny newspaper enterprise, he gave earnest and unremitting devotion to the countless tasks of his responsible position. In a marked and inspiring degree he shared the spirit of loyalty, enthusiasm and ungrudging double service that has prevailed from the beginning in the enterprise which he has helped to build up.

Morris Swaney was raised in Hudson, Mich., where he leaves all the people in that city mourning for him. Never was a young man in that city more thought of and respected, indeed the young man had many acquaintances in Tecumseh and all the other country towns, who sincerely regret his death and mourn his loss.

SECOND ESCAPE

Olga Gogaline tries to Escape from

ADRIAN INDUSTRIAL HOME

And was Captured Sunday Evening Between Saline and Ypsilanti By Officer Henry Stevens

Olga Gogaline, an Industrial Home inmate, who tried to escape from the home July 5, tried the act again Saturday evening. About — o'clock the girls were in the sitting room as usual when Olga skipped out the back door and over the fence and made her way to Tecumseh along the track, walking a good share of the night clad only in her house clothing.

At Tecumseh she picked uy a loose bicycle in a rack in front of a store and was riding that when captured. Officer Stevens, of this place, tracked the girl and caught up with her. He then took her into Ann Arbor and was taken back to the home in Adrian Monday where she is now waiting action of the board. A close watch will be kept of her in the future.

IN OLDEN TIMES.

Many Things were Different. Nowadays the Public profit by Experience.

When the striped pole or sign which now indicates a barber shop was employed to let the public know where cupping or blood letting was professionally performed, close shaves were of daily occurrence, not the easy removal of the hirsute or hairy adornment of the head and face, but close shaves from entering eternity. More than one unfortunate entered the barber surgeon's doorway to leave it a corpse or so weak that weeks were required to get the victim of malpractice on his feet. Blood letting was used for everything from a heartache to a corn, and a pain in the loins was invariably treated with two incisions, one on each side of the spine. Like plasters and liniments these helped from the counter irritation they created, and we may presume that had Mr. Calvin Wilson, proprietor of the leading shaving parlor of Niles, Mich. lived in the time of George III, of England, in place of taking the course he did a short time ago with his back, blood letting would have been resorted to. Read how he treated his trouble:

Mr. Wilson says: "My occupation has very likely, much to do with the cause of my backache from which I have suffered considerably for a number of years. Standing on one's feet some days 18 hours is hard on the best of backs, but when you have pain across the loins with lameness and soreness, every time you move the muscles of the arm, long, long before your daily task is over you often wish you could go to sleep. I tried everything to better my condition but was unsuccessful until I used three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The relief they brought to a man who has worked hard all his life and is now past the three score and ten is much easier to appreciate than to describe in words. Doan's Kidney Pills perform what they promise."

[illegible]

The camp[illegible] phora) [illegible] of the laurel family, belonging to the same genus as the tree whose bark furnishes the spice called cinnamon, and is related to the bay and to the sassafras of the United States. Of symmetrical proportions, it is one of the noblest objects in the forests of eastern subtropical Asia. In its native habitat it attains gigantic dimensions, notably in girth of trunk, some specimens measuring 10 to 15 feet in diameter. It is said they have been known to reach as much as 20 feet, and they may be 60 to over 100 feet high, and live to a great age.

As a rule, they rise 20 or 30 feet without limbs and then branch out in all directions, becoming a mass of splendid and luxuriant foliage. Their leaves, broadly lanceolate in form, are of a light green color, smooth and shining above and whitish or glaucous on the undersurface. Small white or greenish white flowers are borne from February to April and by October ripen into berrylike, one seeded fruits about three-eighths of an inch in diameter.—Good Words.

FIRES CAUSED BY NAILS.

Particularly Guarded Against by Firms That Handle Cotton.

"Speaking of insurance matters," said a listener, "I suppose the plain, old fashioned nail has caused more fires in the big establishments where machinery is used in many and complicated ways than any other little thing in existence. The only thing needed is for it to come in contact with some other hard material with sufficient force to cause a spark and heat generation. Nails have really produced a heavy per cent of the cotton fires of the country. During recent years, on account of steps taken by the owners and conductors of the larger cotton and byproduct plants at the instance of insurance men, the nail has not been such a prolific producer of fires.

"A way has been found, for instance, in cotton gins, cotton mills and in plants where cottonseed are put through manufacturing processes, of extracting nails and other weighty and flinty substances that may find lodgment in these inflammable products. Gravity is the natural force used. Nails and rocks and materials of this kind are heavier than cotton and its byproducts, and they have a tendency to force their way to the bottom of the heap. By allowing these products to pass over a rolling belt arrangement these heavier materials filter toward the bottom and are finally extracted, so that when the cotton or the cottonseed passes through the grind in the various manufacturing processes there is but little danger from fire so far as these things are concerned."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

When Adelina Patti visited Madrid one time in company with her husband, Signor Nicolini, who thought himself a tenor singer, there was an effort to engage the noted artist for an especial occasion. The opera director asked:

"How much will you charge us if you and your honored husband appear on this occasion for one night?"

"Ten thousand francs, sir."

"And how much if you come without the signor, madame?"

"Ten thousand francs."

Catherine de' Medici.

Catherine de' Medici of France was a tall, dignified woman of striking personal appearance. Her manner was often cold and repulsive, her language haughty. She was never popular or well liked. Her features were regular, and the chief merit of her countenance was a full black eye that seemed to fascinate those on whom she looked.

A Lesson in Washing.

Pliny the Great could see things in front of his nose as well as afar off. "I notice that the women rub the washing in cold water," he wrote one day. "Let them heat the water, and the alkali in the soap will be freed and take far better effect." And only after that did women know how to wash.

A thousand things by it are done far better than most things do one. We refer to Rocky Mountain Tea made by Madison Medicine Co. 35c. J. J. Orr.

In Liverpool recently a sentimental young lady was on the Cunard steamship quay when she saw a young girl sitting on a trunk in an attitude of utter dejection and despair.

"Poor thing!" thought the romantic lady. "She is probably alone and a stranger. Her pale cheeks and great, sad eyes tell of a broken heart and a yearning for sympathy." So she went over to the traveler to win her confidence.

"Crossed in love?" she asked sympathetically.

"No," replied the girl, with a sigh, "crossed in the Servia, and an awfully rough passage too."—Tit-Bits.

The Dead One.

An old colored woman was "taking on" the other day over the death of her baby as she was going from the church to the hack which was to take her to the cemetery. A white woman who knew her happened to be passing and said sympathetically:

"Which one of your children is dead, Aunt Eliza?"

"The one in the hearse," moaned the negress.—Atchison Globe.

Oxygen.

Oxygen forms one-fifth of the atmosphere, eight-ninths of the waters and, taking all together, one-half of all the materials of the globe, so far as they are known. As carbon is the basis of all the organic substances of the world, so oxygen, the supporter of life and combustion, represents its living energies.

It is easy enough to smile when you tread upon rose leaves, but try it when each step leaves blood prints upon the thorns. Some of the lines in your face may curve downward then.

A DREAM.

I stood where gifts were showered on men from heaven.
  And some had honors and the joy thereof,
And some received with solemn, radiant faces
  The gift of love.

The green I saw of bay leaves and of laurel,
  Of gold the gleam.
A voice spoke to me, standing empty handed,
  "For thee—a dream."

Forbear to pity ye who, richly laden,
  Forth from the place of heaven's bounty went.
Who marvel that I smile, my hands still empty;
  I am content.

Ye cannot guess how dowered beyond the measure
  Of your receiving to myself I seem.
Lonely and cold, I yet pass on enraptured;
  I have my dream.

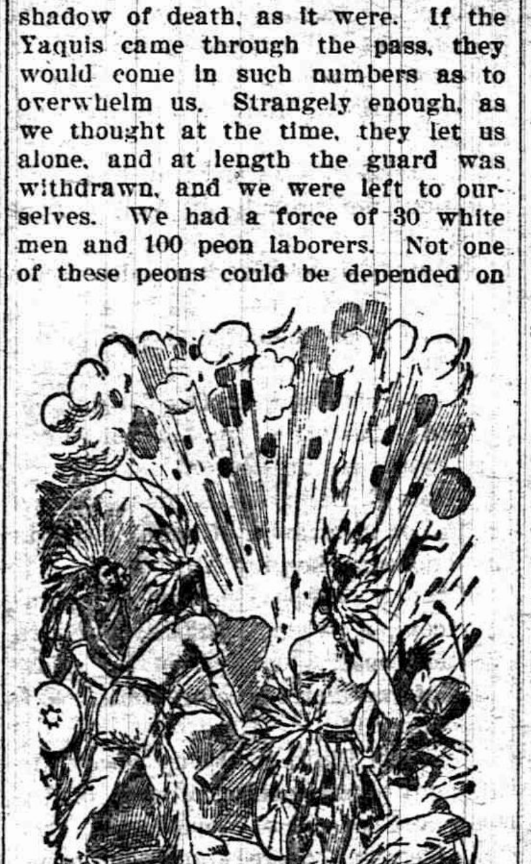
WHEN THE YAQUIS ROSE

BY M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.

They said it was a reckless thing to do and that only Americans would have attempted it. On the west side of the Sierra Madre mountains in Mexico are the roaming grounds of the Yaqui Indians, and between the Yaqui and Fuerte rivers is their main stronghold. And yet we opened the Sunset mine with only the mountain range between us and every man from president to the cheapest workman realizing that we might be attacked at any hour. The Yaquis have warred with the Mexicans for the last 200 years, and their hands are raised against all others who invade their domains.

We were months in getting machinery over from Chihuahua, erecting buildings and fairly opening the mine, and, though we had a guard of 50 Mexican soldiers, we worked in the shadow of death, as it were. If the Yaquis came through the pass, they would come in such numbers as to overwhelm us. Strangely enough, as we thought at the time, they let us alone, and at length the guard was withdrawn, and we were left to ourselves. We had a force of 30 white men and 100 peon laborers. Not one of these peons could be depended on in case of a row. The engine house we made our fort, and 30 men behind its loopholed walls would make a good fight of it. But yet we had something more than powder and lead to depend upon. If the Yaquis came through the mountain pass, they would approach the works, two miles distant, by way of two ravines which led quite to our doors. In some places these ravines were only six or seven feet deep, in others over 30, with stone walls on either side. Under the direction of a civil engineer powder and dynamite charges were hidden away in these walls and buried in the earth and wires connected with the power house and an electric battery.



A SERIES OF EXPLOSIONS SHOOK THE EARTH.

Had it been possible to buy the friendship of the Yaquis we should have attempted it and thus secured our safety, but we knew they were not to be tempted by anything we could offer. We had been working full force for three months, with an alarm now and then, when we learned why we had not been disturbed by raiding parties. The whole fighting force of the Yaquis, numbering between 4,000 and 5,000, was gathering for a grand effort to sweep across the mountains and clear the country to the Rio Grande. This had been the dream of the chief for years, and his people had been treasuring up rifles and ammunition. When the force was finally ready to move, the Mexican government was powerless to stop it except on the north, and it was too late to send out anything like a general alarm. The 4,000 well armed savages, knowing no mercy, fell upon prospector, freighter, hunter, miner and villager, and not a man escaped from their hands. Almost by accident we got word of the movement, and the mine was closed, the peons were sent away, and we prepared for a siege. Lookouts were established along both ravines, and we had four days in which to hear the tales of panic stricken fugitives who passed our way.

The Yaquis had no pity for age, sex or condition. They found the people almost defenseless, and when they had captured a village every man, woman and child was put to the torture. Every habitation was burned, live stock was slaughtered, and even the dogs and cats were killed. The idea was to leave nothing alive behind them. The army did not push forward at swift pace, but dallied along and spent hours witnessing the torture of its victims. We knew when the Indians finally entered the mountain pass, headed straight for us, and it was half an hour before sunset one evening when we saw the first of their force debouch on the plain and begin a close survey of our situation. We were ready for them, but we knew that no attack would be made before morning. They would have had a long march and be fatigued, and they would wait until all their force was up. An hour after sunrise next morning we witnessed a spectacle that made the flesh creep a bit. Fully 4,000 Yaquis gathered in a compact body between us and the mouth of the pass and chanted a wild and savage song, and we were only 30 against them. They sent no flag of truce to demand a surrender. They may have even hoped we would show fight, as they had met with no resistance as yet.

As we had hoped and planned for, the Yaquis advanced by the ravines. A body of about 500 was told off for each ravine, skirmishers were sent on ahead, and the main body looked on. Thirty men with Winchester rifles inside of a stone fort are no mean foe, but we soon realized that in this case we were almost helpless. So swiftly and steadily did the Indians advance and so hot was their fire at the loopholes that we soon had five men killed and could not reply except at great risk. Their advance was within a stone's throw of us in both ravines when we resorted to the electric wires. Few men will ever witness the sight we did. There was a series of explosions which shook the earth for miles around, with bursts of flame and smoke leaping to the clouds, and after one fearful yell there was silence in both ravines. It was half an hour before the smoke blew away so that we could see the main band. The warriors stood there without movement, seeming to have been struck dumb, and it was another hour before they broke up into small parties and marched into the mouth of the pass. We thought it a ruse, and no man left the power house until next afternoon. Then it was discovered that they had gone for good, and that without looking after their killed or wounded.

Down in the two ravines, buried under the debris or lying scorched and torn and mangled among the rocks, were over 900 warriors, all wiped out at the tick of the clock. It was such a stupendous loss, such a terrible and mysterious calamity, that even the fierce Yaquis were terror stricken and turned back. They returned to their valley, awed and frightened, telling a story that awed and frightened those left behind, and from that date their power was broken. They have made war since only in small parties and in a half hearted way, and their dream of driving out the Gringo and the Mexican and recovering their own has been shattered forever.

A GROWING COMPANY.

Only last January the Detroit Trust Company was organized and commenced business in the Butler Building on Griswold St., in Detroit, with $500,000 of its capital and surplus paid in.

In April the balance of $500,000 of capital and surplus was paid up, making its working capital $1,000,000.

During the eight months of business up to Sept. 30, 1901, its deposits have grown to over one and one-half million dollars, and its gross assets as shown by its published statement amount to over $2,700,000.

It is acting as trustee under many mortgages to secure bond issues, and has in its care and charge several large estates.

Its patrons come from all parts of the State, and they find this Company not only safe and conservative, but fully equipped to take care of and execute all kinds of trusts.

The Women Shave Their Heads.

One part of Egypt shows where the outward and visible evidences of the aboriginal have been softened down with a veneer which the softeners fondly imagined is indicative of inward and spiritual grace. This is along a 350 mile stretch of the White Nile, where the Shilluks live and move and have their being.

Now, the Shilluks are a picturesque and a promising people. They have their Fashoda for a capital and their memories of Lord Kitchener of Khartum which no man may take from them. Wherefore, what matters it that they have lost their original lawlessness, their former turbulence and their cheerful specialty of roasting the enemy on the point of the spit?

Now the Shilluks are so civilized they carry short wooden clubs after the fashion of the Broadway policeman and occasionally brandish a long spear in true light opera style. They lead an enviable life, these Shilluks; nothing to do all the livelong day but lie on the mossy bank and spear the horny hided hippopotamus as he glides within range, or make a dead crocodile of a live one by the simple expedient of harpooning him through his vitals. As for work, that is for woman, and my lord of the Shilluks never puts his hand to it.

Agriculture is yet an undeveloped industry; and what little developing has already taken place has been at the instance and hands of the wives. The Shilluk country is not the birth place of the seven brotherhood sisters of glorious hirsute memory. All the women of the tribe shave their heads.—New York Herald.

Terrible Effect of Bad Air.

At every moment of the human life the air which we breathe goes coursing through the most delicate and sensitive of the wonderfully constructed organs of the human system to purify and reinvigorate the vital currents of life. But what if the purifier shall itself be unclean and laden with the seeds of pollution? Having once done its work and come forth tainted and foul, what if it shall again and again be called to perform the task for which it is no longer fitted? The natural and inevitable deduction is not far to reach. The blood is no longer purified, but it goes coursing through the body, the source of disease and corruption instead of being the fountain of pure, perfect healthfulness.

Other organs by sympathy or by direct contagion become affected. The imagination is too often influenced as well, anticipation conjures up dire evils, and the sufferer, who is now in such earnest, flies from one "blood purifier" or "tonic" to another, gaining perhaps temporary and questionable relief at the expense of a system loaded with poisonous and harmful drugs, whose reaction may be expected at any time and in almost any horrible form.

A Quick Retort.

A leading counsel for the defendant in an accident damage case where the injury had been occasioned by a jet of steam scalding the complainant's back and neck as he was driving past the defendant's place argued to the jury that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence and should have looked up to avoid the accident. The quick witted counsel for the complainant retorted: "Oh, no. If he had looked up, instead of suing for damage to the back of our head we should have had to charge you for the loss of both eyes."

About Writing One's Name.

People who sign their letters with wild flourishes or initials only and give no address offer one of the worst of compliments to their correspondent by egotistically assuming that their handwriting must be of such familiar importance to him or that they and their affairs are so present to his mind that further identification is unnecessary. Having their signature cut from the end of a letter and the address from its heading pasted on the envelope which incloses a reply is a bad compliment which many persons bring upon themselves by an unpardonable illegibility. It is a singular fact that accidental misspelling or mispronunciation of one's name generally constitutes a greater affront and is provocative of more annoyance than a studied insult.—All the Year Round.

Brotherly Help.

"Sis will be down in a minute," said her little brother.

"I'm so glad," replied Mr. De Trop. "She wasn't at home the last time I called."

"Oh, yes she was, but wouldn't come down."

"How do you know she'll come down this time then?"

"'Cause I told her you was another fellow."—Philadelphia Record.

QUEER OPTICAL ILLUSION.

An Interesting Experiment With a Pencil and a Wire Screen.

Professor R. W. Wood recently described a rather startling optical illusion which any one may see with a little practice. A lead pencil is held point up an inch or two in front of a wire screen with a sky background. If the eyes are converged upon the pencil point, the wire gauze becomes somewhat blurred and, of course, doubled.

As the gauze has a regularly recurring pattern, however, the two images can be united and, with a little effort, can be accommodated for distinct vision of the combined images of the mesh. As soon as accommodation is secured the mesh becomes perfectly sharp and appears to be nearly in the plane of the pencil point.

If now the pencil is moved away from the eyes, which are to be kept fixed on the screen, it apparently passes through the mesh and becomes doubled. If now the pencil is removed entirely, it will be found that the sharp images of the combined images of the gauze persist, although the eyes be moved nearer to or farther away from the screen.

Now bring the eyes up to within six or eight inches of the plane in which the mesh appears to be and attempt to touch it with the finger. It is not there. The finger falls upon empty space, the screen being in reality a couple of inches farther off.

"This," says Professor Wood, "is by all means the most startling illusion I have ever seen, for we apparently see something occupying a perfectly definite position in space before our eyes, and yet if we attempt to put our finger on it we find that there is nothing there."—Exchange.

BEE BUZZES.

One-fourth of an acre may contain 150 colonies of bees.

An apiary should not be placed on ground thickly set with trees.

Bees secrete wax only when necessary to furnish storage room for honey or brood.

The secretion of one pound of wax necessitates the consumption of twenty pounds of honey.

When a queen is gone, it will be only a few days until the colony will cease to store much surplus honey.

Sometimes, toward the close of the honey season, the bees will destroy the queen cells or kill all of the queens but one, thus destroying the incentive to swarm.

Care must be taken to see that there is a queen in every colony. If she gets lost or is killed, another must be put in her place, as the colony will run down very fast if left queenless.

Never feed bees during the day, it matters not whether there be one colony or many. It causes confusion, and the bees frequently get cross and go to stinging anything they come near.

In getting bees that have swarmed back into a hive much loss may be prevented by stretching a piece of strong canvas on the ground and setting the hive upon it and then shaking the bees on it.

How to Detect a Cheap Shoe.

"It takes a rainy spell to show up a cheap shoe," says a shoe dealer. "It can be spotted by an observer on a rainy day, though it may have come within an hour from the store. Watch the feet of people the next time it rains, and you can pick out the inexpensive shoes. A cheap shoe always slips when the pavements are wet. Artificial stone pavements especially show them up. The sole of a cheap, common shoe is made of imitation leather, composed of pressed paper, and water softens it and makes the wearer slide along while walking. You can always tell a cheap shoe in this way."—Indianapolis News.

The Greatest Surrender.

The greatest surrender in the annals of warfare was that of Metz on Oct. 27, 1870. As a fortified place Metz, with its surrounding forts, was practically impregnable, but bad generalship permitted it to be completely surrounded and cut off. The surrender included 3 field marshals, 66 generals, 6,000 officers of lower degree, over 400 guns, 100 mitrailleuses, nearly 60 standards and 173,000 rank and file.

THE LEG DID NOT COME OFF.

Northrop Has a Hard Time, But Saves His Leg.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va.—A man named Northrop spent sixteen weeks in the best hospital in Norfolk for a special treatment of rheumatism. The doctors said he was bound to lose his right leg. All Cheese is Densely Populated.

Professor Adametz, who devoted considerable time to the study of the fragrant subject, said that the population of an ordinary cheese when a few weeks old is greater than the number of persons upon the earth.

Professor Adametz made some interesting researches dealing with the minute organisms found in cheese. From a microscopic examination of a soft variety of Gruyere cheese he obtained the following statistics: In fifteen grains of cheese, when perfectly fresh, from 90,000 to 140,000 microbes were found, and when the cheese was seventy days old the population had increased to 800,000 in each fifteen grains. An examination of a denser cheese at twenty-five days old proved it to contain 1,200,000 in each gram (about fifteen grains) and when forty-five days old 2,000,000 in the same small particle.

LAXAKOLA
THE GREAT TONIC LAXATIVE

If you have sour stomach, indigestion, biliousness, constipation, bad breath, dizziness, inactive liver, heartburn, kidney troubles, backache, loss of appetite, insomnia, lack of energy, bad blood, blotched or muddy skin, or any symptoms and disorders which tell the story of bad bowels and an impaired digestive system, Laxakola Will Cure You.

It will clean out the bowels, stimulate the liver and kidneys, strengthen the mucous membranes of the stomach, purify your blood and put you "on your feet" again. Your appetite will return, your bowels move regularly, your liver and kidneys cease to trouble you, your skin will clear and freshen and you will feel the old time energy and buoyancy.

Mothers seeking the proper medicine to give their little ones for constipation, diarrhea, colic and similar troubles, will find Laxakola an ideal medicine for children. It keeps their bowels regular without pain or griping, acts as a general tonic, assists nature, aids digestion, relieves restlessness, clears the coated tongue, reduces fever, causes refreshing, restful sleep and makes them well, happy and hearty. ☞ Children like it and ask for it.

Brain-Food Nonsense.

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain another for muscles and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or to prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthy action, purifies the blood and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. CHINAS' GREAT LOSS

Death of Li Hung Chang Her Greatest Statesman.

CHINESE OFFICIALS UNEASY

Steps Taken to Guard Against Any Possible Anti-Foreign Uprising—Strange Scene at the Bedside of the Dying Diplomat.

Pekin, Nov. 7.—Li Hung Chang, China's greatest citizen, statesman and diplomat, passed away at 11 o'clock this morning after a long illness, aggravated by his persistent refusal to refrain from attending to government business.

His disease was chronic gastritis, with persistent nausea, which allowed only mildest liquid food to be digested. Complication in form of hemorrhage set in, and though they were controlled the illustrious patient became unconscious at 2 o'clock in the morning, and despite frequent administration of digitalis gradually grew weaker until the end. His chances for life was lessened by the refusal of the family to permit measures customary in western medical practice for relieving the stomach.

The wife of Earl Li and his two sons and daughter were with him at the end.

At 9 o'clock the burial clothes were put on. The court yard of the yamen was filled with lifesize paper horses and chairs with coolie bearers, which his friends sent, in accordance with Chinese custom, to be buried when he dies in order to carry his soul to heaven. Several ministers of the powers called to express sympathy.

The Chinese officials are somewhat uneasy concerning the effect his death will have on the populace; and to guard against a possible anti-foreign demonstration the Chinese generals have disposed of their troops about the city in such a way as to command the situation. Trouble, however, is extremely improbable.

Besides being known as China's "grand old man," Li Hung Chang was one of the richest men in the world, owning more than 2,000 banks.

Carnegie Not Notified.

New York, Nov. 7.—Seen at the St. Andrews golf links yesterday afternoon in reference to the report that King Edward had offered him, or would offer him, a baronetcy, Andrew Carnegie said:

"Why, that is all nonsense. I don't believe there is a word of truth in it. I suppose I would have an inkling of it if anything like that were going to be done."

Wabash Acquires a New Line.

Marietta, O., Nov. 7.—Information has been received here that the Wabash system has purchased the Ohio & Little Kanawha railroad, between Marietta and Zanesville. Having last week purchased the Little Kanawha road from Parkersburg to the West Virginia coal fields, the system now has a thorough line from the lakes to the West Virginia fields.

A Noted Astronomer Dead.

Beloit, Wis., Nov. 7.—Prof. Charles A. Bacon, one of the best known professors of Beloit college, died Wednesday afternoon of septic poisoning. He had been librarian for 13 years, and as professor of astronomy had acquired a wide reputation for his discussions of meteroric showers, sun spots and various eclipses.

Two Killed, Four Injured.

Bloomington, Ill., Nov. 7.—While engaged in blowing up stumps with dynamite near here, James Young was blown to pieces, Thomas Hasty was fatally injured and four others seriously injured. Three sticks of dynamite were used, but only one exploded. While the men were investigating the others exploded.

In Chicago, of Course.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—A new packing house, in which will be employed 3,000 men and which has [illegible] 2,500,000, was opened Wedne[illegible] the stock yards. The daily kil[illegible] capacity of the plant, which is owned by Swartzchild & Sulzberger, is 3,000 hogs, 2,500 cattle and 2,500 sheep.

MINOR TELEGRAMS.

The tax of $62.50 levied on commercial travelers coming from Jamaica is to be repealed.

The English war office, it is understood, will accept Canada's offer of a strong cavalry contingent for service in South Africa.

A resolution of the leading men of Jamaica will be transmitted to the British government asking for the sending of Boer prisoners to Jamaica.

The Maude Adams statue was melted up at the New York assay office Wednesday. The statue was made of $97,000 in gold, and was on exhibition at the Pan-American exposition.

John Armstrong Chanler, divorced husband of Amelia Rives, the authoress, has been declared sane and capable of managing his large property. He had been confined in an asylum.

M. Millerand, the minister of commerce, proposes to appoint a committee to coloborate a plan for the establishment of a French school in the United States to study American industrial methods.

Mayor-elect Schnitz of San Francisco has issued a statement to the merchants and financiers of the city that no fears of any radical or revolutionary policy of municipal government being inaugurated need be entertained.

The officials of the United States legation at Constantinople have received news, through Salonica, that indicates the early release of the captives in the hands of the brigands. On Oct. 29 Miss Stone and Madame Tsilka were both well.

Astounding Discovery

From Coopersville, Mich., comes word of a wonderful discovery of a pleasant tasting liquid that when used before retiring by any one troubled with a bad cough always insures a good night's rest. "It will soon cure the cough too," writes Mrs. S. Himelburger, "for three generations of our family have used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and never found its equal for Coughs and Colds." It's an unrivaled life saver when used for desperate lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00 at C. A. Wright's. Trial bottles free.

FOUR CITIES VISITED.

Fire Wipes Out Their Business Sections—Loss, $460,000.

Richland, Ga., Nov. 7.—Fire which started Wednesday afternoon destroyed the greater portion of the business section of this place. The fire originated in a warehouse and was started, it is said, by a truck running over a match. The flames spread very rapidly. Columbus and Americus fire companies arrived last night, but too late to be of much assistance. The loss is estimated at $48,350, with a small amount of insurance.

Sioux City, Ia., Nov. 7.—Fire which broke out in the Gunther & Sullis wholesale toy and notion house in this city at 9:30 o'clock last night is still burning. The building has been destroyed and neighboring buildings are endangered. The loss is estimated at $60,000.

Pittsburg, Nov. 7.—The immense plant of Dilworth, Porter & Co., manufacturers of steel rods and railroad spikes, were damaged by fire last night to the extent of about $250,000. The plant, which was the largest of its kind in the world, with an output of 100,000 tons, covered 16 acres of ground on the south side between Fourth and Sixth streets, including in its equipment many buildings. Seven acres were burned over and much valuable machinery was destroyed. Members of the firm say the loss is fully covered by insurance. The fire started in the monkey mill by flush molten metal. Of the 1,500 men employed by the company, 300 were at work when the fire started, and many of them had to rush from the buildings leaving their street clothing behind. Much excitement was caused by the falling of stacks and walls, but no one was hurt except one fireman, who received slight injuries.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 7.—The pants factory of Harrison & Rudd was destroyed by fire last night. The loss is estimated at $100,000; insurance, $40,000.

CHINAMAN MUST PAY.

American Bank at Shanghai to Receive Indemnity is Likely.

Washington, Nov. 7.—W. W. Rockhill, who represented this government in the final settlement with China, has had a conference with Assistant Secretary Taylor of the treasury department in regard to the representation of the United States on the commission of bankers which, by the terms of the final protocol, is charged with the duty of receiving and paying over to the several governments in interest the sums to be paid by China as indemnity. These payments will cover a period of 39 years, and the protocol provides that the several sums and interest shall be paid montnly to a commission of bankers at Shanghai, each member representing one or more of the beneficiary powers. As there is no American bank in Shanghai, the question arises as to who should represent this government on the committee. The American consul at Shanghai recommends that the British Shanghai bank be designated to act for the United States, but Mr. Rockhill does not favor that suggestion. His visit to the treasury department was for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the feasability of an American banking institution in China of undoubted strength and recognized standing might not be considered by leading financiers at this time. The matter will receive the consideration of the treasury officials. The share of the United States in the indemnity to be paid by China is about $25,000,000, with 4 per cent interest.

PRISON GATES TO OPEN.

Capt. Oberlin M. Carter Secures a Rehearing.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Oberlin M. Carter, now a convict in the government prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and formerly a captain in the United States engineer corps, is to have a rehearing of his case in a civil tribunal. He now has the assurance of the government authorities that all the evidence is to be reviewed before Judge Kohlsaat in the United States circuit court in this city, the hearing to take place probably within a few months. Carter will be called on as a witness in his own behalf, and for the purpose of testifying in court he will be released temporarily from his place of confinement. This is the result of suits brought by the government some months ago in several federal courts for the purpose of recovering the proceeds of $722,582 which, it was proved at the court-martial, Carter had embezzled from the United States.

Chamberlain Arouses Indignation.

Berlin, Nov. 7.—The demonstrations against the reflections cast upon the conduct of the German troops in the Franco-Prussian war by Mr. Chamberlain, in his Edinburgh speech, continue. A number of societies of veterans and organizations composed of the clergy have protested. At a meeting held in Berlin last night Prof. Wagner and others spoke in denunciation of the British colonial secretary's utterances. The students of Leipsic university have issued a call for an indignation meeting.

Considine on Trial.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 7.—The state yesterday called its first witness in the trial of John Considine, charged with the murder of Wm. L. Meredith, late chief of police of the city of Seattle. This is to be a connecting link in the state's sixth shot theory. An effort will be made to show that the first shot was fired by Tom Considine a minute and a half or two minutes before Meredith fired his first charge from the shotgun, and that it was this shot which led Meredith to attack John Considine.

Atlanta Theater Burned.

Atlanta, Nov. 7.—The Lyceum theater, a vaudeville house, was destroyed Wednesday afternoon by fire, caused by crossing electric wires. When the fire was discovered the audience was dismissed and left the building without disorder. Fred Jones, a fireman and Roy Denner, an electrician at the theater, were badly burned.

Understanding With France.

Washington, Nov. 7.—M. Margerie, the French charge of embassy, is in almost daily conference with Secretary Hay, and while no statement as to the nature of the exchanges is obtainable, it is believed that they relate in part to the Pan-American canal and also to the execution of the French program in Turkish waters. The United States government thus far is not concerned in the seizure of the island of Mitylene, having been given to understand that the French occupation is in no sense permanent, but merely part of a debt-collecting process. The trade between Mitylene ports and the United States is inconsequential [illegible] it would [illegible] by the French [illegible] shown to the department.

A BLOODY TRAGEDY

Insanity Inspires a Brutal Murder and Suicide.

WERE HACKED TO PIECES

Houghton Miner Kills His Wife and Daughter With An Ax and Then Cuts His Own Throat With a Knife.

Houghton, Mich., Nov. 7.—Felix Belanger, 56 years of age, who long cared for the Winona mine office, did not appear Wednesday morning as usual. Supt. Vanorden and Capt. Peterson broke his door in, discovering a bloody ax near it.

Going upstairs, they found Mrs. Belanger, aged 54, and her daughter, aged 10, hacked in pieces in bed by the ax, while in another room the husband lay on the floor with his throat cut and a tell-tale knife by his side. He is still living, but the case is apparently hopeless. Only one child was at home, the rest having married and left. Insanity is believed to be the cause.

NICHOLS FILES ANSWER.

Claims Right to Trial by Jury, and With Witnesses.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 7.—Geo. E. Nichols, attorney for City Attorney Lant K. Salsbury, who was charged with contempt of court for an alleged attempt to bribe the people's witnesses to disappear, has filed his answer in the superior court. He says he believes an attempt is made to charge him with the violation of section 11308 of the compiled laws, and that he is not guilty of the violation of this section, having not in any manner unlawfully interfered with any witness or the proceedings of the court.

Should he be prosecuted for the supposed offense he claims to be entitled to a jury trial and to be confronted by witnesses. As he is charged with no act embraced within the statute relative to criminal contempts, he claims not to be required to make answer in this proceeding, and, with due respect to the court, he holds that it has no jurisdiction to proceed further in the matter. He asks that the proceedings against him be quashed.

Wolverine Ingenuity.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The following Michigan patents have been granted: James C. Abbott, Bellaire, broadcast seeder; Frank E. Bartholomew, Kalamazoo, attachment for log sawing machine; Warren B. Cannon, Kalamazoo, coupling device; Wm. H. Chaddock, Allegan, coin holders; Jacob C. Hanziger and A. A. Cowles, Detroit, brazing sheet metal packages; John and G. G. Doorenbos, Kalamazoo, lamps; Henry Ford, Detroit, motor carriage; Orville M. Gawne and C. H. White, Adrian, door mat; George W. Golden, Detroit, weather strip; Joseph G. Grail, Detroit, embossing machine; James N. Lewis, Ann Arbor, separator for placer mining; Frank Leske, Marquette, windmill; Edward A. Munson, Grand Rapids, car mover; Frank Parker, Detroit, supporting device for trousers, etc.; Frank Benders, Detroit, furnace; George W. Snyder, Grand Rapids, spring seat post; Chas. S. and E. O. Sprague, North Star township, platform for painters; John M. Sweeney, Detroit, pipe coupling; Isaac M. Warner, Union City, wire tightener; Henry W. Weber, West Bay City, lamp; John W. Williams, Byron, combined storm apron and sunshade.

Search for a Treasure Stopped.

Muskegon, Mich., Nov. 7.—Adolph Miller, who claims that Ole Larson, a Swede, who died at the poor house recently, left him treasure buried in the cellar of an old mill on the shore of the harbor attempted to get the gold Wednesday morning, but was confronted by a writ taken out by the heirs of the old man and was forced to give up the job.

Entombed in a Burning Mine.

Bessemer, Mich., Nov. 7.—Fire is raging in the seventh level of the Mikado mine at Ramsay. Two men are below the fire, and there is no possible way for them to escape.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Willie Martin, 300 Jay street, Detroit, has been reported missing.

Mrs. Williams, an old colored woman living at Niles, was frightfully burned Wednesday while starting a fire with kerosene.

The Port Huron Canning Co., recently organized, has secured a site on the Black river for their plant. Operations will be begun at once.

Riverside postoffice, near St. Joseph, was entered Wednesday morning and about $7 in cash was secured. The burglars overlooked stamps to the value of about $200.

The Michigan Central railroad will secure the Pitts mill property in Bay City, consisting of about 20 acres with a long river frontage. The price is $30,000.

Munroe Smith, the motorman on the Detroit, Rochester, Romeo & Lake Orion road who was injured in a collision early Wednesday morning, died later in the day.

Martin V. Edson has received a letter from Mrs. Annie Edson Taylor, heroine of Niagara Falls, which proves conclusively that they are brother and sister. The two had not met in more than 24 years.

Bookkeeper Toole, the principal witness for the prosecution at the trial of Ald. Haak of Battle Creek, identified a number of entries on his books as false. Toole stated that the entries had been made under protest. Witnesses from the force employed by the city in construction work testified Haak had sent bills for lumber that had never been furnished.

Spiders Are Industrious.

No small insect ever escapes from the web of a spider, a fact which is not to be wondered at when it is considered that an ordinary sized snare may contain as many as 120,000 viscid globules. The spinner is constantly engaged in repairing injuries to the web inflicted by wind, stray leaves or captured insects. Once a day the whole snare is subjected to rigorous examination, and any broken or loosened threads are adjusted.—Cornhill Magazine.

A WISCONSIN THEATER BURNED

Resulting in the Loss of Ten Lives—Four Others May Die.

Ironwood, Mich., Nov. 7.—Ten lives were lost and four buildings destroyed by a fire which started in the Klondike theater at Hurley, Wis., Wednesday. The dead:

C. W. Cleveland, M. P. Clifford, Thomas Leclaire, George Benert, H. D. Emory, Timothy Ryan, F. L. Kay, Thomas Ozanne, Harry Raymond, Clare Benne.

Seriously injured: Jennie Bender, Annie Scott, Laura Russell, "Billy" McLaughlin.

The Klondike was a vaudeville theater, and all of the dead and injured were connected with the theater as performers. Most of them lived at Hurley, and Thomas Leclaire was a brother of the proprietor of the theater.

The fire started on the stage and in a few minutes the entire structure was a mass of flames. The third story was used as sleeping quarters, and the rapid spread of the fire cut off the escape of the occupants.

The theater building was quickly consumed, and the flames spread to adjoining structures. The Ironwood fire department was called to the assistance of the Hurley firemen, and only by the hardest work was the town saved from being wiped out.

The losses: E. Leclaire's Klondike theater, $7,000; M. Cumming's Monarch saloon, $4,000; Harrigan & McPherson's saloon, $6,000; D. P. McNeil (of Chicago), $1,000; Constantine Erspaner, $500.

The charred remains of six of the victims have been recovered, and search is being made for the others.

The Klondike theater burned once before, in July, 1887, when 11 women lost their lives.

SECURED ABOUT $2,000.

Burglars Entered the Whitehall Bank Yesterday.

Muskegon, Mich., Nov. 7.—The private bank of O'Donald & Morton, in the village of Whitehall, 14 miles north of this city, was broken into at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning and about $2,000 was secured. The robbers were unable to get into the inside department, where the bank money is kept. What they secured was taken from safety deposit boxes, the heaviest loser being Miss Augusta Tornbloom, who is out $650.

A team of horses and a buggy belonging to M. B. Covell were taken to expedite their flight. Covell's outfit was recovered about four miles south of the village on the Muskegon road, where all trace of the burglars was lost.

Wiseman Coining Money.

Pontiac, Mich., Nov. 7.—The examination of Murderer Henry Wiseman will be begun before Justice of the Peace Snowden in the circuit court rooms Saturday morning. Prosecuting Attorney Rockwell is confident that he will get a conviction for murder in the first degree, in spite of Wiseman's attorney's statements to the contrary, who says that the killing of Mrs. Huss in the manner described in Wiseman's confession cannot amount to anything more serious than manslaughter.

Wiseman is spending his time making fancy doilies, and is disposing of them to visitors to the jail at a handsome profit.

Looks Bad for Lacey.

Niles, Mich., Nov. 7.—Great local interest is manifested in the outcome of the trial of Wm. K. Lacey. The general opinion is that Lacey will be convicted. It is claimed here that the prosecution will prove that Lacey knew of the existence of at least six fraudulent documents which appeared among the bank's assets.

Valuable State Lands.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 7.—Land Commissioner Wildey and Auditor-General Powers are examining delinquent tax lists for Crawford county with a view to having them deeded to the state for homestead purposes. Many descriptions are said to be fairly good farming lands.

Brakeman Wisner Killed.

Woodbury, Mich., Nov. 7.—While making a drop of a car of coal here Wednesday afternoon, Owen Wisner, a Pere Marquette freight brakeman, went to jump from the top of a box car to a car of coal after the car had been cut off, striking on his head and shoulders on the ground. The car of coal passed over him. He died in 30 minutes.

SITUATION IS DISCOURAGING

Says the Messenger to Garcia, Referring to the Philippines.

Atchison, Kan., Nov. 7.—Capt. A. S. Rowan, who is stationed on the island of Bohol, in the Philippines, has written to his wife in Atchison declaring that the situation there is discouraging and that it seems the war will never end. His surroundings are such that it would not be advisable for his wife to come to him, even for a visit, he writes. Rowan distinguished himself at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war by carrying a message to Garcia in the Cuban wilds.

The Creole City En Fete.

New Orleans, Nov. 7.—The New Orleans floating dock of the United States navy was received here Wednesday with an extraordinary outpouring of people and elaborate ceremonies, in which federal, state and city officials and members of congress participated. The ceremonies of reception commenced at 2 o'clock and lasted well into the night, concluding with an elaborate land parade in Algiers and a display of fireworks.

The immense steel structure was safely cradled beside its shore connections below Algiers.

A Boston Mare the Star of the Show.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Among the first prizes awarded at the horse show last night was that to Georgeous Regina, in the saddle horse class. The mare is the property of Thomas W. Lawson of Boston.

NOTORIOUS CONDUCT

Pensioners' Widows Living Unlawfully to Hold Pensions.

COMMISSION'S ANNUAL REPORT

Discusses Faults and Difficulties of Present System—Says Cuban and Philippine Pensioners Are Being Well Provided For.

Washington, Nov. 7.—In his annual report, the commissioner of pensions discusses at length the faults of the present system of pensioning and the difficulties in the way of determining the merits of claims for pensions and increase. Attention is directed to the friction and unkind feeling that attends the administration of the act of Aug. 7, 1882, which provides that open and notorious adulterious cohabitation of a widow pensioner shall operate to terminate her pension, but the absence of such a law, it is stated, would encourage and permit such pensioners to live in adultery and dishonor the memory of their soldier husbands while still enjoying the bounty of the government, and on the other hand the widow who respects the law and honors society by legally entering into the marriage relation, loses her pension. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this law, instructions were issued in 1886 to special examiners in the field to take depositions from widow claimants showing whether they have cohabited with any man as his wife since the death of the soldier. These instructions were in force until September, 1897, shortly after the present commissioner took charge of the bureau, when he modified them by directions that special examiners must never question the claimant whether she has violated the act of Aug. 7, 1882, unless the evidence procured shall show that she has been living in adultery and then the investigation must be made carefully and discreetly, so as not to cause unnecessary neighborhood gossip or scandal.

The commissioner says that while the law is a most delicate and difficult one to administer, yet he cannot recommend its repeal.

The report presents a number of interesting features connected with the filing of claims for pension on account of the war with Spain and the insurrection in the Philippine islands

Well Cared For.

It was shown that the soldiers of these wars enjoy much greater benefits than were accorded to the soldiers of the civil war, in the amount of pensions granted for the same degree of disability. In 1895 the minimum pension was established at $6 per month. Nearly 100,000 soldiers of the civil war received from $1 to $4 per month from 1865 to 1895, and a disability from loss of arm or leg, which now entitles the soldier to $45 per month, gave him only $8 per month in 1865

As a remedy for the abuses which exist in the present system the commissioner earnestly recommends the following method of ascertaining the facts in pension claims: That traveling medical examining boards be constituted, consisting of two skilled medical examiners, one attorney and one stenographer and typewriter. These boards would meet at the county seat of each county, say twice a year, and the claimants would receive notice in advance of their coming. The movements of the board would be directed from the bureau and claimants can appear before this board with their witnesses, and the merits of their claims would be legally and medically determined without any delay.

Panama In Danger.

Colon, Colombia, Nov. 7.—The Colombian gunboat General Pinzon (formerly the yacht Namouna), which was dispatched to Cavanilla last week, has just returned to Colon, bringing reinforcements numbering 200 men. The gunboat Boyaca arrived at Panama yesterday from Buenaventura. It is reported that the government anticipates an early attack upon the part of the insurgents, on the city of Panama.

Spreads Like Wildfire

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years." You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, rundown man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

SWEET EVENINGS COME AND GO.

Sweet evenings come and go, love;
They came and went of yore.
This evening of our life, love,
Shall go and come no more.

When we have passed away, love,
All things will keep their name,
But yet no life on earth, love,
With ours will be the same.

The daisies will be there, love;
The stars in heaven will shine;
I shall not feel thy wish, love,
Nor thou my hand in thine.

A better time will come, love,
And better souls be born;
I would not be the best, love,
To leave thee now forlorn.
—George Eliot.

THE BALEFUL EYE.

A Story of the Paris Commune.

BY ANTHONY P. MORRIS.

A prominent store in Paris was that of Jean Guileau, baker, a widower with one child, Hortense, just 17 years of age and very beautiful.

Jean wisely took no part in the communistic orgies running riot on the streets immediately subsequent to the Franco-Prussian war; but, with plenty of provisions in his cellar, he philosophically closed the doors and windows, withdrew his sign of business and smoked his pipe contentedly in the seclusive companionship and filial love of Hortense.

One so pretty and piquant as she could not be exempt from a besieging of lovers. The two most prominent of these were her father's graduating apprentices. Henri Edouin and Giuseppe—"dark Giuseppe" and "the baleful eye"—the latter was frequently appellated by his intimates, because of the treacherous glance in his hard, black orbs and a lurking smile forever fixed about his lips.

To Henri Hortense had long since given her heart.

It was quite late one night when Henri departed from the embrace of his promised bride. As Hortense retreated through the narrow doorway an unexpected form, like an apparition from the gloom, confronted her.

"Giuseppe!" she cried.

"It is I," he replied calmly.

"Oh, you frightened me! Whence come you so suddenly?"

"From close beside, girl. Ah, thou coquette! A word. I have heard all"—

"A listener—you? Shame!"

"Tell me, is it true, indeed, I need hope no more to win you?"

"You say you have heard all?"

"Yes. I am not deaf."

"And you have seen too?"

"Yes. I am not blind."

"Much good may it do you, then, for you are answered!"

And with the sharp speech she slammed the door in his face, angry at his having spied upon what was to her a sacred interview.

For many nights after that her dreams were haunted by the baleful eyes of dark Giuseppe, and in her ears continually rang the fearful imprecation she heard him mutter, coupled with the name of Henri Edouin.

The favored lover was greatly surprised a few days later at receipt of a communication from the Versailles government. It was delivered by an entire stranger, who whispered these six ominous words:

"For your eyes only. Be discreet!"

The sealed billet contained this:

> Last dispatches by balloon acknowledged. Inclosed herewith an order for 500 francs, payable when France is redeemed from her enemies.
> Paris. M. EDOUIN.

Henri should have destroyed the mysterious scrawl instantly. Instead he stood gazing at it in sheer amazement. He had had nothing whatever to do with the Versaillese, though his heart was honestly with those who struggled so nobly to save the country from the doom of a bloody anarchy.

The few moments' stupefaction proved his greatest misfortune.

There was a peremptory tap at the door.

Giuseppe entered, grinning infernally. Behind him "dressed" three ruffians of the national guard.

"Ah, M. Edouin!" he said.

"Oh, is it you, Giuseppe?" replied Henri.

Giuseppe advanced with snaky quickness and ere Henry could anticipate snatched away the fatal paper. Flourishing it aloft, he cried:

"Away with him! See what I hold—a paper that will have him shot unless I greatly mistake!" And Giuseppe hissed maliciously into his rival's ear: "I am now a trusted spy of the commune. Your death is certain. You will never wed with Hortense Guileau!"

Unfortunate Henri was soon in prison. He fully realized his danger, and it required but little reflection to convince him of the foul trick played by crafty Giuseppe.

The days of his confinement went tediously by, while ever before him loomed the horrid prospect of a violent death. Then Guiseppe confronted his victim and accompanying him—could it be reality?—was Hortense.

"I bring to you a gleam of sunlight, M. Edouin," said the dark browed villain, with grinning sarcasm.

Henri sprang forward to embrace his betrothed, but Giuseppe interposed.

"Hold! I did not bring here here for a love scene. Give ear to me. Minutes for Henri Edouin are valuable. Judgment is to be given in your case within the hour. You know what it will be—death! I come to offer you life."

"You?"

"And, pray, why not? I hold the document that is to riddle you with bullets. Say the word and I will destroy it. I will retract my charge as a stupid blunder."

"What word shall I say?"

"Henceforth you will work and fight on the side of the commune. That will save you—if I choose. Giuseppe the spy is quite another person than Giuseppe the baker's apprentice. Money and influence both are mine now. Besides, our prisons are cramming with too many hostages. Exchanges are slow, and we need men. So, come, I have your sworn word?"

"Never!" burst from Henri's lips indignantly.

Throughout Hortense had remained passive. Now she threw herself on her knees, with clasped hands, before the man she so dearly loved.

"Oh, yes, yes!" she cried passionately. "For me—for your own precious life! Anything for your life! Promise! Swear! Here on my knees I beg you, Henri!"

Her voice was broken with wild sobbing; her eyes were brimming with tears. The young man's head drooped, then raised desperately, while his eyes flashed on the treacherous spy.

"So be it, villain Giuseppe! I give my sacred promise as you ask."

The mysterious and convicting letter was instantly torn into fragments. Giuseppe had not boasted vainly. Two days later Henri Edouin was liberated and mounted in the national guard.

For a long time he [illegible] nity of seeing Hortense." When at last the lovers did meet, it was to realize the greatest sorrow of their two fond hearts. As the price of saving Henri's life Hortense had solemnly agreed to wed with Giuseppe.

Ever memorable will be the 28th of May, 1871, when the following proclamation appeared:

> INHABITANTS OF PARIS.
> The army of France came to save you. Paris is delivered. Our soldiers carried, at 4 o'clock, the last positions occupied by the insurgents. Today the struggle is finished. Order, labor and security will now survive
> DE MACMAHON, DUC DE MAGENTA,
> Marshal of France, Commander in Chief.

Crowds and columns of prisoners were being marched to Versailles. The prisoners' camp at Satory was an anomalous picture, even shudderful to contemplate.

A man with baleful eyes and snaky lips approached one of the entrances to the stable pens. The prompt "Qui vive?" halted him.

"Pardon," was the affable, grinning response, "but I am a quartermaster. You have here, by a great mistake, a good cousin of mine who will answer to the name of Henri Edouin. Be so good as to summon him to me. I am not so great a fool as to ask his release just now, but would speak with him if I may."

Villainous Giuseppe, ever treacherous and fearing that Henri might escape to annoy him in the future and jealous to insanity that the man should live to whom Hortense was so avowedly attached, had sought the prisoners' camp with murderous intent. In his bosom he carried a pistol, and with the weapon he was resolved to slay the rival he hated.

His speech at the gate was interrupted by a savage cry.

A bronzed gendarme who was standing near threw aside his musket and, springing forward, gripped the pseudo quartermaster by the throat.

"This wretch lies!" he vociferated excitedly. "He is Giuseppe of the commune, Giuseppe the spy, who ordered 40 of my comrades shot. I alone escaped! I know him well!"

A fierce struggle ensued.

There were a flash, a bang, and the gendarme dropped dead.

But simultaneously a musket butt crashed down through the skull of Giuseppe. The baleful eyes were dimmed forever.

It would be difficult to describe the tearful pleadings of beautiful Hortense before the gentlemen of the military bureau in Rue Satory. She knew and revealed the trick which had placed Henri in Giuseppe's power. She told the story of her heart's sacrifice to save her lover's life and his unwilling yielding to the proposition of his arch enemy. It was an appeal to touch the deepest sympathy of her hearers.

Henri Edouin was forthwith set at liberty.

He and his true Hortense were shortly afterward wedded, and when Paris had subsided to comparative quiet old Jean Guileau gave a merry feast to the handsome couple.—Saturday Night.

Plant Life and the Sunbeam.

Even in the brightest room plants are never of so rich a green as those grown out of doors. In a dark cellar no chlorophyl is produced at all. Every one has seen potatoes growing there, with their long attenuated stalks and little white leaves, which exist but for a time and when the reserve material in the tuber is used up wither away because they have no light. To produce chlorophyl the light must be at least of sufficient intensity that this page may be easily read by it, and to act as a reducing agent it must be very considerably stronger.

Every one has learned by sad experience how impossible it is to keep plants in their rooms for any length of time, and the reason is that the light is not bright enough, and what there is does not last long enough to produce the necessary quantity of food material to support life. There is another fatal thing to the growth of plants indoors—viz. the dryness of the air—and this can only be overcome by covering over the plant with a glass shade. As plants die from want of light, so, too, there are some which die from too much. Many of the mosses which cover damp shady walls and banks with their soft covering of green velvet die from too great an exposure to sunlight.—Good Words.

Japs Become Thrifty.

Yokohama, Nov. 7.—The Japanese government has decided to institute economies and to effect other measures in order to offset the failure to sell bonds in the United States. The issue of exchequer bonds of the value of 10,000,000 yen has been only a partial success.

"De Choppin."

"Speakin 'bout partnerships," said Moses, with a solemn shake of the head—"speakin 'bout partnerships wid a white man, I'ze had one an don't want no mo'. One time Kurnel Dawson dun cums ober to my cabin wid a bland smile on his face an shakes hands wid me an says:

"'Moses, let's yo' an me go into partnership in de wood bizness. Yo's a powerful hand to chop, an I'ze a powerful hand to sell cord wood.'

"'Pears like a mighty good thing to me, an I goes at it an cuts 30 cords of wood. Bimeby I goes down to de kurnel fur my sheer ob de money, an he smiles an shakes hands an says:

"'I'ze got it all figgered out, Moses. In de fust place, I purvided de timber. In de next place, I purvided de ax. Der I sent my mewls to draw de wood, an I spent my time to sell it. Dat 'pears to take in de hull ob de case.'

The Destructive Porpoise.

Seeing that an ordinary porpoise is from five to six feet in length and will require some 500 ordinary mackerel or their equivalent per week to keep it in fair condition—and there cannot be less than from 20,000 to 30,000 of these creatures living in British and Irish waters—the drain upon the shoals of mackerel living in these seas from this source alone must be enormous, for if these creatures only feed on them one-half of the year about 400,000,000 mackerel must be destroyed without man or beast receiving any equivalent. These animals are not easily taken in hand, being so intelligent and active. I believe I am safe in saying there were extensive fisheries carried on for them in the sixteenth century at St. Mawes and Fowey, Cornwall, and in most of the narrow harbors of Britain, their flesh being highly valued by the gentry in those days, but now nothing of them is appropriated to man's use in England.—Chambers's Review

Mrs. Lucy Mosher.

George Mosher, of Adrian, has received word of the death Monday afternoon at Kirkville. Mo., of Mrs. Lucy Mosher, widow of the late Thomas Mosher, formerly merchant and miller at Springville, Lenawee county. The cause of death was typhoid fever. Deceased leaves a sister, Mrs. Robt. Hastings, of Palmyra. Mrs. Mosher was a resident of Tecumseh about four years ago and conducted a millinery business in the block now occupied by Mrs. J. H. Hanford.

ROUND ABOUT US.

A young man named Allie Nelson was arrested in Whiteford by Deputy Sheriff Dunbar Friday and taken to Adrian by W. F. Shephard, sheriff of Lenawee, Saturday. He is wanted on a charge of embezzlement.—Monroe Democrat.

Another victin of the corn shredder James Litchard, of this village, while working with Bud VanWormer's corn shredder at the farm of Mr. Colf, on the Dexter road, Friday morning, got his right hand badly hurt. His middle finger had to be amputated.—Milan Leader.

Married, at the Methodist parsonage, Wednesday afternoon, by Rev. H. C. Colvin, Morely A. Bennett and Miss Lulu Edna Clark, of Manchester. These happy people will spend a few days visiting friends about the state and then repair to the home awaiting them two miles west of Tecumseh.—Clinton Local.

A bold attempt at horse stealing was made about eleven o'clock last Saturday evening, on the Francis Plumadore farm, now occupied by Lawrence Gorno. Mr. Gorno returned home from a neighbor's just in the nick of time to discover what was going on. He gave chase and captured his horse, but the would-be theives escaped.—Petersburg Sun

To-morrow evening the ladies of the Clinton M. E. church give their annual chicken-pie supper, commencing at 5 o'clock and continuing as long as there are applicants. Ed Smith will be the first one down on a chair at five, and before eight, he will be as hollow as an empty hogshead, and try to get a second supper for a third off.—Adrian Press.

Kalamazoo has 26 churches, and a Salvation Armry, yet there's a good percentage of the population who fail to get into the straight and narrow path. Several newsdealers sell penny papers to strangers for a nickle. Those fellows never will get within a million centimeters of the pearly gates even with a baloon from the hot air district. —Adrian Press.

Mrs. Thaddeus Fisk, of Somerset, looked over the strawberry bed a couple of weeks ago, and found that a second corp had matured, and there were enough so she picked a nice lot of them for tea. That established the strawberry record for Hillsdale county in 1901. October fresh picked fruit, by a thoroughly truthful lady.—Adrian Press.

October was truly a month of mourning to the citizen of Hudson and vicinity. Fourteen interments were made in Maple Grove cemetery, and several in the Catholic cemetery. Nearly all of the deaths were people who had occupied prominent business, professional, political, church, or social positions, thus commanding a wide acquaintance and leaving scores of friends besides their immediate relatives behind.—Hudson Post.

A fellow pretending to be a pension examiner is traveling in the state. Pensioners should be on the lookout for him. He approaches pensioners with the statement that their pension is about to be reduced or suspended, but promises for a consideration, from $5 to $10, to secure their reinstatement on the rolls He is a fraud. Any pensioner approached by such a person should at once call an officer and have him arrested.—Ex.

Mr. John Hawks, who has been visiting his father-in-law, Benj. Barrus, here, started from the latter's home with a load of apples last Thursday for the cider mill when he accidentally dropped one of the lines, and jumping from the wagon to regain it, the horses were frightened and ran away. They ran straight west until coming to S. B Aten's place where they turned into the yard and were stopped without any great damage to wagon or loss of contents.—Onsted News.

George Cooley while operating a corn husker on the farm of Charles Newton, a short distance east of Addison, Wednesday afternoon, had the misfortune to get his left hand caught in the machinery. Before the husker could be stopped Mr. Cooley's arm was so badly crushed from the wrist to above the elbow that it was necessary to amputate the member below the shoulder. The surgical work was performed by Dr. Marks, of Addison, who reported this morning that the patient was getting along as well as could be expected. —Brooklyn Exponent.

After punching a 1000 foot hole in the ground at Milan in search of gas, oil, or any old thing that will burn or squirt, the contractors have become discouraged. They have not received a cent of money nor a scent of oil for their work and therefore porpose to ship their tools and machinery. But they will leave the hole; and the stockholders will continue to jab Chinaward until they have used up the money on hand. At Britton a fine salt well has been struck, the Milanites hope to do equally well and so earn their salt at least. Well, all's well that ends well, but it looks as if their money was pretty well sunk.— Monroe Democrat.

The pupils of Brooklyn's high school gave a "belt social" last Tuesday evening. The entrance fee was half a cent per inch, girth measure, surcingles barred. This was an unfair discrimination, and no one attended but wasp waisted girls and lean men. Take a fellow like Cap. Allen, of Ypsilanti, Will Ayers or Geo. Ballenberger, of this city, and it would cost a dollars apiece to get in, while such clothes pins as Henry Hall, of Hudson, Dr. Yale, of Deerfield, or J. B. Stephenson could walk in for a dime. They say it was amusing to see the size to which some of those Brookly chicken pie destroyers shrunk when the belt was adjusted.— Adrian Press.

Fred Lamkin, who resides at Milan, went to Britton Saturday night, bent on mischief, having selected Chas. Beasley as his victim. He went to Mr. Beasley's home with the intention of doing that gentleman bodily harm, having made the threat that he would take his life. He went there, but did not accomplish his purpose. Mr. Beasley telephoned to Sheriff Shepherd to be on the watch for Lamkin, as he was headed for that city, and he was arrested near the east end saloon late at night and lodged in the county jail. Lamkin was either drunk or insane, but when arrested the officers could not detect any signs of liquor about him. It seems he and his wife have separated, he living in Milan, while his wife is housekeeper for Mr. Beasley.—Adrian Times.

Prohibition Election.

At a meeting of the Prohibitionist state convention, held Tuesday morning, the resignation of Fred E. Britten, of Detroit, as state chairman was received and accepted. On motion of Wm. Smith, of Tecumseh, F. W. Corbett, of Adrian. was elected to fill the vacancy. Mr. Corbett has been for the past year state lecturer of the party.

Mr. Britten reported that there is $1,000 of indebtedness outstanding and $4,000 of pledges to be collected. There is a movement to move the headquarters of the party to Adrian, but this will be combatted by the Detroit committeemen.

Mrs. Ann Farley.

Died at the home of her daughter in Buffalo, N. Y. Tuesday, Nov. 5, 1901 Mrs. Ann Farley, aged 68 years and 11 days.

Mrs. Farley, nee Gillespie, was one of the pioneers of Lenawee county, having lived her entire life, with the exceptions of a few years spent at Jackson, Mich., and a few months, in this vicinity. Early in the sixties she was married to Mr. Phineas J. Farley to whom she was a true helpmeet until death called her companion away in May 1896.

Three children were born to them, two daughters and one son. Mrs. Farley's life was one of faithful industry. Experiencing the struggles of pioneer life when kindliness and helpfullness was so greatly needed and generously given she continued to exercise these noble qualities through all the years of her life. The charitable texture of her nature may be attested by friends and associates of a life time. She was quiet and unassuming in her way, devoted to home duties and interests. For the memory of a mother loving and self-sacrificing. Besides three children, Mrs. Farley leaves three grandchildren and four brothers of the near relatives.

Her last illness was of short duration. Her daughters, Miss May and Mrs. Geo. H. Stacy were with her and cared most tenderly for her during the sad short days. May the sorrowing friends find comfort in the Divine assurance and look forward to a reunion beyond. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Kemp at St. Peter's Episcopal church this place, Friday morning, November 8.

SIGNIFICANT QUESTIONS.

How the Small Boy Succeeded in Breaking Bad News Gently.

"What do you want, little boy?"

"Is this where Mr. Upjohn lives, ma'am?"

"Yes."

"The Mr. Upjohn that runs the bank?"

"He is an officer in the bank."

"The Mr. Upjohn that went down town on a trolley car this morning?"

"I presume he went on a trolley car. What"—

"Is he the Mr. Upjohn that was in that horrible street car accident?"

"I haven't heard of his being in any street car accident."

"Didn't hear 'at he'd sprained his ankle jumpin' out o' the car when the train run into it?"

"No, my little boy; you frighten me. What has"—

"Didn't hear how he run into a drug store for a piece o' courtplaster to stick on a little cut he'd got over the eye?"

"Not at all. For mercy's sake"—

"He isn't in, is he, ma'am?"

"No; he's"—

"Name's John U. Upjohn, isn't it?"

"Yes, that's his name."

"Then he's the same man. He won't be here for an hour or two, I guess, 'cause he's stoppin' to have one o' his teeth tightened that got knocked a little bit loose when he was jumpin' out o' danger, y' know."

"Little boy, tell me the whole story. I think I can bear it now."

"Well, ma'am, he's in the hospittle with four ribs broke, an' one leg's in a sling, an' his nose is knocked kind o' sideways, but he's gettin' along all right, an' he'll be out again in about a month, an' here's a letter f'm the doctor tellin' y' all about it, ma'am."—Boston Traveler.

THE COOKBOOK.

A cup of butter means sixteen tablespoons. When we measure butter in a cup, we measure it packed solid.

One cup of sauce means one cup of liquid, regardless of the amount of thickening and butter that you use.

A novel and dainty way of cooking little new onions is to boil them and serve them on toast, similar to asparagus.

Stir all sauces with a wooden spoon until they thicken and begin to leave the sides of the pan. Add flavoring essences after taking the pot from the fire.

After boiling a ham let it cool in the water in which it was cooked. This helps to make it more tasty, moist and tender. The same rule applies to tongue or corned beef.

Sardines broiled in a chafing dish are nice for Sunday night suppers. Use just enough of the oil in the box to cover the bottom of the dish and keep the fish from sticking. When they are browned on both sides, sprinkle liberally with lemon juice and serve hot.

Away From Home.

It is becoming the fashion for a woman to seek a maternity hospital that her children may be born amid conveniences lacking at home. The children are sent away from home to school. They are married away from home, and members of the family are taken to hospitals for their final illness and buried from an undertaker's parlor. It is becoming a fashion to take everything from home except the family rows. They are still sacred to the family hearth.—Atchison Globe.

IN OLDEN TIMES.

Many Things were Different. Nowadays the Public profit by Experience.

When the striped pole or sign which now indicates a barber shop was employed to let the public know where cupping or blood letting was professionally performed, close shaves were of daily occurrence, not the easy removal of the hirsute or hairy adornment of the head and face, but close shaves from entering eternity. More than one unfortunate entered the barber surgeon's doorway to leave it a corpse or so weak that weeks were required to get the victim of malpractice on his feet. Blood letting was used for everything from a heartache to a corn, and a pain in the loins was invariably treated with two incisions, one on each side of the spine. Like plasters and liniments these helped from the counter irritation they created, and we may presume that had Mr. Calvin Wilson, proprietor of the leading shaving parlor of Niles, Mich. lived in the time of George III, of England, in place of taking the course he did a short time ago with his back, blood letting would have been resorted to. Read how he treated his trouble:

Mr. Wilson says: "My occupation has very likely, much to do with the cause of my backache from which I have suffered considerably for a number of years. Standing on one's feet some days 18 hours is hard on the best of backs but when you have pain across the loins with lameness and soreness, every time you move the muscles of the arm, long, long before your daily task is over you often wish you could go to sleep. I tried everything to better my condition but was unsuccessful until I used three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The relief they brought to a man who has worked hard all his life and is now past the three score and ten is much easier to appreciate than to describe in words. Doan's Kidney Pills perform what they promise."

Slave to a Pillow.

There is in this city a young man who sleeps on a pillow that is one foot square and only four inches thick, a pillow that resembles a pancake. He has used it ever since he was a baby. When, at the age of twelve, he entered St. Paul's school, he took it all the way to New Hampshire with him, and when he entered Harvard he took it to Cambridge also. Starting on his wedding journey, he carried it in his suit case. When he went abroad, the pillow went along. And now, when he is twenty-five, he is more attached to the tiny thing than ever and will take it on the briefest trips—on trips of a day, say, to New York or on trips over night to the country houses of his friends. He says that he has not once slept on anything but this pillow since he was seven years old.—Philadelphia Record.

HOURGLASSES.

They Have Not Gone Out of Style by a Long Shot.

"Most people think that hourglasses went out of style years ago," said a clerk in a Twenty-third street store, "along with perukes and knee breeches, but as a matter of fact we have more calls for them today than we have had at any time within the last ten years. That this renewed popularity of the hourglass augurs its universal acceptance as a timepiece by the coming generation I am not prepared to say, but if such a renaissance were to become assured it would be no more surprising than some of the other recent fads based on a revival of lost customs. Anyway a brief study of the hourglass will do nobody harm. There are thousands in this generation who have not the slightest idea what an hourglass looks like, and it won't hurt them to broaden their education a little along certain lines.

"Of the hourglasses sold at present the three minute glass is in the lead. This glass is used almost exclusively to measure time in boiling eggs, and its usefulness naturally places its sales a little in advance of the more sentimental varieties. Next come the five, ten and fifteen minute and full hour glasses, which are bought chiefly by musicians for piano practice and by lodges and secret societies.

"The sand used in an hourglass is the very finest that the world affords. The western coast of Italy furnishes most of it, as it has done for ages past. The cost of hourglasses is regulated by the ornamentation of the frames. A glass set in a plain rosewood case can be bought for $1, while a mahogany frame comes to $1.50 or $2. Of course, the price can be brought up still higher by fancy carving and decoration. Swell lodges sometimes go to this extra expense, but most people are satisfied with the cheaper grades."—New York Sun.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WHAT ABOUT YOUR BOWELS?
If the people only attended to the regular movement of their bowels as closely as they do to their business and social affairs, half the ills of life would be avoided. Constipation and torpid liver are the forerunners of serious disease and should be cured at once with Liver-Lax, the little 25 cent liver pill. Guaranteed by Bunkoing a Japanese.

"J. P. G." was only an enlisted man in Uncle Sam's navy, but his messmates called him "the Swell" because whenever he went ashore he carried a suit of civilian's clothes. At Yokohama, in his fine raiment and a white felt hat, he passed himself off to a Japanese coal merchant as the paymaster of the fleet and contracted for several thousand tons of coal. The price named was $14 a ton.

"What is my rake off?" he asked the dealer, who offered a generous commission. "Make the price sixteen dollars a ton and have —— thousand tons ready for delivery at the earliest possible hour tomorrow morning," he said.

The merchant opened wine, and when thoroughly warmed up the sailor remarked, looking indolently at his watch: "By the bye, I'm expected to visit the club tonight, and it is probable that I may need a little more money than I have in my pocket. Perhaps you had better advance me three or four thousand dollars on account."

Of course he got what he wanted. Next morning the vessels were surrounded with scores of barges laden with coal, and it was all the officers could do to prevent the Japs from unloading their cargoes. The dealer dared say nothing, for he had entered into a conspiracy to defraud the government, so he pocketed his loss in silence.—New York Press.

Now They Never Speak.

A coolness growing out of the following conversation has sprung up between Jones and Smith.

"I had a splendid time last night," said Jones. "I spent the evening at a little social gathering at the Goodman mansion."

"Are the Goodmans nice people?" queried Smith.

"Well, I should say so. They are very aristocratic. To get into their circle one must have either a great deal of money or a great deal of genius."

"You don't tell me so? And you say you were there?"

"Yes."

"You were invited, were you?"

"Of course."

"And to be invited a man has to have plenty of money or a great deal of genius?"

"Precisely."

"Well, Jones, I am very glad to hear you have become rich all of a sudden. Lend me five pounds!"—London Answers.

Reasons For a Divorce.

The Druses sometimes divorce their wives for apparently the most trivial causes. Thus a man named Soleiman Attala had a wife, Isbakyeh. The woman frequently worked for us, and on several occasions I had to complain that she talked too much and worked too little. At length I was obliged to tell Soleiman that owing to his wife's laziness I could employ her no longer. Shortly afterward I went to England.

On my return after a couple of months' absence I was surprised to find that Soleiman had divorced Isbakyeh and had already married another woman. On inquiring from him the cause of this he replied, "Your honor told me that you would not employ my wife again, so I thought I would get rid of her and marry another woman whom you would employ."—Blackwood's Magazine.

How Old Spiders Live.

Old spiders, which have neither web nor the materials to make one, often hunt about to find out the webs of other spiders, younger and weaker than themselves, with whom they venture battle. The invader generally succeeds, and the younger spider is driven out to make a new web, and the old spider remains in possession until a stronger spider invades the web and drives it out. When thus dispossessed, the spider seldom ventures another attack, but tries to subsist upon the few insects that may fall accidentally into its clutches and eventually dies of hunger.

The Blind Leading the Blind.

Little Ina had always lived in the country until her parents moved to the seat of the State Normal college. Ina was sent to the "practice school" of that institution, where during one hour of each day she was taught by members of the senior training class.

When asked how she liked the school, she replied, "I love my regular teacher dearly, but I don't much like it when those false teachers come in."—Harper's Magazine.

Too Late For Regrets.

Tired of life and the ever present necessity of earning his daily bread by working he had taken a dose of carbolic acid and laid down to die.

But the meddlesome doctors pumped him out and saved him to society.

"Oh, Horace," moaned his wife, leaning over him, "why did you take that awful stuff? Laudanum would have been less painful and so much surer!"—Chicago Tribune.

Fidgety
people are lacking in nervous strength. The weak, care-worn, melancholy, headachy, and low-spirited men and women are easily excited, impatient, fidgety, and unable to sleep at night. Worn-out nerves must be built up, and the vitality of the whole system replenished before relief can come.
"The least bit of noise or sudden jar would nearly drive me crazy, and I was just too fidgety for anything. I was so nervous that I could not rest or sleep. The first dose of Dr. Miles' Nervine brought me sleep, and after that I got well fast."

IN THE WINTER.
(Benson's Plaster Is Pain's Master.)
For coughs and colds Benson's Porous Plasters are an incomparably better remedy than any other—external or internal. Their medicinal properties enter the skin and go straight to the seat of the disease.
They relieve and cure a "seated" cold without disturbing the system or upsetting the stomach. Cough mixtures often nauseate. Benson's Plasters are medicinal in the highest degree, and quickest to act.
Placed on the chest or back or on both at once in serious cases, the good effect is felt immediately. The congestion yields, the cough abates and the breathing improves.
Lung or bronchial affections or kidney disease, are cured with the least possible suffering and loss of time.
Benson's Plasters are immeasurably superior to Belladonna, Strengthening, Capsicum or any other combination in plaster form. They are also preferable to ointments, liniments and salves.
Benson's Plasters have received fifty-five highest awards over all competitors; and more than 5,000 physicians and druggists have declared them to be one of the few trustworthy household remedies. For sale by all druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.
Be sure you get the genuine. Accept no imitation or substitute.

Commissioners' Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee.

In the matter of the estate of ALEXANDER BOYD, deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the probate court of said county, commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the residence of Charles E Osborn, township of Adrian Lenawee county, Michigan, on the 29th day of November 1901, and on the 8th day of April 1902, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days.

And that six months from the 8th day of October A. D. 1901, are allowed by said probate court for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

CHARLES A. MATTHEWS.
CHARLES E. OSBORN.
Dated, October 8th 1901. Commissioners.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, county of Lenawee, ss. Probate Court for said County.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the city of Adrian, on the 6th day of November in the year one thousand, nine hundred and one.

Present, Harry L. Larwill, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of JACOB EVERHART, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Michael Smeltzer, administrator upon said estate, praying that he may be authorized, empowered and licensed to sell the real estate described in said petition, for reasons therein stated.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 2nd day of December next at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition.

And it is further ordered that a copy of this order be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

HARRY L. LARWELL,
(A true copy) Judge of Probate.
E. I. Larwill, Probate Register.

THE REPUBLIC.

Thou, too, sail on, O ship of state!
Sail on, O Union, strong and great!
Humanity with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate!
We know what Master laid thy keel,
What workmen wrought thy ribs of steel,
Who made each mast and sail and rope,
What anvils rang, what hammers beat,
In what a forge and what a heat
Were shaped the anchors of thy hope!
Fear not each sudden sound and shock;
'Tis of the wave and not the rock;
'Tis but the flapping of the sail
And not a rent made by the gale!
In spite of rock and tempest's roar,
In spite of false lights on the shore,
Sail on nor fear to breast the sea!
Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee;
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee, are all with thee!
—Longfellow.

EXPRESSIVE PHRASES.

Those Which Foreigners Coming to America Learn to Use First.

What are the most expressive phrases in colloquial English? Of the dozens that slip off English speaking tongues in the course of a day some must be better suited for their purpose and more characteristic of the race that originated them than others. When foreigners come to this country, they catch certain expressions almost immediately and long before they can attempt to speak the language have made them part of their vocabulary. It would seem that these phrases must be the most expressive in English and that they are peculiar to the language and "fill a long felt want," since foreigners seize so eagerly upon them.

Every man or woman who lands in this country is saying, "Hurry up!" in two months. In whatever quarter of the city one may walk, Italian or German or Jewish, mothers will be dispatching their offspring on errands, using their native speech, but closing their orders with the magic "Hurry up!" How delightfully characteristic of the nation is the phrase! It is not to be wondered at that the newcomers from the slow moving old world find that they have brought over nothing to equal it.

"All right" rivals "hurry up," not because foreign tongues lack similar expressions, but because there is a jolly, hail fellow well met air about "All right" lacking in other phrases of the same character. Then, too, "All right" takes the place not only of "Good," but of "Yes" and "I understand" and of a dozen other phrases which in other languages require separate expressions.

The third phrase, which alone shares the popularity of the first two, is, "It's nice." This should be interesting to purists who wish to restrict "nice" to its first and original meaning of "exact." No word of ancestry sufficiently aristocratic to please them takes the place of "nice" in its colloquial meaning, and foreigners clasp it with joy, wholly ignorant of the fact that they are outraging the feelings of anybody by so doing. Other phrases besides "Hurry up," "All right" and "It's nice" captivate the fancy of the newly landed, but these three reign supreme.—New York Tribune.

They Were Not Indians.

It is said that when the first Chinese came to California the Indians were very curious about them. A dispute arose among some of them as to what country the strangers might hail from and whether or not they were Indians. The Indians, wise as the Puritans of old, decided to apply the water test. If the accused swam, they were witches; if they drowned, they were innocent.

One day a party of Indians met a party of Chinamen approaching a little stream. The strangers approached the bridge and started across. The Indians, too, filed across and, meeting the Chinamen in midstream, pushed two of them into the angry, spooming current below. The test was conclusive. They could not swim. They were not Indians.

To make good tea and coffee the water should be taken at the first bubble. Remember continued boiling causes the water to part with its gases and become flat. This is the cause of much bad tea and coffee.—Ladies' Home Journal.

THE POULTRY YARD.

Gravel or coarse sand is as much needed as ordinary food.

All chickens want for health, growth and good conditions is plain, nutritious food.

Even when the fowls have an unlimited range it is a good plan to feed them every evening.

One of the first things to learn about poultry is that they must be kept clean and free from vermin.

Peafowls are handsome and subsist with the least care of any kind of fowls. They are prolific layers and a good protection against hawks.

Raw bone contains every part of an egg—white, yolk and shell. Therefore it should be kept constantly before laying hens in the granulated form.

One of the best ways of removing lice from fowls is to make them do it themselves by having a lot of dry earth where they can dust themselves whenever they feel like it.

The comb is always an index to the condition of the bird. When the comb is white or very pale or very black, something is wrong. A healthy fowl shows a bright scarlet color in the comb.

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insiduous consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

WOULD KILL MISS STONE.

So Thinks Dickinson if Brigands Get Ransom First.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 11.—Information has been received here from Doubnitza that the band of brigands holding captive Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, called about a fortnight ago at the village of Smetchevo and subsequently proceeded to the monastery of Rilo, but the movements of the troops compelled the brigands to flee toward the frontier, where they are now in hiding.

It is also asserted that the brigands have recently been treating Miss Stone with more severity in order to exercise pressure and to compel a more ready acceptance of their conditions.

Consul-General Dickinson is inflexible. He insists that the surrender of Miss Stone must precede or be simultaneous with the payment of the ransom. His attitude is justified by the known determination of some members of the band, particularly the captain, Yanne Sandansky, to kill Miss Stone and her companion so soon as the ransom is received, owing to the fact that the captives have now acquired information concerning the secret committees.

Competent persons, however, express the opinion that the cupidity of the brigands will overcome their fear of revelations, and all such approve the declaration of Mr. Dickinson. Saturday Mr. Dickinson made energetic representations to the Bulgarian government against the movements of the Bulgarian troops, reproaching the officials with the fact that, that notwithstanding their solemn promises to give him all assistance in their power, their action was embarrissing the negotiations, retarding a settlement and placing in jeopardy the life of Miss Stone.

He made a definite declaration that the Bulgarian government would be held responsible for the death of Miss Stone and of all the consequences of her death should it be proved that the attitude of the Bulgarian government forced the brigands to kill their captives.

PROFIT IN STEEL RAILS.

Industrial Commission Gives Out the Facts and Figures.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The industrial commission has issued a special report on an investigation conducted by the commission regarding the cost and selling prices of iron and steel products from 1890 to 1901. The statement shows that in 1890 the cost of steel rails ranged from $25.93 to $34.52; in 1891 from $24.15 to $25.68; in 1892 from $22.65 to $24.82; in 1895 from $16.68 to $25.47; in 1896 from $17.72 to $20.69; in 1897 from $15.91 to $17.62; in 1898 from $16.67 to $17.81; in 1899 from $18.11 in January to $35.52 in December; in 1900 from $36.12 in February to $21.[illegible] in October; in 1901 from $21.54 to $25.98.

According to the showing made, there was a margin in the selling price over the cost price for every year from 1890 up to July of 1898. In 1890 the margin ran from 73c to $3.50 per ton; in 1891 from $3.89 to $5.85; in 1892 from $4.68 to $7.35; in 1893 from $4.75 to $8.49; in 1894 from $2.71 to $6.21; in 1895 from $1.10 to $9.06; in 1896 from $7.31 to $10.28; in 1897 from 47c to $7.30; in 1898 the highest margin was $1.33 in January. In July a loss of $0.05 per ton is noted, the cost price being $17.05, as against selling price of $17. Again in J[illegible] 1899, when the cost price was $2[illegible], there was a loss of $0.37. In July of that year the loss was $1.51 on a cost price of $29.76; $1.15 on a cost price of $32.15, and in September $1.48 on a cost price of $33.98. A loss of about $1 per ton is also reported for the months of January, February, March, April and May of 1900, when the cost price ranged over $36 per ton. Losses also are claimed on steel billets for most of the year 1900 and for the first four months of 1901. A loss is recorded for every month in 1898 on billets. Losses are recorded for the last three months of 1900 on pig iron. The lowest cost of production for pig iron was recorded in 1894, when it was $8.65 per ton. In 1900 the cost of pig iron was $15.35.

MINOR TELEGRAMS.

Baron De Calice, the Austro-Hungarian ambassador, has secured from the Porte a satisfactory settlement of several questions that were pending between Turkey and Austria-Ungary.

Paul Revere, vice-president general of the Sons of the American Revolution, died Sunday at Morristown, N. J., aged 45. He was a son of Gen. Joseph Warren Revere, who fought in the Seminole and civil wars, and a great grandson of Paul Revere of revolutionary fame.

Negotiations are being carried on by J. Pierpont Morgan whereby it is expected that the Breaker Island plant of the Troy, N. Y., Steel Co. will soon be absorbed by the United States steel corporation. The plant, which is the largest in the state, has been idle for five years and is now in the hands of a receiver. At one time it employed over 3,000 men.

Concerning the report from Philadelphia that the firm of Jones & Laughlins would be a member of the projected new $50,000,000 steel combination, B. F. Jones, Jr., makes public the announcement that so far as his firm is concerned there is absolutely no truth in the report. Mr. Jones says such a project is on foot and his firm has been solicited to enter the combination, but had not complied, and would not.

A striking illustration of the growth of the American navy is presented in the single statement in the annual report of Rear Admiral R. B. Bradford, chief of the equipment bureau of the navy, that he spent $2,273,111 last fiscal year for 324,108 tons of coal, at an average cost of $7.01 per ton. The report says that this was nearly 95,713 more tons of coal than was used during the preceding fiscal year. Ten years ago the coal consumption was 73,000 tons per annum. The domestic coal costs $6.20 per ton and the foreign coal, of which there were used 105,066 tons, cost $8.50 per ton.

Astounding Discovery

From Coopersville, Mich., comes word of a wonderful discovery of a pleasant tasting liquid that when used before retiring by any one troubled with a bad cough always insures a good night's rest. "It will soon cure the cough too." writes Mrs. S. Himelburger, "for three generations of our family have used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and never found its equal for Coughs and Colds." It's an unrivaled life saver when used for desperate lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00 at C. A. Wright's. Trial bottles free.

ONE DEAD BANDIT

Unsuccessful Attempt to Rob an Arizona Gambling House.

THEY HAD SECURED MONEY

When One Gambler Opened Fire on the Three Masked Men, Killing One and Causing the Others to Flee For Safety.

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 9.—One bandit was killed and one injured as the result of an attempt by three marked robbers to hold up the gambling house of Deel & Co. at Naco, an Arizona border town. The dead bandit has been identified as Will Cravens of Dog Springs, N. M.

A group of gamesters and loungers obeyed when the desperadoes entered the saloon at a late hour and ordered "hands up." Cravens approached the roulette table and proceeded to fill a bag with the bank cash, amounting to several thousand dollars. E. Ellis drew a revolver before the movement was detected by the robbers, and Cravens fell dead when he shot. The other bandits were demoralized and fled in disorder. One of them was wounded by another bullet from Ellis' revolver. They reached their horses, which were hitched in the brush, and rode for the mountains, closely followed by a posse, which had been hastily organized.

King Bestows Honors.

London, Nov. 9.—Among the honors bestowed on the occasion of King Edward's birthday, which occurs today, are a baronetcy upon the retiring lord mayor of London, Frank Green, and knighthood for Chief Justice Little of Newfoundland, and Gray of Bermuda; G. A. Critchett, oculist to the king, and George Hussey, mayor of Southampton. Sir Francis Plunkett is made a knight grand cross of the bath, and Clinton Dawkins (formerly financial member of the council of the governor-general of India and now a member of the council of the gocmfwyppp ber of the firm of J. S. Morgan & Co.) is made a companion of the bath.

New Government School.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Orders have been prepared at the war department for the government and regulation of the school of submarine defense at Fort Totten, N. Y., the name being changed from "Torpedo school," which was first selected. The object of the school is to instruct officers and enlisted men in the various mechanical and electrical appliances in seacoast fortifications and in all subjects pertaining to torpedo warfare, submarine mining and defenses of a submarine character.

Offered Cole Younger a Job.

Minneapolis, Nov. 9.—A. A. Ames, mayor of Minneapolis, has tendered Cole Younger, the notorious bandit, now out of the Minnesota state prison on parole after serving 25 years of a life sentence, a position as captain on the local police force. Cole took the matter up with his friends in St. Paul, where he is now engaged in a grocery store. Upon the advice of his friends he decided to refuse the offer.

Panama Not Captured.

Washington, Nov. 9.—The state department has received a message from President Scrymser of the cable company which connects at Colon, denying the reported capture of Panama and saying that his information from that place represents no change in the situation. There are about 1,000 insurgents within 15 miles of Panama.

Montana Oil Excitement.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 9.—The interest in the Kintla Lakes, Flathead county, oil fields is increasing. More than 1,250 claims, of 160 acres each, have been filed with the county clerk, and records of more claims will be filed soon. It is predicted that 3,000 claims will have been taken by next spring.

The Mississippi.

Before the coming of the whites to America the Mississippi river was known by a different name every few miles of its course. Each tribe that dwelt along its banks gave it a name, and more than thirty of these local designations are preserved in the narratives of the early travelers.

"HIS MAJESTY'S MINISTERS"

Lord Salsbury's Toast, But Listeners Didn't Enthuse.

London, Nov. 11.—The lord mayor's banquet at the Guildhall Saturday night was a spectacular close of the day's festivities. The historic building was the scene of a brilliant pageant in which ancient and modern scenes were strangely mingled. A gathering of 2,000 of the most influential citizens of London, including the heads of the various government departments, gave an opportunity for a loyal demonstration of which the government was not slow to take advantage.

The presence of Lord Salsbury afforded an excellent excuse for reiterating the attitude of the government toward the South African controversy. The response of the great audience in the banquet hall might be described as satisfactorily loyal, but could hardly be called enthusiastic.

The feature of the evening was Lord Salsbury's speech in response to the toast to "His Majesty's Ministers." Referring to the progress of the war in South Africa, the premier said:

"It is pleasant to record that the peace of the world has been so little disturbed by the events of the last two years. Half a century ago we would not have found such a correct and pacific attitude on the part of all the great powers. It is a sign of the increasing international amity and understanding also that the cloud of the past three weeks over the Mediterranean has so lightly passed away. Fifty years ago this would not have been so."

Touching upon South African developments in another part of his speech, Lord Salsbury said:

"I strongly deprecate the spirit of pessimism so frequently heard in the utterances of some of our public men as to the war in which we are engaged. Unlike the wars of former years, no longer does the capture of the enemy's capital and the dissipation of his field force constitute a conclusive victory. We are now confronted by a system of guerrilla war, which must be slowly and effectively stamped out. We are progressing, slowly perhaps, but steadily.

"I cannot take the public wholly into the confidence of the government. It would be most imprudent publicly to state all we are doing weekly and monthly at the front; but what I emphatically declare is that whatever delays are encountered, these are due neither to a lack of earnestness and ability of our generals in the field, nor to the neglect to comply with all of their demands on the part of the home government.

"We have been subject to much vague and indefinite criticism; but our bitterest opponents have not been able to point out any tangible effect, any definite cause of complaint.

"I deeply regret the ravages of the war in the colonies to which we are anxious to accord the fullest practicable measure of self-government, but we have had neighbors in South Africa whose conduct for years has been a menace to the stability of that section of our empire. Now we are engaged in removing this menace and we are determined to do it so effectually that it will never require doing again."

This declaration was received with cordial but by no means enthusiastic applause.

MAKE FARMERS OF INDIANS.

"Sell Their Lands," Says Gov. Murphy —They Encouage Idleness.

Washington, Nov. 11.—Gov. Murphy of Arizona, in his annual report, advocates the sale and settlement of the large Indian reservations within the territory, with the possible exception of the Navajo reservation in northeastern Arizona, and the government construction of reservoirs for water storage for irrigation in suitable localities, with canals leading to lands allotted the Indians. The governor says the latter action, in which Indian labor could be largely utilized, would help to make farmers of the Indians, and that further maintenance of the tribal relations as now conducted and the retention of reservation agencies around which the Indians cluster and live in idleness on government rations, most seriously retard the civilization of the Indians.

Cleveland Robber Confesses.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 11.—John Callahan, who was arrested in the Union iron foundry after an attempt to hold up the night watchman, has confessed to Chief of Detectives Desmond that he was one of the three men who robbed a bank at Turon, Reno county, Kansas, in October, 1899. After the safe was blown, the money was divided among the trio. They then rode 20 miles on a Missouri Pacific handcar to make their escape. Callahan, who says his home is in Cleveland, declares that since the robbery he has not seen his comrades. The authorities of Reno county have been notified of the arrest.

A "Side Wheeler."

Owosso, Mich., Nov. 11.—Constable Henry Moore of Lansing today took E. H. Dorcmuss, a one-armed shooting gallery proprietor, and his partner, John Herdic, back to Lansing for the alleged theft of a bird dog, valued at $75. They will not be allowed to operate here again, as they run a wheel of fortune as a side issue.

Governor to Go Hunting.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 11.—It is announced that Gov. Bliss will arrive here next week to hunt deer. He will be a guest at State Railroad Commissioner Osborn's "Deer Foot lodge," six miles south of Eckerman, this county. Mr. Osborn has just returned from the foothills of the Rocky mountains, west of Moosejaw, N. W. T., where he hunted wild geese.

$60,000 SHORTAGE

How Thompson Handled Maccabee Bank Account.

ARREST TODAY PROBABLE

National Surety Company Will Undoubtedly Ask For a Warrant—Thompson's Successor Must Be a Michigan Man.

Port Huron, Mich., Nov. 9.—Charles D. Thompson, defaulting Maccabee official, will probably be arrested today. This was indicated last night from talk with officials and as a result of conference with bond company's representatives. The heaviest loss falls to the Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Baltimore, which was the same company that carried Quartermaster Will White's risk and sent their man to prison. Thompson's defalcations since August have been small comparatively to that in months previous. In August the National Surety Co. assumed the risk, and the Fidelity's representatives are here and will probably apply for a warrant today. The most important thing before the trustees yesterday was the selection of a successor to Thompson. The laws of the order require that an official must be a resident of the state, and the trustees have not heard from their probable selection as to whether he will move here permanently.

All of the data of the embezzlement is in the hands of bond companies and orders are being awaited from headquarters. There seems to be several technicalities in the way concerning the release of the Fidelity & Deposit Co. from Thompson's bond in August, when the risk was assumed by the National Surety Co. It was stated Thompson's accounts were all right, but a clause in the bond provides that if defalcation is discovered within six months from release, the company is liable. If any stand is made, it will be on this point, but indications are, and representatives have informed the Maccabee officials, that the loss will probably be paid. This means Thompson's arrest unless something undeveloped as yet transpires.

The shortage is now placed at $60,000, as Thompson's bank accounts at Port Huron and Chicago apparently showed $120,000, when he really had but $60,000 on deposit. As he balanced his books on the last day of the month, it was easy to manipulate the accounts.

Looks Like Elopement.

Detroit, Nov. 9.—Charles L. Warren, well known in this city as a former city salesman for the C. E. Smith Shoe Co., and more recently as a manufacturers' agent, with offices in the Valpey building, mysteriously disappeared two months ago leaving his wife and a comfortable home at 181 Pine street.

Two weeks after Warren left, Mrs. James E. Thompson, wife of a Michigan Central conductor who lives at 91 Fifteenth street, also disappeared, taking with her little Bernice, her 11-year-old daughter.

Some time later word was received that Warren and Mrs. Thompson had been seen together at a Cincinnati hotel. But Thompson has failed to locate them there.

Neighbors of the Thompsons have for some time been aware of Warren's attentions to Mrs. Thompson and that there has often been doings, aided by champagne and liquor, at Thompson's home during his absence.

Killed His Cousin.

Allegan, Mich., Nov. 9.—At Glenn, a small station on the Lake Shore railway, Thursday night, Noah Barden was shot and killed by his cousin, Pearl Starkey, who then set fire to the house and afterward committed suicide. The men are cousins and are said to have had some trouble a few days ago. It is the general opinion that Starkey intended to kill both, burn the house to hide his crime, and failing, killed himself.

Jay Barden, the father, is a wealthy fruit grower and lives a short distance from Noah, who was also a fruit farmer and an only son.

Babe in Woods.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 9.—The remains of the 2-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kimball of Brimley have been found in the woods in the vicinity of Wellsburg, this county. The little one was lost about two months ago while the parents were picking berries. The discovery of the body was made by a party of hunters.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 9.—Gov. Bliss has issued a proclamation with reference to the observance of Thursday, Nov. 28, as Tranksgiving day.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Henry Druland, a pioneer resident of St. Clair, is dead.

The Garlinghouse bakery and I. K. Henshaw's residence were destroyed by fire at Homer. The loss is $5,000.

St. Mary's hospital, Detroit, graduates seven women next Thursday from its hospital school, as professional nurses.

A body found on the lake shore near Marquette has been identified as that of Capt. McDonald of the ill-fated steamer Hudson. The identification was made by the teeth.

A. O'Donald's residence at Howard City burned last night, entailing a loss of $13,000; fully insured. The occupants escaped with only what clothes they had on. The house was located in the central portion of the city. The fire was, with great difficulty, kept from spreading to adjoining buildings.

A Suspect of Robbery.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 11.—James L. Barry, colored, was arrested here Sunday on suspicion of being implicated in the Maple Rapids postoffice robbery that occurred about 10 days ago. When placed under arrest he had in his possession a large quantity of special delivery and postage due stamps such as were taken from the Maple Rapids office. The police got track of the man through the fact that he had offered to trade stamps for liquor at several saloons. His home is at Hot Springs, Ark., and he claims to be a singer of ragtime songs in vaudeville.

Co-Operation Stores.

Calumet, Mich., Nov. 11.—The co-operative method of doing business, which so cuts into the profits of the merchants in the copper country, has now been extended to the meat trade. The Finnish Co-Operative Meat Market Co. has just been organized by prominent residents of that nationality, who will do their trading with the market. In several other places in the county co-operative stores, dealing in various lines, are doing a good business.

Schooner Taylor Wrecked.

Menominee, Mich., Nov. 11.—The schooner Emily Taylor was wrecked at Zeizer bay, 20 miles north of here Saturday and the crew, consisting of Capt. Charles Stone, his wife, two children and two sailors, spent a perilous night on the wreck before they were rescued by fishermen. The schooner is owned by Capt. Stone and hails from Gladstone. She had loaded wood at Arthur Bay for Green Bay City and was caught in the blow Saturday afternoon.

Michigan Federal Appointments.

Washington, Nov. 11.—Harry G. Dix of Grand Rapids, Lorenzo M. Lyon of Eaton Rapids, Frank W. Cushman of Petoskey and Edward M. Simpson of Ypsilanti have been appointed railway mail clerks.

Louis M. Sanders of Michigan has been promoted from third assistant examiner in the patent office at 1,400 to second assistant examiner at $1.600.

Crabs Are Fighters.

Crabs are fighting animals. In fact, they will fight anything, says a naturalist. I have seen a crab, in conflict with a lobster, catch the latter over the fore part of the head, where the shell is hardest, and crush it in by one effort, and it rather bears out my idea that the claws of these creatures are particularly weapons of war; that the moment one of them receives severe injury in a claw it drops it off by voluntary amputation, severing its connection with the body at the shoulder by an act of its own will. It seems to me probable that if the claw were necessary for feeding nature would rather seek to cure an injury to it than let the animal discard it altogether.

The species of crab which is most conspicuously a fighter is the hermit crab. Its first idea of independent life is to eat a harmless whelk and occupy its shell. Its next notion is to give battle to every crab of the same persuasion as itself that it comes across. Altogether hermit crabs are undoubtedly the most quarrelsome creatures in existence.

The Hand Kiss.

The kiss of the hand is undoubtedly ancient and therefore is not derived from that of the lips, but probably the converse is true. The hand kiss is loosely asserted to be developed from servile obeisances in which the earth, the foot and the garments were kissed, the hand and cheek succeeding in order of time and approach to equality of rank. But it is doubtful if that was the actual order, and it is certain that at the time when hand kissing began there were less numerous gradations of rank than at a later stage.

Kissing of the hands between men is mentioned in the Old Testament, also by Homer, Pliny and Lucian. The kiss was applied reverentially to sacred objects, such as statues of the gods, as is shown by ancient works of art, and also among numerous etymologies by that of the Latin word "adoro," and it was also metaphorically applied by the inferior or worshiper kissing his own hand and throwing the salute to the superior or statue.

Giants Nearly Twenty Feet Tall.

The giant Ferragus, who was slain by Orlando, the nephew of Charlemagne, was eighteen feet high. He always accompanied the army on foot, there being no horse tall and strong enough to carry him. Platerus in his published writings tells of a giant whom he examined at Lucerne whose body measured 19 feet 4 inches and 3 lines.

CRAFTY CONVICTS

Corner Topeka Officers and Then Escape.

A BIG ARMY OF PURSUERS

Their Narrow Escape From Capture Reads Like a Novel—Those Killed in Previous Raids Are Being Buried and Wounded Cared For.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 11.—Sheriff Cook and Deputy Sheriff Williams of this county were captured by two escaped convicts from the Fort Leavenworth military prison Sunday afternoon at Pauline, five miles south of Topeka, and held prisoners in the farmhouse of a man named Wooster for several hours. The convicts finally escaped between a line of police sent from Topeka to reinforce the sheriff, and are now at large. Both were slightly wounded. Wooster was badly wounded by one of the convicts when he tried to fire on them. Mrs. Wooster and Sheriff Cook were held before the convicts as a shield by the prisoners in making their escape. A posse is in pursuit.

At 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon some farmer boys near Pauline learned that the convicts were in the neighborhood. Hastily forming a posse armed with target rifles, pistols and clubs, they gave chase. Neither of the convicts was armed and they were unable to make a stand. Later Sheriff Cook and Deputy Williams arrived. Coming upon the convicts, both officers fired, wounding the men but not disabling them.

The convicts then fled through a small opening in the timber and ran into the house of Farmer Wooster. Chief Cook telephoned to Topeka for assistance and then took up the chase. Thinking the convicts had run around the house, Cook darted through the door, intending to surprise them at the rear door. But instead of this the convicts had gone into the house, and the officer almost fell into their arms. Sheriff Cook was ordered to give up his gun, which he did. Deputy Williams by this time had reached the house and entered without knowing what happened, and he, too, was made captive by the convicts. In the meantime Chief Stahl of Topeka and eight officers were on their way. They arrived at the Wooster house about an hour after the officers had been imprisoned. Chief Stahl began negotiations with the convicts to give up their prisoners and to surrender themselves, but the convicts only laughed. Farmer Wooster then managed to get a gun and was about to make an attack on the convicts when one of them laid him low with a blow from the butt of a revolver taken from one of their captives. The convict broke Wooster's right hand and made an ugly gash in his head.

One of the convicts told Sheriff Cook that he would be killed if he made the slightest move toward their captive. In the meantime police officers on the outside had surrounded the building, but were afraid to make a move for fear Cook and Williams would suffer. Mrs. Wooster had fainted during the excitement. She finally recovered, and at 7 o'clock the convicts placed the woman and Sheriff Cook in front of them as shields and made for the door. Then after exacting a promise from the sheriff that he would not permit any of the officers outside to fire on them, they started for the open. As they left the house the frightened farmer, his wife and the submissive sheriff between them, the convicts passed between a cordon of police, who could easily have captured them, and started for the railway track. The sheriff in turn had exacted a promise from the police that they would not molest the convicts. After covering a considerable distance down the track the convicts suddenly disappeared through a hedge fence, bidding the officers a mocking farewell.

Kansas City, Nov. 11.—None of the 14 escaped convicts from the Fort Leavenworth prison at liberty Saturday evening was taken Sunday, although armed guards and citizens kept up a steady hunt all day. In the evening three of the prisoners held up and robbed a man near Manhattan, Kan., but escaped and all trace of them was lost. One of the men is believed to be Frank Thompson, the notorious negro leader of the mutiny. At the prison yesterday John Greene, a white convict, who was wounded at Nortonville Friday, when two of his comrades were killed by citizens, suffered the amputation of his leg. He will recover. Queen Fort, shot at the stockade while attempting to escape, and James Huffman, killed in the Nortonville raid, were buried in the prison yard. The body of Jay Poffenholz, also killed in the Nortonville fight, was sent to Chicago at the request of his mother. Guard Waldrupe, who was wounded in the head, is still in a critical condition. The bullet has not yet been found. The other wounded are resting quietly.

Anti-Saloonist Convention.

Washington, Nov. 11.—Active preparations are making for the meeting here in December of the sixth national convention of the American Anti-Saloon league. The sessions of the convention will be held in one of the commodious buildings of the city, and, beginning Tuesday, Dec. 3, will continue through Thursday. A large attendance is looked for, as the league expects to secure railroad excursion rates throughout the country. The call for the convention is signed by Rev. Luther B. Wilson, the acting president of the league, and a request is made that all bodies hostile to the saloon send delegates, together with a representative from each of the national board of direction.

Earthquake In Turkey.

Constantinople, Nov. 11.—A severe earthquake occurred Friday at Erzorcum. Many houses were destroyed and the inhabitants sought safety in the open.

Grain Moved In Streams.

Nowhere in North America will you come on a more thrilling night scene than the fresh water cargo tank unloading at Buffalo, says Rollin Lynde Hartt in The Atlantic. Here she lies beneath the towering grain elevator, which thrusts a long pumping pipe (called the "leg") down through her hatchway. Mount the gangplank, dodging the spinning ropes that make your head reel, stumble about on the dark deck, look down, down, down through the open hatch, and, zounds, what a sight! The hold glows with electricity. It is misty with blown dust. It roars with mechanical activity.

An enormous steel "shovel," big as the inside of a house and manipulated by countless flying ropes, charges back and forth through the whole length of the ship, pitching the yellow grain before it and heaping it up where the leg can get hold of it to whisk it into the bin that is somewhere up in the sky. Beneath, in the hold, an army of blue clad men with wooden "scoops" barely dodge the deadly shovel as they swing the grain into its path.

CHEAP STATUETTES.

HOW THEY ARE MADE, HARDENED, FINISHED AND COLORED.

Italians From Tuscany Excel the World In Their Production—The Demand For These Casts That Comes From Our Schools.

While it is not difficult to secure good American workmen for carrying out schemes of interior decorations, it is impossible yet to get native born men capable of modeling statuettes and busts such as are sold on the street corners and in many of the art shops. All the workmen employed in factories that produce these are Italians, chiefly from Tuscany. This is equally true of those who follow this trade in Germany and France. The Tuscans appear to have a natural ability for that sort of work that has given them the monopoly of it.

The great majority of these busts and statuettes are copied directly from the originals wherever they happen to be, and then the molds are made from that copy and sent to all parts of the world, the statues being cast in the place where they are to be sold. In the larger shops in New York city, however, a certain amount of original work is done in order to keep pace with the popular demand for representations of the hero of the hour. A great many of our most distinguished poets, authors and statesmen whose busts are exposed for sale on the street corners never sat for these portraits. Some workman modeled the head after a photograph and occasionally has produced such good work that it is almost a pity the sculptor's name should remain unknown.

The chief purchasers of these casts from the larger makers are the high schools all over the country. They demand, of course, not only classical subjects and copies of ancient bas-reliefs and architectural details, but also busts of famous men and women from every period of the world's history. Such a wide range of subjects is covered by this demand that seven and eight thousand titles are included in some of the catalogues issued. The factories where these figures are turned out exhibit in their showrooms an assortment and confusion of time, place and nature bewildering to look at.

The process of casting these statuettes is a comparatively simple one when the mold is once completed. The material used, plaster of paris, is cheap, and a very excellent quality is produced in this country. When the statuette comes out, it is pure white and covered with ridges made by the different sections of the mold. These ridges are carefully removed, and then the cast is placed in an oven heated at about 180 degrees. After it has been baked for a certin length of time it is plunged into a solution of stearic acid and kept there until thoroughly saturated. Then, when it has dried, the yellow color is gained by applying to the surface a solution of beeswax, turpentine and coloring matter. This color will not wash off, and, of course, any shade can be produced at will.

"The demand for nude statues in the art schools is growing less every year," said one of the largest makers of these casts. "That is because people are realizing more and more that artists must draw from the human figure itself if they wish to understand the human form. We get more orders now for draped figures in the art schools and for busts in the high schools. Until very recently the busts of most of the celebrated Americans which we sell had been made in Italy from photographs sent over from this country, and many mistakes occurred in matters of detail, like the cut of the coats and collars. We are trying to do these now in a more modern and characteristic way and occasionally have been furnished with photographs by their families."

The statuettes which are carried about the streets wrapped in harmonious yellow tissue paper or are displayed on the sidewalks or on the steps of unoccupied houses are made by quite a different set of manufacturers. The larger dealers do not sell to these street peddlers at all. The peddlers have their own little workrooms, which furnish them with their stock at a much lower rate than the regular dealers charge. No originals are made in these ateliers, and most of the molds are gained by taking them from a cast bought from some other firm. The stearic acid bath is left out of the process, and consequently the color of these cheaper works washes off.

The peddlers of these statuettes stand in about the same relation to sculptors and sculpture that the hand organ players do to music and musicians. They reflect fairly accurately the popular taste, and, according to their testimony, it is the Tanagra figurines that in the long run sell the best of all their stock. From time to time there is a market for the bust of some particular man, and those sales are always temporary. Grotesque figures are always in demand and copies of the various models of Venus with which the public are familiar. Rows of Cupids and of monks' heads, winged Victories and busts of Wagner come and go as popular favorites, but the Tanagra figurines have a steady sale that insures their presence in the stock of nearly every street peddler.—New York Post.

Convincing.

The methods employed by ex-Governor Throckmorton of Texas to make clear the claims of his clients were perhaps unlike those of any other lawyer, but they often carried conviction with them.

At one time he was defending a man who was on trial for murder in Gainesville, Tex. He desired to make it plain to the jury that the man whom his client had killed, although in his shirt sleeves and without a pistol pocket, might have been well armed.

"Can you see any signs of arms about me?" demanded the general, taking off his coat and standing before the jurors.

They shook their heads.

"Watch me!" he said dramatically, and with that he proceeded to draw a pistol from under each arm, one from each boot leg and from the back of his neck a bowie knife of most sinister aspect.—Youth's Companion.

Hearing a Fly Walk.

As the fly glides rapidly over a smooth surface every step presses out a supply of gum strong enough to give him a sure footing and to sustain him in safety if he halts. So strong is the cement that that upon one of his six feet is quite sufficient to sustain the weight of his whole body. But if he stands still the gum may dry up and harden quickly and so securely fasten the traveler's foot as to make a sudden step snap the leg itself.

If you wish to hear a fly walk, you can do it without the aid of the nugaphone. Having made friends with the fly, spread a silk handkerchief over your ear and induce the insect to crawl across the handkerchief. As he approaches your ear you will distinctly hear a harsh, rasping sound, made by the contact of the insect's feet with the filaments of silk.

GEN. J. E. PITTMAN

Died at the Russell House

DETROIT

At 4 o'clock Monday Afternoon.

Gen. James E. Pittman, ex-superintendent of police, died suddenly shortly after four o'clock yesterday afternoon at his room in the Russell house. He had been in poor health for some time, suffering from an aneurism of the aorta, but was able to go for a drive in the morning and partook of his luncheon in the hotel dining-room. About 4 o'clock, his physician, Dr. Morse Stewart, Sr., called on him to have a consultation with Dr. T. A. McGraw. When he entered the room Gen Pittman rose, and while exchanging a few words of greeting fell into the doctor's arms and passed away without a struggle. There could have been no pain, for the expression of his face in death is peaceful and as of one asleep.—Detroit Free Press. Mr. Pittman was a brother of Mrs. A. J. Corey, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. E. A. Tribou, of Detroit, and was well known to all the people here, having for several years spent his summers in Tecumseh. His death will be deeply mourned by all who knew him here.

LADY MACCABEES

Entertained Eighty-two Members of the

ADRIAN LODGE

Last Evening at a Banquet and Four Candidates were Initiated.

The 3:15 Detroit Southern train yesterday afternoon brought eighty two Lady Maccabes from Adrian. They were entertained by the Tecumseh lodge to a banquet in the Maccabee hall at five o'clock and immediately after proceeded to the K. of P. headquarters and initiated four new candidates.

The Tecumseh ladies were delighted with their Adrian friends and were only sorry that the special train left at eleven o'clock compelling them to return home. The evening was a delightful one the Tecumseh ladies only wishing that they may again soon be able to entertain the Adrian lodge.

During the work very nice talks were made by Mrs. T. A. James, Dr. Green, Mrs. P. H. O'Neal, Mrs. Fred Snow, Mrs. Robert French, Mrs. Emma French Mrs. Joslyn and Mrs. McCartney, of Adrian, and Rev. Louisa Haight. Mrs. S. W. Anderson, Mrs. Guy Belding and Mrs. J. J. Orr, of this place.

Garlinghouse.

Died at her home in Tecumseh, Mich., Mrs. John B. Garlinghouse, aged 74 years and nine months.

Mary J. Benedict was born in Warwick, Orange county, N. Y., Feb. 11, 1827, She was the only daughter in a family of nine children. Four brothers survive her, John W. Benedict, of Tecumseh, Mich.; James E., of Los Angeles, Cal.; Jacob M., of Lyons, and William H., of Port Austin, Mich.

Dec. 10, 1850, she was united in marriage with John B. Garlinghouse, who died Dec. 1, 1892, their married life covering a period of forty-two years, nearly all spent in Tecumseh and vicinity. The earlier years were filled with the trials and struggles incident to pioneer life, all bravely met and many a neighbor has been helped over a hard place in life by their cheery words and good example as well as by substantial help. Three children were born to them, Gurdon B. and Benson J., of Tecumseh, and Burton A., of Jackson, Mich., who now even in their strong manhood will miss the earnest words of counsel and tender solicitude for their welfare.

Since the death of her husband, these sons have been unceasing in their efforts to make life bright and pleasant for "mother." But the time has come when loving hearts and willing hands could do no more and on the morning of Nov. 11, 1901, she "fell asleep" surrounded by her loved and loving ones.

In early life she became a christian and united with the Baptist church and on coming to Michigan became a member of the little struggling church in Tecumseh and for fifty years has been closely identified with its work and worship. "We shall meet but we shall miss her." Of her it may truly be said that not only her children but all who knew her "rise up and call her blessed." The funeral will be held from her late residence on Pearl street Wednesday, Nov. 13, at 2 o'clock.

GYMNASTIC WORK

A Comparatively new Department in the Eau Clair, Wis., Schools presided over by

GUY M. JOHNSON

Who was last Summer a Ball Player in Tecumseh.

Eau Clair, Wis.—During the last five years, the public schools of Eau Claire, under the supervision of Otis C. Gross have improved in a great many respects. Some of the things which are being fosterd are manual training and domestic science, which is not compulsory, and physical culture work which is being carried on in each building. The last is taught in a natural way rather than by forced methods of callisthenics and red tape exercises, which children learn to hate. Under such conditions, the good is not acquired, which comes from natural methods. Combine play with work and good results may always be obtained, or make work become as play and it is enjoyment to all, young as well as old.

Gymnastic work, as it has been fostered in the Eau Claire schools during the last three years, now commences to show results and it is safe to say that few school systems in the country are paying as much attention to this particular line of development.

There are ten wards in Eau Claire, and each ward has one and some, two buildings, all of which have been built in the last ten years. Each of these ward buildings has been fitted out with apparatus, such as traveling rings, climbing poles, punching bags, standards and sliding boards, This apparatus is put up in the halls, except in a few cases where it has been put into the rooms; in other words, every bit of space in the buildings is utilized. It would only be natural to have the question asked, "How does this affect the order in the halls? the general atmosphere of the building as to order?" which, can be answered by saying that those things are used as incentives to order, and in the teaching of system and observance of the rights of others, which is the first law of good citizenship.

The Bartlett school in the Third ward, under the supervisian of Principal Guy McKevitt Johnson, has taken the lead in this Physical Culture work. Mr. Johnson, having been a successful athlete while in college and playing professional baseball for several years, was particularly adapted to make his work successful. He lays claim to having the best equipped and most useful gymnasium in any ward school in the United States.

A ward school gymnasium is rather an unusual thing. Mr. Johnson came to Eau Claire three years ago, having been connected with the Stevens Point schools a year, where he made a reputation for himself by training the High school in athletics, as well as by doing successful school work.

The gymnasium of the Bartlett school is in the attic, a large room pretty well cut up with supports to the rooof, but a space 70x24 in the middle of the room has been very useful. The attic has never been ceiled, and that was the first thing necessary to be done.

Mayor William Rowe, who was then a member of the school board, volunteered to order the lumber, which the boys of the school, who had manual training work, put into place with a very little help from carpenters. The room was naturally divided so that the apparatus could be put into nooks and corners. Two sets of shower baths, at an expense of $250 were put in. The apparatus comprises traveling rings, parallel bars, climbing poles and ropes, punching bag, turning pole, vaulting bar and swinging trapeze.

The total expense of equipping the gymnasium has been about $800, which was raised by subscription and entertainments given by the children. There is a debt of $80 still to be paid. The boys will give the first week in May an evening's entertainment with two plays "Little Men" snd "Little Women."

The Bartlett school gymnasium has been in use for nearly three years, and during that time the regular class work has been given to about 50 per cent of its pupils. The work not being compulsory, it was necessary to make it fascinating enough to make it an object to go to the gymnasium. So games were instituted, such as basketball, battleball jump the rope, pull in and pull out, which in themselves are instructive and tend to the development of all the faculties.

Professor Johnson has taken charge of this class work; the last two years has had the help of Leland Hurd, a youngster, who is a fine specimen of physical development. Hurd has had the advantage of the three years' training and can carry on the class work with as much diligence and ease as some with much older heads.

For the last three years, the children in the public school, under the supervision of Superintendent Gross and the principals and teachers of the ward schools have given public entertainments. The money from these entertainments has been used for the purchase of supplies and apparatus for the different buildings, which have all been placed and are now in use.

Star Course

The second entertainment of the Star Course was given by the Oeschlagel Concert Co. last evening. Owing to the inclemency of the weather the attendance was not as large as it would otherwise have been, but there was nothing lacking in the concert. Mr. Oeschlagel proved himself a wonderful violinist, he is without question one of the great masters of the violin. Miss Johnson, soprano and pianoist, was very good, and Mrs. Lula Tyler Gates is a reader of unusual ability. Altogether the concert was very pleasing.

A LONG FELT WANT

It Is Supplied In This Vicinity at Last.

It is hard to always be pleasant.

Good-natured people are often irritable.

If you knew the reason you would not be surprised.

Ever have Itching Pilds?

Not sick enough to go to bed or not well enough to be content.

Nothing will annoy you so.

The constant itching sensation.

Hard to bear, harder to get relief.

Keeps you awake nights.

Spoils your temper, nearly drives you crazy.

Isn't relief and cure a long felt want?

It is to be had for everyone in Doan's Ointment.

Doan's Ointment never fails to cure itching piles, eczema or any itching of the skin.

Here is proof of it at the testimony of an Ann Arbor citizen:

Mr. C C Church, of 520 South 7th street, Ann Arbor, now retired from the active duties of life, says: "I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Ointment. To anyone requiring a healing and soothing preparation it will prove invaluable. I suffered for years from itching hemmorhoids and though I tried everything I could hear of, used remedies prescribed by scores of friends I was unable to obtain permanent relief until my attention was called to Doan's Ointment. I was somewhat surprised after the second application to notice what a diff rent effect it had from anything I had hitherto used. Encouraged I used it strictly according to directions and in a surprisingly short length of time when you take into ac [illegible] liver and [illegible] strong and active. Bur[illegible] Blood [illegible] it.

Some people, like tea, must get into hot water before their good qualities and strength are drawn out.

"Little Colds" neglected, thousand of lives sacrificed every year. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup cures little colds, cures big colds too, down to the very verge of consumption.

The Appian Way.

The famous Appian way, mentioned by almost every Roman writer, connected the Eternal City with all parts of south Italy. For many miles from Rome the space on each side was filled with sepulchers, many of them of persons distinguished in history. To have a sepulcher on the Appian way was equivalent to being buried in Greenwood, in New York, or Pere la Chaise, in Paris.

A Peculiar Word.

The word "habit" is one of the most peculiar in our language. If you take off the first letter, you still have "a bit." If you remove the second, the word "bit" is still on hand. Decapitate that by removing the "b" and it is still a word. Take off the "i," and you find the old "habit" not "t" totally destroyed.

Great Luck of an Editor

"For two years all efforts to cure Eczema in the palms of my hands failed." writes Editor H. N. Lester, of Syracuse, Kan., "then I was wholly cured by Bucklen's Arnica Salve." It's the world's best for Eruptions, Sores and all skin diseases. Only 25c at C. A. Wright's.

When "Pluck" Was Slang.

The word "pluck" affords another instance of the way in which slang words in the course of time become adopted into current English. We now meet with "pluck" and "plucky" as the recognized equivalents of "courage" and "courageous." An entry in Sir Walter Scott's "Journal" shows that in 1827 the word had not yet lost its low character. He says (volume 2, page 80), "Want of that article blackguardly called pluck." Its origin is obvious. From early times the heart has been popularly regarded as the seat of courage. Now, when a butcher lays open a carcass he divides the great vessels of the heart, cuts through the windpipe and then plucks out together the united heart and lungs—lights, he calls them—and he terms the united mass "the pluck."—Notes and Queries.

Italian Brigandage In 1848.

One summer evening in the crowded theater an impatient house demanded the drawing of the curtain preliminary to the first act. When at last it was upraised, Il Passatore and his armed band occupied the stage, with muskets aimed at the affrighted audience. The chief stated that he should levy a tax per head, which he then and there collected. The gang made off with their booty unmolested. — Lady Presturch's "Essays."

Gold.

The specific gravity of gold is 19.50—that is, it weighs nineteen and a half times as much as its own bulk of water. The ductility and malleability of this metal are equaled by no other. By ductility is meant the property of allowing itself to be drawn out into a wire and by malleability its property of flattening without splitting under the hammer.

Make Some One Happy.

Charles Kingsley thus counseled a friend: "Make it a rule and pray to God to help you to keep it never, if possible, to lie down at night without being able to say, 'I have made one human being at least a little wiser, a little happier or a little better this day.' You will find it easier than you think and pleasanter."

Bowlegged Sailors.

Sailors are a bowlegged class. An old salt always walks as if he were on the deck of a ship, and he never takes great strides like a landsman. He is used to having to walk great distances, in his imagination, on the quarter deck, and he can't get rid of the habit of making the most of his promenade.

The Sponge.

The sponge reproduces its kind mainly by eggs. In each animal are contained both the male and the female elements, and it throws out the ova to be hatched in the water. At first the young are free swimming, and afterward they attach themselves to convenient spots and grow.

A thousand things by it are done far better than most things do one. We refer to Rocky Mountain Tea made by Madison Medicine Co. 35c. J. J. Orr.

The River Jordan.

The Jordan is the "Descender." During its course it falls over 1,200 feet. At no point is it navigable even by a small craft to any considerable distance and presents the unique spectacle of a river which has never been navigated flowing into a sea which contains not one living creature.

THE GENTIAN.

As one late wakened to the call of love,
  Whose eager youth ran by nor yielded toll,
  Withheld aloof beneath a cold control,
Disdaining heart and throning mind above;

Yet in midlife, at floodtide of success,
  Lays power and honors down before her feet,
  Compelled to mighty love by love as meet,
Unselfed, unswerving, final, measureless;

So wakes the gentian with November near
  Nor answers aught to sweet June's fervid breath,
  But as late love, with passion unto death,
Outlives the summer and the flaming year.

—Grace Richardson in Atlantic.

DICK HUYL

The Story of an Apache Boy.

The writer owes to Dick Huyl a debt not exactly of gratitude, as the story will demonstrate, which she, by writing his biography, seeks to discharge. Dick Huyl's history will never be written by me nor by any one else who knew him to adorn a Sunday school library. He was not that kind of boy. Dick was an Apache Indian, with all the characteristics of total depravity that the word Apache conveys or suggests. We were children together, Dick and I. We lived, fought and played together for two years in the same army post. On one memorable occasion Dick, instigated by the devil—for I firmly believe in the devil, if only for Apaches dropped down the neck of my frock coat a live toad. It was the cause of my first fit of hysterics, and I determined if I ever grew old enough I would tell the whole world how bad a young Apache could be.

In 1872, if I remember rightly, General Crook had succeeded, after years of bloody war and the loss of hundreds of good men, in subduing most of the bands composing the Apache nation of New Mexico and Arizona. They had dwelt in the strongholds of mountain and desert, from which they frequently emerged to rob and murder all miners or emigrants that they could ambush, leaving nothing for the human mind to conceive of in the way of cruelty whenever a white man fell into their power.

At the reservation, although they were well fed and quite decently treated, it was necessary to watch them constantly, and large bodies of troops were detailed for that purpose. Nevertheless, scarcely a week passed but a small squad of Apaches, usually led by some attractive squaw, would slip quietly past the guards and escape through the darkness into their beloved cactus plains and mountain barrens. Roll call nearly every morning developed these absentees, and next day would come news of murder, rapine and horrors generally. A favorite Apache mode of disposing of the unsuspecting freighter, miner or emigrant whose camp they had succeeded in raiding was to tie the victim by the four limbs to stakes and then to build a fire on that portion of his body designated in the old fashioned almanacs as "virgo."

There seemed to be something particularly fascinating to the Apache temperament in this form of torture. Death being long in coming, it gave the squaws and papooses plenty of chance to invent small torments on the side, as it were. The women and children emigrants— But enough. Suffice it to say that the absolute hatred entertained by these Indians for the whites was fully reciprocated, especially by the soldiers. It was no easy matter to track and successfully follow the runaways through the cactus and mesquite thickets, over the barren deserts and desolate mountains that make up the topography of Arizona. But in that parched country water is only to be found at certain springs and water holes, between which days of travel often intervene, but which are equally well known to soldiers and to Indians.

So when the morning report showed to General Crook that so many warriors, squaws and papooses were missing the grim old warrior would make no sign of pursuit, but on the night following or perhaps the next one a squadron of mounted men would file silently out of the reservation bearing orders to move as rapidly as possible to the water hole of Palo Pinto or to Agua Grande spring or to some other place where the presence of the precious fluid favored a camping place for the renegades. The troops were always positively instructed to bring back no prisoners, all matters of detail being left to the officers in command. One June morning there were reported missing 8 Indians and 11 squaws and papooses, including Wahnemo, than whom a more depraved and cruel Indian never existed, even in Arizona.

Two nights afterward a squad of the Twenty-third infantry, Crook's own regiment, under Lieutenant Huyl, a splendid young fellow, who has since left the service, was sent out on a scout with the usual orders. No trace of the renegades was found, but a burned ranch and stage station and a cremated cowboy gave sufficient evidence of Indians at large. The next night, or rather just at dawn, after a long and fatiguing march, the scouts reached a natural rock basin at the foot of one of the steepest and most inaccessible knobs to be found in desolate Arizona. This basin had often collected a supply of acrid water, which, however, was drinkable enough in that country. A thin vapor of smoke from a nearly spent fire convinced the troopers that their night's march had not been in vain, and on creeping up as close as possible the hostiles were outlined against the rocks fast asleep.

The little squadron silently deployed out so as to avoid missing a single shot and at the word of command fired, killing nearly every one of the Indians. The others jumped up, only to be cut down by the reserve fire. The only two unhurt were Wahnemo and his 4-year-old papoose. Grasping the child, he sprang for the mountain side, scaling the rocks like a chamois amid a shower of bullets, soon distancing his pursuers and getting out of range of their rifles. Halting on a shelf of rock, he set the child down and proceeded to indulge in every exhibition of contempt and derision that his imagination could invent to aggravate the discomfited troopers, who gnashed their several sets of teeth in rage at the insults of the old heathen. They were relieved at last by the arrival of Lieutenant Huyl, who bore in his hand a new target rifle, received only the day before the scouts started.

This wonderful gun was guaranteed to carry—I forget—1,100 yards with accuracy, and the lieutenant, who was one of the best fellows in the world in garrison, but quite cold hearted and bloodthirsty where Apaches were concerned, announced that while he was doubtful of his gun carrying near the Indian, yet he was going to try. The Apache, feeling secure against their carbines, continued his taunts until Huyl, taking deliberate aim, with sights raised for 1,500 yards, fired. His aim was true and the gun all that it was boasted. The old savage plunged face forward over the ledge and crashed down the rocky mountain side at the very feet of his slayer.

The attention of the soldiers was now directed to the papoose, the subject of this sketch. That interesting infant still calmly occupied the ledge and was evidently turning the situation over in his mind. The troopers, with Lieutenant Huyl at their head, slowly and painfully clambered up the rocks and finally approached the orphan, who, instead of squalling as a civilized Christian child would have done, commenced throwing stones at his pursuers, hitting Lieutenant Huyl squarely on the nose with a half pound rock and drawing blood copiously. He followed this success by other good throws, causing as nearly a panic as possible. At last, by flanking him, our Apache was knocked down by a blow from a saber and stunned. His capture was now easy, but the lieutenant's orders were to return no prisoners.

"What shall we do with the little devil?" asked one of the men. "Shoot him or throw him over the cliff after his father?" The "little devil" had regained consciousness by this time and deliberately set his teeth into the calf of the soldier's leg. Lieutenant Huyl wiped his bloody nose and replied: "A baby who fights this way ought not to be killed in cold blood. By George, I'll take him back to San Carlos if it costs me my commission!"

A gag was put into the young one's mouth to prevent any more biting, and, with a soldier holding each hand, he was landed on the plain below. There he was placed on horseback, a lariat tied to one foot, passed under the horse and tied to the other, and thus the troopers returned to the reservation.

Lieutenant Huyl was a great favorite with General Crook, but he had disobeyed orders and confidently expected to be put under arrest. But the general had already heard something of the stone throwing affair and had enjoyed a hearty laugh over Huyl's broken nose. When the lieutenant in making his report reached the point where Wahnemo was killed, the general interrupted him with, "By the way, I think you had better not let me know officially any more of this scout than you have already told." Then glancing at the swollen nose he burst into a roar of laughter, in which all the other officers joined.

The young Indian was confined in the armory until his first fright was overcome. The soldiers of Company A named him Dick Huyl and, fitting him out with a uniform fashioned from the lieutenant's old clothes, regularly adopted him into the service.

In less than a month the small recruit learned to express himself tolerably in English and in a very short time had accumulated all the accomplishments of tobacco chewing and profanity possessed by the soldiers. He also picked up a wonderful knowledge of bugle calls and evolutions, always turning out at roll calls and taking his place at the extreme left of the company when in line.

When I first knew him, he had been under the refining influences of the United States service two years. If that Indian had improved in that time, I am very glad I did not know him before. He was not beautiful according to classic standards.

The Apaches flatten the heads of their babies between boards, and this, as much as anything else, served to render Dick unattractive to us children. Then he had such a predilection for carrying snakes in his pocket! The soldiers spoiled him, of course, and upheld him in every villainy he chose to perpetrate. When he shot the mules in an ambulance filled with women and children, causing a runaway and a smash up, one soldier thrashed him with a barrel stave and a dozen more gave him 5 cent pieces to comfort him. They alternately pounded and petted, but it was all one to him. He seldom laughed and never cried. He was an Apache.

I said he never cried. I will note an exception. Every Saturday afternoon the men took him out behind the quarters and gave him a bath. This process was very simple. They stripped off his clothing and turned the hose on him. On these occasions the shrieks of the little savage could be heard all over the post.

I have not seen Dick since I was 9 years old, but I like to think that he grew up and regularly enlisted in the old regiment and is now an honor to the service.—New York Tribune.

The Discovery of Electricity.

Children rub together bits of amber picked up from the ground and find that when rubbed these small pieces of waxlike substance are excited to attract particles of light substances, like straws and feathers. Could anything be more elementary or seemingly further removed from the mighty mechanical developments of the electrical powers which now surround us? Yet that simple frictional play was the starting point of all we now possess electrically. It lay by as a child's sport for ages—lay by for Sir Isaac Newton himself to look at, removed only to a box with a glass lid containing paper figures, which would move when the glass surface was excited by friction. A little later, and the flat glass surface became a tube, a globe, a globe revolving on a frame, a machine, an electrical battery, and so steadily onward until, each step marked by a gentle advancement upon advancement, lightning and thunder themselves were the inventions of man as well as of nature.

The Moors and Their Morals.

In appearance the Moors are a very fine race. For many generations their mothers have been chosen for their beauty. An active life in the saddle has developed them physically and a splendid appearance is the result. In addition, they have manners of unequaled suavity and polish, the result of early years spent in the harem. They are so habituated to think well of themselves as followers of the true prophet that an uneasy conscience never troubles them.

A man may be an utter scoundrel, cruel and licentious, and yet be regarded as a saint if he is descended from the prophet and conforms to the outward ceremonial of Islam. His brow is frank and unclouded, his smile is even benevolent, and yet it would be impossible to describe the details of his life. Such are the Moors—an interesting tableau vivant of many a chapter in the book of Judges, or Samuel or the Kings.—African Review.

Riding the Wooden Horse.

Torture on a grand scale went out with Felton, the assassin of Buckingham, but torture on a small scale continued to be practiced on military offenders down to the eighteenth century. The form most frequently resorted to was that known as the wooden horse, to ride which was the punishment accorded for petty thefts, insubordination and so on. The wooden horse was made of planks nailed together so as to form a sharp ridge or angle about eight or nine feet long. This ridge represented the back of the horse and was supported by four posts or legs about five feet high placed on a stand made movable by truckles. To complete the resemblance to the noblest animal in creation a head and tail were added.

When a soldier was sentenced, either by court martial or by his commanding officer, to ride the horse, he was placed on the brute's back, with his hands tied behind him, and frequently enough, in order to increase the pain, muskets were fastened to his legs to weigh them down or, as was jocularly said, to prevent the fiery, untamed, barebacked steed from kicking him off.—London Graphic.

The Camphor Eater.

It is surprising what a number of camphor eaters there are among the well to do classes. The idea seems to prevail that this gum, taken in small and regular doses, gives a peculiarly clear creaminess of complexion, and scores of young women buy it for this purpose. The habit is, moreover, very difficult to cast off, for camphor produces a mild form of exhilaration and stupefaction, and in many instances where very large doses have been swallowed the habit has become a sort of slavery.

These camphor eaters all have a dreamy, dazed and very listless air, and in most of them there is an ever present longing to sleep or at least to rest. Extreme weakness generally follows the taking of regular doses, and I have seen cases where it has been almost difficult to tell the effects from those of alcohol. As to the complexion, if a ghastly pallor be an improvement camphor certainly produces it.—Clinic.

Ironmaking.

The first mention of ironmaking in Pennsylvania goes back to 1692. It is contained in a metrical composition entitled "A Short Description of Pennsylvania," by Richard Frame, which was printed and sold by William Bradford in Philadelphia in 1692. Frame says that at a certain place about some forty pound" of iron had then been made.

A Share In a Jewel.

There is a story told of a French servant who was shown a priceless jewel by a great duke.

"Thank you, my lord duke," said the man of science, "for allowing me to share with you the possession of so great a treasure."

"In what way?" said the duke.

"Why, your grace can do no more than look at it, and you have allowed me to do the same." — All the Year Round.

Living Like a Savage.

Civilized people will be shocked at the advice of an English physician to a wealthy patient to live like a savage to be cured. Savages, it may be recalled, do not belong to clubs, have no stock exchanges, know nothing of trust and trade combinations, run no political campaigns and so reserve some vitality and nerve force for purely living purposes.—Baltimore American.

Impertinent.

It is said that Sarah, duchess of Marlborough, one day remarked to her grandson, Jack Spencer: "Jack, you must marry, and I will give you a list of the ladies you may propose to."

"Very well, grannie," he said, and he proposed to the first on the list. When he came back with his wife from their wedding tour, they went to pay their respects to the old lady.

"Well, now," she said, "I am the root, and you are only the branches, and therefore you must always pay me a great deal of deference."

"That is all very well," said Jack impertinently, "but I think the branches would flourish a great deal better if the root was under ground."

Why Water Won't Fry.

Why cannot we fry in water? Because water can only be heated to the boiling point, 212 degrees, and any additional heat does not increase its temperature. Two hundred and twelve degrees of heat will not brown the surface of anything. Fat, on the contrary, can be made much hotter, the temperature depending on the kind. There is a lesson here for the economical housewife. Don't stuff the stove with fuel when the vegetables, meat, etc., are already boiling. They cook no faster because of the increase of heat.

Brain-Food Nonsense

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain another for muscles and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or to prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. McGarry Contradicts Himself.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 14.—Thomas F. McGarry was under cross-examination until late yesterday afternoon in the trial of City Attorney Salsbury. The main feature was the effort of the prosecution to compare his grand jury testimony and his direct examination.

McGarry was on the stand all through the morning session. He denied, in addition to his other contradictions, that Garman and Cameron, that he had ever drawn up any contract for the securing of bids for the water supply, and also denied having drafted the report on the pure water supply which was brought in by the council's committee appointed to look after the matter. When these statements had been made, Mr. Hyde read to the jury McGarry's statement made in the grand jury investigation, to the effect that he had drawn up proposals to be submitted to the board of public works, the common council and the pure water commission. McGarry was somewhat taken back, but said that he might have been mixed while talking to the grand jury. He had meant another paper when testifying on this point.

McGarry came near losing his temper several times and had to be reminded by Sen. Nichols that he was there as a witness and not as an attorney.

Thompson Avoids Jail.

Port Huron, Mich., Nov. 14.—In all probability Charles D. Thompson, the defaulting finance-keeper of the supreme tent, K. O. T. M., will not be prosecuted. The delay in making the arrest and developments and incidents which have occurred within the past 48 hours, all point to a settlement of the affair. It has been the policy of the surety companies to secure all the money they can from a defaulter, and prosecuted after; but in view of the strong prestige which Thompson has and the influence which is being brought to bear, it is not probable that his friends or attorney will turn over any money without the assurance and written agreement that no subsequent prosecution will follow.

Thompson has sufficient friends to raise $30,000, and with his business ability there seems to be every reason to believe he can make up the balance. At any rate, $30,000 is looked upon by his friends as better to the surety company than his arrest and conviction.

Investigation shows that Thompson stole the bulk of the money last December, when he took $50,000 in one lump. The balance was taken in small amounts, some as late as September.

Michigan Inventors.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Henry F. Brehman, Battle Creek, paper folding machine; Joseph J.-G. Crosby, Northville, water closet tank; Eugene C. Fontaine, Detroit, needle-making machine; Wm. H. Gates, Detroit, brush machine; Andrew J. Goodrich, Grand Ledge, drinking fountain for stock or poultry; Reynold J. Kirkland, Grand Rapids, composition of matter for copying; Herbert F. Prescott, Detroit, device for storing and administering serums; Donald G. Ross, Beaverton, forming railway ties; George V. Russell, Kalamazoo, circular or elliptical knockdown paper box; Wm. Shakespeare, Jr., Kalamazoo, fishing reel; Richard Watson and W. T. McGraw, Detroit, cash register.

Civil Service for Wardenship.

Saginaw, Mich., Nov. 14.—In an interview Gov. Bliss, while expressing quasi-approval of Warden Fuller's idea that prison officials should be under civil service rules, suggested that the plan would be especially good—for those in, and suggested that the bestowal of appointments to partisans is proper, if care be taken to secure capable men. His own plan, he said, is to fill the offices with the best men available, and if such happened to be his friends, so much the better. In regard to the Jackson wardenship, Gov. Bliss is in receipt of an avalanche of wire and mail service, but says he has not canvassed the matter much.

Burchfield Murder Case On.

Charlotte, Mich., Nov. 14.—A jury was secured in the Burchfield murder case yesterday. In his opening, Prosecuting Attorney Dann stated that the prosecution would show that Burchfield threw the bottle that inflicted the wound, and that the injury was the result of Green's death. John Hickey, proprietor of the saloon, at whom Burchfield aimed the bottle, was the first witness called, but gave no evidence that will be of any value to the defense. Ed Bromley, a bartender in the employ of Hickey, was next called, and was still on the stand when an adjournment was taken.

Owosso Gets Sugar Factory.

Owosso, Mich., Nov. 14.—At an enthusiastic meeting held in the opera house, addressed by Wellington R. Burt of Saginaw and several others, it was decided to build a beet sugar factory here, to be opened for business in September, 1902. The city may donate the land. About $100,000 will be raised here, the other $400,000 coming from Chicago.

Thousand Wyoming Lambs.

Bay City, Mich., Nov. 14.—Mundy & Fifield, who own a prairie farm of many hundred acres between this city and Saginaw, have imported 1,000 lambs from Wyoming, and will experiment on a large scale on raising them for the market. The thousand lambs were brought in cars all the way from Wyoming without the loss of a single one.

A Hiving of Bees.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 13.—Arbor hive, Ladies of the Maccabees, celebrated its tenth anniversary last night with a big banquet. Among the speakers of the evening were Dr. Emma D. Cook of Detroit, great medical examiner of the order, and Mrs. Robert A. Bailey of Grand Rapids, great lieutenant commander.

On Deck Again.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 13.—Former Warden H. F. Hatch of the Jackson prison, who is now shirt contractor at the Ionia prison, has stated his desire to succeed the late Warden Chamberlain, and his friends are working in his interests.

Astounding Discovery

From Coopersville, Mich., comes word of a wonderful discovery of a pleasant tasting liquid that when used before retiring by any one troubled with a bad cough always insures a good night's rest. "It will soon cure the cough too." writes Mrs. S. Himelburger, "for three generations of our family have used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and never found its equal for Coughs and Colds." It's an unrivaled life saver when used for desperate lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00 at C A. Wright's. Trial bottles free.

First Cavalry Charges Into 400 Insurgents at Ruan.

INTRENCHED IN RIFLE PIT

Major West Is Searching For Two Boat Loads of Weapons—No Casualties Reported on the American Side.

Manila, Nov. 14.—Capt. Hartman's troop of the First cavalry early Wednesday morning surprised 400 insurgents at Ruan, in Batangas province, southwestern Luzon. Half the insurgents were armed with rifles. They were prepared for an attack and were in rifle pits. The cavalry attacked the insurgents on the flank, killing 16 of them, wounding five and capturing nine rifles. The insurgents broke and ran, the cavalry pursuing them. Two large boat loads of arms are reported to have been landed on the southern part of the Belangas peninsula and taken to Durangan. Major West, stationed in that locality, is endeavoring to find these arms.

WIFE HELPED PLAN TO DEFRAUD

So Says N. C. Rathbun, Now a Murder Suspect.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 13.—A thorough investigation is being made into the details of the alleged attempt of Newell C. Rathbun to defraud the Metropolitan Insurance Co.

Rathbun admits that he proposed to secure the body of a dead man, dress it in his own clothes, place it in a Jeffersonville, Ind., hotel and then burn the hotel in the belief that the body would be identified as his, and the insurance money paid.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 14.—New features in the case of Newell C. Rathbun, held here on a charge of desertion from the United States army and suspected of the murder of Charles Goodman, who was found dead in bed Thursday in Jeffersonville hotel, were Rathbun's statement to the police that his wife at Little Rock had known of his plan to defraud the insurance company, though not of the murder feature of it; the decision to have the corpse of the supposed Goodman returned to Jeffersonville for an autopsy and identification; the announcement from Washington that the warden had decided to send Rathbun to Jeffersonville and turn him over to Indiana authorities; and the refusal of local authorities to send Rathbun to Little Rock to testify at the coroner's inquest over the corpse that was shipped there. They say Rathbun will go nowhere except to Jeffersonville, where he is to be tried on the charge of murdering, by poison, Charles Goodman. A telegram was sent to Little Rock asking that the corpse be returned to Jeffersonville.

A telegram has been received from chief of police of Evansville, Ind., stating that Goodman was a resident of Cripple Creek, Col., where he was a brass worker.

Leavenworth Fugitives Are Being Hunted Down.

Kansas City, Nov. 14.—Three more of the 26 fugitive convicts from Fort Leavenworth prison were captured at Bazar, near Cottonwood Falls, Kan., late yesterday by penitentiary guards, after a fight in which one of the convicts was shot. The captured men are: Gilbert Mullen, white; Fred Robinson, mulatto, and Sol Southerland, Indian. Southerland was wounded, but not seriously. He was also shot while making his escape from the prison last week. None of the guards was injured. Only nine of the convicts are yet to be taken, and the whole country is on the lookout.

Michigan vs. Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, Nov. 13.—The debating committee of the University of Pennsylvania has proposed a subject for the fourth annual debate with the University of Michigan the following question:

"Resolved, That the system of compulsory voting should be adopted in the United States." The University of Michigan will have the choice of sides. The debate will be held in Philadelphia on March 7 next.

Hired to Set It.

Flint, Mich., Nov. 13.—Claude Faery, charged with being implicated in the burning of Hollenbeck's ice house at Fenton, was convicted in the circuit court yesterday afternoon. The principal witness against him was Burr Conrad, who claimed that he and J. Chapman were hired to fire the ice house by Yeager, and that Faery was the go-between. Chapman escaped

An Unhappy Honeymoon.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 13.—Herbert Hoxie, a 17-year-old Detroit lad, married Minnie E. Dickinson, aged 15, yesterday against the wishes of her father. The lad is now in jail upon the charge of perjury, having sworn the girl was 16 in order to obtain the license. He is now waiting trial.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Tuesday there was officially reported by the health department at Muskegon two cases of smallpox, the sick being Frank and Peter Robarge.

James Moore, a trusty at the reformatory at Ionia, sent in for one year from Kalamazoo, escaped over the wall early Tuesday morning and is still at large.

Thomas Clark, aged 60 years, of Thedford, accidentally drove into a washout in the road and broke his back. He was a well-known civil war veteran.

The Blues of Flint have asked Congressman Smith to procure from the war department a light rapid fire gun, with the object of organizing an artillery company.

John Churchill of Parma has lost three horses from arsenic poisoning. Tuesday John Upton, a bachelor, 70 years of age, who lives with the Churchill family, was arrested charged with administering the poison.

E. C. Crane, a well-known Detroit singer, committed suicide Monday in a New York hotel by taking carbolic acid, after having all his life led a very checkered career. Twice before he has tried to take his own life.

The Pottawattamies held general powpow in the Academy of Music at Hartford last night to revive the census of the tribe just completed preparatory to an advance payment of $100 to each member in the purchase of the Chicago lake front property. An estimate places the number of Indians at 302.

Truth About Miss Stone.

Boston, Nov. 14.—The executive officers of the American board of foreign missions concerning Miss Ellen M. Stone issued a statement today intended to be corrective of reports that have been widely published relative to the capture by brigands. This statement affirms that Miss Stone was in pursuit of her customary duties as a missionary, when she was captured. The route over which she was traveling is one that is continually used by the missionaries, and without reason for apprehending any special danger. No warning whatever was given to Miss Stone as to this particular journey, either by the Turkish or Bulgarian authorities. She had the usual escort of 18 or 20 people, and was accustomed to carry with her a Turkish teskre, or permit, to travel. One of the missionaries acquainted with the region states that the route Miss Stone took was the safest of any in that region. The statement further affirms that there is no ground whatever for criticising Miss Stone for want of precaution in making this journey.

A Thousand Men Idle.

Ashland, Wis., Nov. 14.—At the instigation of government officials, Senator William O'Neill of Washburn yesterday closed all of the logging camps on the Bad river reservation, throwing out of employment nearly a thousand men. It is presumed that fear of a smallpox outbreak is the cause for closing the camps. Senator O'Neill stated last night that he did not know how long it would be necessary to keep the men idle, as that would depend solely upon what the Washington officials decided to do after they had satisfied themselves as to the conditions.

Looking for the Murderer.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 14.—All efforts of the entire police and detective forces of this city to find a clew to the murderer or murderers of the two women whose dead bodies were found lying in ditches by the roadside in opposite directions from this city Tuesday have proved unavailing. Several suspects are under surveillance, but developments in the murders have not been sufficient to warrant the police in making arrests. While it is evident that both victims were killed about the same hour Tuesday night, it is still believed the women were slain by the same fiend.

Fight With Outlaws.

Guthrie, O. T., Nov. 14.—A pitched battle was fought Tuesday afternoon between deputy sheriffs and citizen on one side and a band of outlaws on the other near Piokee, a village of Kay county. The officers state the outlaws are some of the escaped prisoners from Leavenworth. The battle was the result of an attempt made by the outlaws, who were masked, to steal several horses in that neighborhood. Several of the combatants are reported wounded. Officers in all sections of Oklahoma have been notified and the escape of the gang seems impossible.

W. C. T. U. Advance Guard There.

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 14.—The advance guard of the national W. C. T. U. convention, which is to meet here Friday, has arrived. The party is headed by Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, national president, Portland, Me., and Miss Anna A. Gordon, vice-president, Evanston, Ill. Other officials here are Mrs. Clara Hoffman, recording secretary, Kansas City; Mrs. F. E. Beacham, assistant recording secretary, Lexington, Ky.; Miss M. A. Powderly, Portland, Me.; Mrs. Cornelia M. Dow, corresponding secretary for Maine, Portland, Me., and Mrs. Eliza B. Ingalls, St. Louis, national superintendent of the non-narcotic department of the society.

Earthquake in Utah.

Salt Lake, Utah, Nov. 14.—Special from various points in southern Utah give meager accounts of an earthquake shock shortly after 9:30 last night. The shock lasted fully 30 seconds in some places. The vibrations were northeast to southwest. So far as reported, no loss of life and comparatively little damage to property resulted. Shocks were felt at Oasis, in Millard county, and at Beaver, where some damage was caused. A slight shock was felt in this city at 9:37 p. m.

Delegates to Favor Statehood.

Muskogee, I. T., Nov. 14.—Five hundred delegates have arrived from Indian Territory towns to attend the single statehood convention here today and Friday. Politicians are on the fence, but business interests favor statehood with Oklahoma as quickly as possible.

Pedagogue Looses Clothes.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Nov. 14.—In the rush between the Normal juniors and seniors at the junior meeting yesterday afternoon, the clothing was torn from the back of one of the seniors, leaving him garbed from the waist up in the costume of the garden of Eden. When a faculty member ordered the hostilities stopped the junior girls waved the fragments of the torn garments over their heads and gave the junior yell.

Teaching Spanish.

Marquette, Mich., Nov. 14.—Instruction in Spanish has been added to the curriculum of the Marquette high school, and it is proving decidedly popular. Out of an enrollment of about a hundred, forty are being taught the language of the dons.

Mining Plant Swallowed.

Joplin, Mo., Nov. 14.—In a cave-in at Oronogo, near here, Wednesday, the entire plant of the Aurora Mining Co., one of the greatest zinc producers in the district, was swallowed up. No lives were lost. The plant comprised a hundred-ton mill, office building and engine house, all of which were engulfed, together with six gravel cars and an immense tailing pile. On entering the ground, a short time before the cave-in occurred, workmen heard the timbers cracking and signalled to be drawn up. The last man had reached the surface only a few minutes before the timbers collapsed, the earth yielded and with a crash the whole plant sank into the abyss. Further caving is feared, and work in that vicinity has been suspended. It is impossible to estimate the damage.

500 DELEGATES IN ANN ARBOR

Four Sessions Were Held Yesterday and a Mint of Business Transacted—Treasurer Gives Favorable Report.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 14.—Yesterday's sessions of the State Sunday school convention brought out the full quota of delegates, nearly 500 in number. The big auditorium is decorated with great maps and colored charts indicating the spread of the work of Sunday school organization, and the parlors and chapel below provide for the committee meetings and the display of a wide variety of supplies. The delegates are constantly on the move, and when not at the numerous sessions of the convention are hurrying to and from the university campus, which is also a center of interest.

There were four sessions yesterday, lasting from 8 a. m. to nearly 10 p. m., with an hour's intermission for dinner at the Baptist church. Mrs. Mary Foster Bryner of Chicago presided at the primary conference in the afternoon at Harris hall, when practical plans for primary work were considered, papers being read by Miss M. Ella Bennett of Ann Arbor, Mrs. Minnie Alice Wheaton of Jackson, and Mrs. M. S. Thomas of Ionia.

The main body of the convention assembled at 8 a. m. with Rev. Joseph Clark of Ohio as presiding officer, the general theme being "The demands of the new century." More thorough township work was advocated by Secretary Day. "Up-to-date financial management," by W. C. Pearce, and "Definite aims" by George C. Higbee of Marquette. Rev. W. B. Jennings led a short devotional service, after which General Secretary Day made a verbal report of the work for the past year, his written report having been mislaid somewhere about the church. Treasurer H. H. Simpson of Bad Axe reported the year's expenditures and receipts as $3,948.42, the present liabilities as $500 and the resources from unpaid pledges, $1,386.94.

At the afternoon session 12 diplomas were presented graduates from the normal course prescribed by the association. Six of these graduates came from the Ann Arbor Methodist Sunday school. Prof. W. H. Payne, head of the pedagogical department at the U. of M., spoke on "Teachers' training in the Sunday school," and W. C. Pearce told how to secure trained teachers, after which C. A. Stringer, chairman of the publication committee, reported on the work allotted to him, and Dr. Clark on the "Advance movement in Michigan."

The nominating committee presented its report during the afternoon, the convention unanimously ratifying its report as follows: President, J. E. Bolles of Detroit; vice-presidents, J. W. Mulligan of Traverse City, Judge J. H Grant of Manistee, President A. G. Slocum of Kalamazoo college, F. C. Colvin of Cassopolis, W. A. Prince of Alpena; recording secretary, Mrs. J. E. Bolles of Detroit; members of executive committee for three years, Hon. J. M. Davis of Kalamazoo, Rev. W. B. Pope of West Bay City, H. H. Simpson of Bad Axe, E. K. Mohr of Grand Rapids, Hon. H. R. Pattengill of Lansing, W. L. C. Reid of Jackson, Rev. J. V. N. Hartness of Marquette, Leonard Lawrence of Detroit; superintendent of the primary department, Miss May T. Bisbee of Benton Harbor, superintendent of the home department, William Strong of Kalamazoo, superintendent of the normal department, M. H. Reynolds of Owosso.

The evening session drew a large crowd to University hall. Mrs. Mary Foster Bryner spoke on "Child study essential to parent and teacher," and Rev. Dr Joseph Clark on "The Boy's Pa."

Shoots Her Lover.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 14.—Lizzie Vanderleest shot at Lew Reese, a well-known local saloon man, five times just before noon yesterday, but only two bullets took effect, one in the arm and the other, which may prove fatal, entered his side. The woman was formerly the wife of Louis Walters, a well-known laborer, but went wrong, and he obtained a divorce. Reese is credited with being her lover, but has of late been paying attention to other women.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

David Dawson is under arrest at Port Huron on a charge of robbing Mrs. George North.

H. L. Bruner of Bay City received a shock of 400 volts of electricity and his hair is falling out at a rate that will soon make him bald.

The rush of hunters to the counties of Chippewa, Mackinac, Schoolcraft and Alger has been a record-breaker this year. The killing so far has been light.

Gen. Lemuel Saviers of St. Louis was thrown under the wheels of a loaded wagon on his farm Wednesday. His chest was crushed and his condition is serious.

Mary Crammore, a 16-year-old daughter of Warren Crammore, who lives nine miles northwest of Albion at Rice Creek, is said to have eloped with a young man named Gilbert Armstrong.

William Ross, alias Frank Smith, has been placed under arrest at Muskegon suspected of firing the Nelson hotel barn. A blaze was discovered in the hay and Ross was seen running away from the barn.

The suit of the O'Reilly sisters against the T. & M. electric railway at Monroe, was decided by a jury which awarded the plaintiffs $1,000 damages. The suit grew out of the construction of a track in front of property owned by the Misses O'Reilly.

Big Timber Deal.

Garth, Mich., Nov. 14.—A tract of 31,000 acres of timber land in Arkansas has been purchased by Jacob Mortonson of the Garth Lumber Co. and Wausau (Wis.) capitalists. A monster sawmill, with a capacity of 60,000,000 feet per day, day run, is to be erected at Malvern, Ark. It is estimated there is sufficient timber in the tract to operate the mill for the next 30 years.

Old Churchyards.

It would appear that certainly as early as about A. D. 750 spaces of ground adjoining churches were inclosed and consecrated for burial, and by a canon of the ninth century every grave was to be esteemed sacred, to be adorned with the sign of the cross and to be preserved from trespass and violation by dogs and cattle. Many churchyards have a history far older than the churches which stand in them, being originally places appropriated to religious assemblies, divine service being performed there, until at length the church was added for greater honor and convenience.

It has been noted as a curious fact that in a large majority of cases the churchyards are on the north side of the church and on the north side of the road leading to them. There is a superstition among many old fashioned folk that the north side of the churchyard is less sacred than the rest of the consecrated ground. "To be buried there," wrote Durandus, the great fourteenth century ecclesiastic "is, in the language of the eastern countries, to be buried out of sanctuary." Hence the position was largely appropriated to the graves of suicides, unbaptized persons and excommunicates.—Notes and Queries.

Not Like Town Kitchens.

The delicious odor of a big, roomy country kitchen only whets one's appetite instead of dulling it as town kitchens do. And as to there being anything disagreeable in dining in the thinks of the old kitchen and its roar of every home in the country. Every boy with country blood in his veins thinks of the old kitchen and its roaring fire and shining pots and pans and rows of dazzling platters when he thinks of home, that and the quaint little bedroom in the L. But the parlor, with its hundred and one silent injunctions to subdued conversation and prim propriety, that is remembered but as the torture chamber of youth. It, too, may have its memories for the girls, but the kitchen holds the boy's imagination fettered in golden memories.—American Kitchen Magazine.

Want Gen. Reyes Back.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Information has reached the Colombian legation in this city to the effect that a commission composed of three Colombian officials is about to leave Bogota for Mexico City to endeavor to induce Gen. Reyes to accompany it back to the Colombian capital and take up the reins of government. Notwithstanding the fact that the former president, San Clemente, has been out of office for some time, it is true he is still the constitutional president of Colombia, and he has yet to tender his resignation from that office.

Dismiss Indian Territory Troops.

Washington, Nov. 14.—The secretary of the interior has notified the secretary of war that troops no longer are needed in Indian Territory. The troops now in that territory were sent there a month or more ago from Fort Reno on account of a disturbance. The notification is based on the recommendation of Assistant Secretary Ryan, who has made personal investigation of the conditions in the territory.

Build Railroad Next Year.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 14.—The Colonist says: The proposed railway from Dawson to the Klondike mines will be built next summer. The line will probably extend up Bonanza creek, with branches up the several gold producing creeks, the main line continuing from Bonanza up Eldorado and across the divide to Indian river.

$100,000 to Church.

Toledo, O., Nov. 14.—Rev. Fr. Wiezorek, priest at St. Hedgewick's Polish Catholic church in this city, whose funeral occurred yesterday morning, has bequeathed to the parish his entire fortune, amounting to nearly $100,000. It is composed largely of Toledo real estate. The deceased priest came from a noble family in Poland.

THE HOME LIGHT.

The light of home's a wondrous light,
So tender is its shining,
So soft it follows through the night,
Our weary road outlining.
Though lonely and for years we roam,
Far from the ones who love us,
Yet ever shines the light of home,
Like God's grace spread above us.

The light of home's a wondrous light,
Through life it follows, seeming,
Yet when with age the hair is white,
Clear in the front 'tis gleaming.
It shines from where our loved ones are.
Oh, this is love's divining!
And through the gates of heaven ajar
At last we see it shining!
—Ripley D. Saunders in St. Louis Republic.

THE PAINTER'S ANGEL ⁂

By
HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES.

The painter sat in his square studio with his head bowed in his hands. The four walls of the room had each a window, relieved by dingy curtains, and the floor was bare. The man's face was drawn and gaunt, and when he raised his head his eyes were very bright.

"These years!" he cried to the silence. "Four of them, day after day, week after week, always striving, always laboring to express the thought which is in my brain, always impotent because of poverty, always toiling through three days that on the fourth I may have models and materials for my great work! I feel the power within me, but I am helpless. Others around me succeed. I envy them, and my envy strangles the lovely thing which I try to paint, and its features grow ghastly and hateful to me. If I could only finish this one picture! But I cannot without hours of work with costly models and many days of application which I must spend in earning my bread. And the inspiration will not wait. It fades dimmer while I fight on. If it passes, I am lost."

He bowed his head in his hands again, and his shoulders moved as though with sobbing.

Just then a figure, white and shining, drifted down through the open skylight and stood beside him. The painter raised his head. He knew that the visitor was an angel, for he had seen angels in his dreams. He clasped his hands and knelt at the angel's feet, and the tears were still on his face.

The angel was looking at the canvas spread upon the easel. It was a jumble of huge forms, for the painter was to represent upon it a great allegory of humanity entitled "The Triumph of Life." "Why are you not at work?" the stranger asked. The painter stretched his arms wide with a despairing gesture. It was hopeless and helpless. It meant want, desire, poverty, agony, supplication, all blent into one.

The angel regarded him pitifully for a moment. "I have a master," he said, "in whose gallery are the models of all the greatest works of the world. Nothing is missing. I have come to give you his invitation to paint in it." The painter lifted his head eagerly. There was a question upon his face. "It is a wide gallery," the angel went on, "with four wings. In these wings have sat all the great artists of all times to do their labor. In it they have received their first inspirations from the great art ideal of which they were the interpreters. There Michael Angelo brought his rough stone to set free its angelic forms; there came Beethoven, its harmonies of form and of color hymning themselves to him in splendid music. Thither came Raphael to gaze upon the glorious hues and in the peace and beauty of its aisles to paint the delicate loveliness of the Christ child. In its alcoves sat Keats and Shelley, gazing till its various beauty rang from their souls into a full and fragile voice of song. There they framed those sweet harmonies which, unheard, were sweeter. All these men have learned in this great gallery. Today the masters sit in it working and striving to interpret and, in giving their all to the world, to show to those to whom admittance is forever denied, because they have not the souls to appreciate this art, a little portion of the enduring beauty of the collection."

"I have never heard of this gallery," said the painter.

"True," said the angel. "You have been too busy with this great painting." He touched the easel as he spoke.

The painter hung his head. "I am not fit," he said, "to sit with these great artists. I would better work longer here."

"Not so," said the angel gently. "You have the will to do. The candle is burning in your soul."

The painter's lips moved silently, but the angel understood him. "Take me with you to this gallery," he was saying.

The angel stepped to the western window of the room and flung it open wide. The painter came and stood beside him. "Can we see it from here?" said he. The angel nodded. "This is one of the four great wings of my master's gallery," he said. "Look!"

"The painter's gaze followed his. It was spring. A little soft wind was blowing. The starting grass in the garden below was a light, placid green. Just beyond was a peach tree in bloom, with darting bees about it. "There is nothing but pastels in this wing," said the angel, "the soft colors and clear tints which belong to an opaque medium." He reached out his hand and drew in a climbing rose that had reached to the casement. "Was anything more exquisite?" he said. Then, softly and carefully lest it should brush off its petals against the rough window ledge, he bent it back to its place against the gray wall.

"Close your eyes," the angel said. "I will show you the second wing." The painter felt himself led to the south window. "Now look," said his guide.

A strange change had come over the landscape in that short moment. A mellower flush softened the foliage of the trees and deepened the hues of the blossoms. The sky itself had a stronger and more vivid blue. "In this gallery," said the angel, "are nothing but oils. This is where Rosa Bonheur painted. Look across to the road and you will see the charging, white maned heroes of the 'Horse Fair' and hear their neighing. Playing there on the post road are the gamins of Marie Bashkirtseff. Here are all the landscapes that were ever spread on canvas. Today there are scenes of calm and quiet; tomorrow my Master will cloud his sky, bend his trees and whip his hedges with a great wind in order that those pupils who wish may have for model the gloom and the storm."

With a gesture the angel bade the painter close his eyes a second time and led him to the east window. When he opened them there had come another subtle change on the world without. The rich tints had disappeared; a subdued brown had rusted the hedgerows, and wisps of vagrant, motley leaves danced along the paths. The great trees were bare, and in the network which their stripped, complaining branches laced the wind made a somber singing.

"In this wing," said the angel, "are my Master's etchings. Here are silhouettes of forests against a steel sky. Here are stretches of barren seacoast with lonely dunes. Here are desolate country houses by bleak ways. Here are all the sad and sober shadows of the pencil."

Again the angel bade him close his eyes and flung the north window open. This time a further change, the greatest of all, appeared. The painter could scarce repress a cry of delight, for he was looking out upon a world of sculpture. Soft snow had marbled the dimpling surface of street and field and smoothed the harsh outlines into grace, stilling the sparkles of the distant river. It had turned the contours of the faraway hills in the curves of mountain maidens and giant warriors. It was as though some great white vision had come while the earth slept to touch all that was bare, all that was ugly, all that was without charm, and dream it into loveliness. The painter drew a long, deep breath and threw back his head with a peculiar gesture. There was a new light upon his face, at which the angel smiled. He seated himself and dropped his face into his hands. It was so great and marvelous!

When he looked up, the angel was gone. He started to his feet. The tears were wet upon his face. "A beautiful dream," he said. "A beautiful dream." He looked at the canvas spread upon the easel for a moment, smiling at it, but not bitterly. Then he went to the window and looked out upon the spring. The climbing rose was still there, a little redder, a little more sweetly perfumed, a little higher and stronger upon its stalk. He reached out a finger and drew it into the embrasure of the window. "It was a beautiful dream," he said.

But it was not a dream after all, for an hour later the door behind him opened very softly and the angel came in. He did not speak, but went close behind where the painter worked and looked over his shoulder. The great design of the "The Triumph of Life" was blotted out, and low down in the corner of the huge canvas a little spot of color was growing and taking shape.

He was painting the climbing rose.

Then the angel smiled to himself, passed out through the door noiselessly and was gone.—Atlanta Constitution.

The Great Deserts.

There was once a gentleman who spent a day in Verona, and it rained all that day. Five years afterward the gentleman spent another day in that fair city, and it rained all that day. And the gentleman afterward wrote a book and on the ground of his experiences asserted that it always rained in Verona. As with Verona so it has been with the deserts of the globe. The great Australian desert shrinks every year it is better known. On the presumed desert land of a lifetime ago the finest sheep in the world are now raised. The desert was mapped on hasty generalizations on insufficient samples.

So it was with the American deserts. So it is with the Asiatic deserts. So it is with the African deserts. Fifty years ago the map of the Sahara showed an unbroken stretch of sand. The map of today shows a tract of country with patches of sand, but diversified with hills and water courses, and even in places consisting of light, airy park land, with widespread grassy tracts interspersed with forest.—Exchange.

To Overcome Nausea.

A well known physician advances the theory that the distressing sensation of nausea has its seat in the brain and not in the stomach and that relief may be obtained by cooling the base of the brain. He claims to have tested this often and thoroughly in the case of sick headache, bilious colic, cholera morbus and other ills in which nausea is a distressing symptom without a single failure; also that he once relieved the nausea resulting from cancer of the stomach by the application of ice to the back of the neck and occipital bone. The ice is to be broken and the bits placed between the folds of a towel. Relief may be obtained by holding the head over a sink or tub and pouring a small stream of water on the neck. This is worth remembering as a relief for sick headache, to which so many are subject.—Rochester Advertiser.

Colored Swedes.

A little Swedish monthly magazine published in New York city requested its readers a short time ago to send in accounts of the experiences they had when they first arrived in this country. Here is the prize specimen: "In my unsophisticated days I once started out to call upon a girl I had known in the old country. I was told that she lived at Madison avenue and —— street. When I reached that corner, I was in doubt which house to try, but I finally went up the steps of one that faced on the avenue and rang the bell. A girl came to the door. 'Does Miss Nelson live here?' I asked as politely as I could.

"'I don't know any such person,' she answered, and I was turning away when she called after me, 'Is she white?'

"That irritated me. 'Did you ever know any Swedes who were colored?' I asked.

"'Well, I have seen some green Swedes,' was her retort, and I did not continue the conversation.

Trials of a Lecturer.

A well known English woman lecturer tells these stories at her own expense:

"I was," she says, "on a tour through the provinces, and one night as I appeared on the platform in a small town the chairman introduced me to my audience in the following way: 'You have heard of Mr. Gladstone, the Grand Old Man. Let me now introduce to you the grand old woman.' This was intended as a sincere compliment.

"On another occasion a bluff old farmer, who boasted of his ability to look on all sides of a question, announced me as follows: 'This lady's come here to talk about her rights,' he said. 'She's hired the hall, and so she's got a right to be here, and if any of you don't like what she's got to say you've got an equal right to walk out in the middle on't.'"

Dock Labor to Organize.

Toledo, O., Nov. 14.—Ben Tillett, a noted labor leader of England, will arrive in this country Nov. 20 as the authorized representative of the dock laborers and longshoremen of Europe. He will meet the executive committee of the International Longshoremen's association at Detroit, when it is expected that a complete amalgamation of the dock laborers and longshoremen of the world will be effected.

British Barristers' Wigs.

The wigs worn in English courts were formerly made of human hair, and it is on record that the white hair of a woman who lived to be 106 years old was sold for that purpose for £50. In 1827 the old form of powdered wig—which was somewhat of a nuisance because the powder came off and the hair frequently required recurling—was superseded by the horsehair wig.

Only about 100 of these legal ornaments are made annually. A good article will last for a quarter of a century, and, moreover, barristers do not altogether appreciate new wigs, as they suggest that the wearer is new to the business and consequently has not had much experience.

The cost varies from 1 to 12 guineas. The former price purchases an ordinary article, while the latter is the sum paid for what is known as a "full bottomed" wig, which is usually worn by the leading barristers on the occasion of a great trial. It is also the kind which adorns the head of the speaker of the house of commons.

Most of the horsehair is imported but the home product is the best and is that used in the costliest wigs.—London Standard.

Looking for the Murderer.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 14.—All efforts of the entire police and detective forces of this city to find a clew to the murderer or murderers of the two women whose dead bodies were found lying in ditches by the roadside in opposite directions from this city Tuesday have proved unavailing. Several suspects are under surveillance, but developments in the murders have not been sufficient to warrant the police in making arrests. While it is evident that both victims were killed about the same hour Tuesday night, it is still believed the women were slain by the same fiend.
